Unified Command to Include Canadians

Commonwealth Division Will Be Formed in Korea

Other Units Are British, Australian, N. Z., Indian

Ottawa, May 1 (CP) —Defence Minister Claxton today announced that Canada's 7,000-member 25th Brigade group will see action in Korea as part of a Commonwealth division to be established there under a United Kingdom commander.

The division, first of its kind will be known as the 1st (Commonwealth) Division, United Nations forces. It will be commanded by Maj.-Gen. A. J. H. Cassels, a seasoned officer formerly with the British Seaforth Highlanders.

Canadian ground troops will make up one-third of the fighting force, which likely will run to about 21,000 "men.

Will Simplify Command

Mr. Claxton said the move was taken after consultation among Commonwealth countries as a means of simplifying administration and command in that war theatre.

Some Canadian officers, he added, will get divisional staff appointments. He did not elaborate on this point.

However, it is expected without doubt that Brig. J. M. (Rocky) Rockingham, Canadian Brigade Commander, will continue to command his brigade.

The Commonwealth division, added Mr. Claxton, has been approved by the United Nations unified command.

Besides the 25th brigade, the division will include these other units: Royal Australian Regiment, the 16th Field Regiment, and the 60th Indian Field Ambulance Unit.

On Way To Korea

The bulk of the Canadian brigade now is on its way to Korea to join the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, which already has distinguished itself in Korea.

The division will use administration and maintenance facilities now under Australian, rather than Canadian command, Commonwealth officials said in Japan, Gen. Sir Horace Robertson.

"All Canadians, I am sure," said Mr. Claxton, "will be pleased that our 25th Brigade will be joined with formations with which the Princess Patricias have already distinguished themselves, all to form a unit in which the forces of Commonwealth countries will be fighting shoulder to shoulder to resist aggression in accordance with the aims of the United Nations."

Approves Plan

Tokyo — (CP)—Brig. Thomas Brodie commander of the 25th British Brigade, said tonight the announcement of a commonwealth division to serve in Korea is "a very good move indeed."

"I have no doubt," he said, provided the division is fully equipped and gets everything it wants it will be a great success.

"The idea is an excellent one and I feel that we will get along very well in the future as a big integrated force as we have in the past."

Brodie said he thinks that "as a division we will produce so much more than as separate brigades."

"However, I would emphasize that we should get everything necessary for a division."

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: May 1 (CP) —Synopsis: The first day of May finds a stagnant storm over the west central states. The anti-clockwise flow of air around this distant storm will continue to feed warm dry air into Ontario. The warm southerly flow coupled with the influence of the bright sunshine will produce temperatures well above seasonal values, thus providing an ideal day to crown the Queen in 1951.

New Chief Named For Mounties S. T. Wood Retires

Ottawa, May 1—(CP)—Canada's world-famous R.C.M.P. got a new chief today.

L. H. Nicholson, 46, director of criminal investigations since 1946, took over as commissioner from S. T. Wood, 61, retiring at his own request after commanding the force since 1938.

Appointment of the new chief, a native of Mount Middleton, N.B., was announced to the Commons yesterday by Justice Minister Garson, who also made known other personnel shifts and a reorganization of the R.C.M.P.'s administration and organization branch.

The enlarged branch, which has been given additional duties, is to be headed by Assistant Commissioner Joseph Brunet, 49, now in command of "C" division with headquarters at Montreal.

Commissioner Nicholson's old job as chief of criminal investigation goes to Superintendent M. F. E. Anthony, 49, officer commanding in Toronto.

Assistant Commissioner Brunet is to be inspected at Montreal by Superintendent Noel Courtois, 53 and a native of Montreal, who now is at Edmonton.

Superintendent Joseph Howe, 52, now at Halifax, will take Superintendent Anthony's place at Toronto.

Started as Constable

The new commissioner, who started as a constable in the Mounties in New Brunswick 28 years ago, has served since then in the now-disbanded New Brunswick and Nova Scotia provincial police forces and in the Canadian army.

He was an inspector in Nova Scotia police when it was absorbed by the R.C.M.P. in 1932, and he rejoined the force with the watchful same rank. During the Second World War, he served overseas with the Provost corps, emerging in 1946 as a colonel. Since then, he has headed the C.I.B. here.

Retiring Commissioner Wood, born in Napanee, Ont., has been 38½ years with the force. His father was an assistant commissioner, and one of his sons, John, is with the R.C.M.P.

WORKERS ON BOTH SIDES RED FENCE STAGE PARADES

Govts. Everywhere Guard Against Violence

London, May 1—(AP)—Workers on both sides of the communist fence today staged May Day parades for peace. And in Korea, United Nations forces continued their desperate fight against communist-China's legions.

Peaceways the slogan of the day throughout the world, but governments clamped down on any threat against violence as communists and non-communists prepared to hold traditional rallies and marches.

In Korea, allied commanders said their guns and planes had halted the red big to seize the southern capital of Seoul as a May Day trophy.

In Moscow, Generalissimo Stalin appeared atop Lenin's tomb to view what was expected to be the biggest show of the day and the one where trouble was least likely.

As Russian military might paraded past red square and thousands of citizens waved banners calling for peace, the Soviet leader's son, Lt.-Gen. Vassili Stalin, led his new flight of "hundreds of planes," including jet formations, Moscow radio said.

Similar parades were planned in Soviet satellite states, featuring displays by tanks of Stalin and jibes against the "war-mongering west."

Editor's Note: Until today, censorship withheld the story of how the United States 1st Marine Division and the 27th Commonwealth Brigade held firm on the edge of a Chinese red break-through April 22. That stand possibly averted disaster for the United Nations.

By JIM BECKER

With United States Marines in Korea, May 1. (AP)—The war on the central front was going too well Sunday, April 22.

A briefing officer at the 1st Marine Division gestured at the war map. He pointed to the arc northwest of the Hwachon Reservoir and said:

"The Chinaman will have to stop us before we get to that high ground or he'll be through in this sector."

At 8 p.m. the Chinese proved they weren't through yet.

The first blow of their counteroffensive on the central front was hurled at the lines of a South Korean division on the left flank of the Marines.

Four Chinese corps—about 140,000 men—were slashed at a republic of Korea division.

Division Collapsed

The entire division collapsed. The Chinese poured thousands of men through the "breakthrough corridor" and ripped into U.S. and South Korean Marines on the right flank.

The South Korean Marines near Hwachon dam gave way through-out Sunday night and Monday. The U.S. Marines budged not an inch.

By Monday noon it was obvious the Marines would have to pull back to cover the hole on their left flank. The red tide had rolled 15 miles south along a 10-mile front, and it was fanning east and west.

Reds Continue Charge

Late Monday night, the 27th Commonwealth brigade, which included Canadian, Australian, and New Zealand units, was placed squarely in the path of the reds.

Monday morning, the reds and the 27th closed in combat. Pressure on the Marines had eased considerably. The reds poured artillery and mortars into the Commonwealth troops.

Grim-faced staff officers watched the progress of the red drive. If the Commonwealth forces were unable to halt the Chinese, it was almost certain that the Marine division would be surrounded and cut off from the western half of the United Nations front.

But the 27th stood their ground and stopped the reds. They threw back wave after wave but never fell back a backward step.

The first Chinese blow had been halted.

Tuesday, the Marines and the 27th Brigade counter-attacked, drew to defence positions on a line in the west.

The reds were in no hurry to follow them.

HOUSE REJECTS NON-CONFIDENCE PC MOTION 100-50

Completes Long Debate On the Cost of Living

Ottawa, May 1 — (CP)— The Commons completed a long debate on the cost of living last night by declining, in effect, that it could do nothing about it.

That was the end result of a vote of 100 to 50 against a progressive Conservative motion urging the government immediately to consider the adoption of measures to hold down the rising living costs and halt inflation.

The Chamber rejected the motion, introduced more than a week ago and the basis of intermittent debate, after Finance Minister Abbott said that neither he nor the government alone could defeat world-wide inflation.

But he did say that one of the greatest reasons for inflation is that "every highly - organized pressure group" in the country is trying to make sure it will not be affected by high prices.

"At every time you step up," he suggested, "highly - organized groups seek higher wages or higher prices if they are simply added fuel to the flames."

Progressives Conservative

Progressive Conservative speaker—Maj.-Gen. G.R. Pearkes, V. C. (PC — Nanaimo) — said he felt the Commons "should have acted at fault — they are more concerned about the cost of "high living" than they are about the high cost of living. There would have to be more of the old-time virtues of thrift and saving.

Gunshot Wounds Cause Deaths Of Ludgate Man, Wife

Police Believe Husband May Have Been Shot by Wife

Ludgate, Ont., May 1. (CP)— A young married couple was found dead from gunshot wounds last night in a two-room dwelling in this tiny Northern Ontario community 56 miles north of Parry Sound.

One theory attributes the death of Patrick James Newton, 26, and his attractive 23-year-old wife, Noreen, to murder and suicide. Provincial police have launched an investigation.

Newton had worked since 1948 as a Canadian National Railways section hand in this bush country district five miles south of the Pickerel River. Both he and his wife were born and raised in the area and Mrs. Newton went to school at nearby Pakesley.

Discovered by Foreman

The bodies were discovered by Richard Bergeron, Newton's section foreman on the C.N.R.'s Toronto-Winnipeg line.

Newton had not reported for work Monday.

Bergeron said he saw Judy Ann Newton, 2 1-2 playing alone in a newborn on the Key River in front of the Newton home. She was paddling the boat with her hands.

Thinking the child might topple into the water, Bergeron lifted her up and carried her to her home. He found the front door of the little frame cottage locked, but the back door was ajar. He pushed the door open and saw the bodies.

Had Been Sleeping

Newton, in underclothing, lay on a couch, the lower part of his body covered with a blanket. Mrs. Newton had been sleeping when a shotgun blast struck him in the head. Asleep beside him on the couch was his four-year-old son, Orville.

The woman, fully clothed, was slumped beside the stove. She lay on her face with the butt of a shotgun shot gun beneath her head and at right angles to the body.

Police said preliminary investigations indicate no one who heard the shot fired.

Newton worked at Mowat, about two miles south of here, but made his home in Ludgate. Wife is the only neighbors said Mrs. Newton had been in ill health for some time. Her informants said she went to a police theory that she shot her husband and then turned the gun on herself.

Gerald Wright, superintendent of the Burwash Industrial Farm, near Sudbury, and one of the first officials on the scene, said the "circumstantial evidence" was "beautiful shape inside". He added that Mrs. Newton "kept a tidy place."

Inspector Don Nicol of the Criminal Investigation branch was sent from Provincial Police headquarters in Toronto, to assist in the investigation. Officers from Parry Sound sped to the scene.

OUTLAW POKER

Sacramento, Calif., May 1.— (AP)—The State Assembly voted 61 to 9 yesterday to outlaw draw poker in California.

Prime Minister, Mrs. St. Laurent In New Quarters

Ottawa, May 1 — (CP) — The prime minister and his lady take up housekeeping in new quarters today.

After nearly 10 years of apartment life in the capital, Prime Minister and Mrs. St. Laurent formally take residence in a sun-splashed dignified mansion overlooking the storied Ottawa River and the Gatineau Hills in the blue distance.

In status, No. 24 Sussex Street will be comparable to London's 10 Downing Street and Washington's White House. Occupied by the state, it will be the official home of the Prime Minister, regardless of party, and the place where he will receive and entertain visitors from abroad.

Bought by Government

Once the home of an Ottawa Valley lumber king, it was bought by the government and completely renovated in an official residence at a cost of approximately $500,000. At his own request, Mr. St. Laurent will contribute $5,000 a year towards upkeep.

The residence contains a spacious drawing room, an equally-large dining hall and commodious library. There are 14 main rooms, including guest bedrooms, in the main section of the house and five staff bedrooms as well as staff sitting room, kitchens and stock and other rooms.

The grounds, now in the process of landscaping, feature maples, oaks and other trees native to Canada. Flowers, shrubs about the house are tended by government workmen.

The prime minister may take possession today, Mr. and Mrs. St. Laurent moved into their new home with the exception of their apartment. Easter this month, they will receive members of parliament and the parliamentary press gallery in a formal housewarming.

Air Force Officer Was too Familiar

Didsforth, England, May 1— (AP)—Flt. Lt. Robert Esliek went on trial Monday before a Royal Air Force court martial on charges of undue familiarity prejudicial to discipline. The pretty members of the WAAF (Women's Auxiliary Air Force) testified he had written letters to his command by forcing them to look down the front of their skirts, and rubber-stamping his unit's name on their bare midriffs.

Salvage Tugs Give up Hunt For End of Tanker

Halifax, May 1 — (CP) — Salvage tugs have given up the hunt for the elusive bow end of an oil tanker, which will have safe rendezvous for a submarine early last week.

The tugs Traverse and Foundation Josephine went out to search the 175-foot bow section the Esso Rochester last week after fishermen in the eastern Prince Edward Island area reported the Naufrage reported an unidentified submarine off the coast.

Similar intelligence officer said he was satisfied the reported unidentified craft was the wandering tanker section.

The Esso Rochester broke in two in the Gulf of St. Lawrence during a gale last November. Sailors were lost the bow section in a second storm and since then several searchers have failed to find it. The stern was towed safely to Halifax and now is in the United States, having a new bow built.

Crime Probers Name O'Dwyer As Contributor to N. Y. Crime

By JOHN CHADWICK

Washington, May 1 — (AP) — Senate crime investigators today accused Ambassador William O'Dwyer of contributing to the growth of organized crime in New York, where, they said, gangsterdorwich kingpin Frank Costello is a power in Democratic politics.

O'Dwyer was New York mayor from 1946 until last fall when President Truman appointed him Ambassador to Mexico.

Referring to O'Dwyer's tenure as Brooklyn district attorney of Brooklyn, the crime committee had this to say in a hard-hitting report to Congress — long probe of gangsterism:

"Neither the then his appointees took any effective action against the top echelons of the gambling, narcotics, waterfront, murder or bookmaking rackets. In fact, his actions impeded promising investigations of such rackets."

The crime probers, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) also said O'Dwyer had named to high public office friends of Costello and Joe Adonis, another big - time racketeer and gambler.

And after a lengthy detailing of Costello's alleged political manipulations, the committee summed up in these words:

"It is apparent to the committee that despite Costello's protestations, his sinister influence is still strong in the councils of the Democratic party organization of New York County."

The report also asked congress to "take such steps as may be necessary" to curb the underworld's grip on state and local officials.

The committee also recommended that a federal crime commission, and suggested action by state and local governments to curb the evil underworld operations.

The committee said " the most shocking revelations" of its country-wide probe, authorized by the senate, were the extent of official corruption and connivance in facilitating and promoting organized crime."

The senators said they found the information and connivance at all levels of government—federal, state and local.

One of the major conclusions was this:

"Specific known arrest records and well-documented criminal reputations, the leading hoodlums in the country enjoy, for the most part, immune from persecution and punishment by local officials, underlings of their gangs may on occasion be persecuted and punished.

This quasi-immunity . . . can be ascribed to what is popularly known as the 'fix.'"

ALLOCATE WHEAT

Washington, May 1. (AP)—The United States yesterday allocated 200,000,000 bushels of wheat and coarse grain for export during June. This brought total export allocations for the March-May period to about 200,000,000 bushels.

WENT BACK TO PERCHES

Providence, R.I., May 1 (AP)— The Chamber of Commerce last night shot 1,500 rounds of Roman-candle fire at 8,000 starlings on a downtown building in an evening-long "battle." The birds swarms from the building and wheeled around the sky, bewildered by the celebration. After the firing, the starlings swarmed back to their perches.

Statistical Report Shows Britain Becoming Nation of Older Persons

London, May 1 (AP) —Anybody can prove most anything about Britain by citing newly-published figures of the central statistical office.

Any Briton, or anybody else, who wants to spend 17 shillings six pence ($2.45) can buy a 312-page volume with all the facts among other things, the barrels of beer consumed, the number of meals served in restaurants and the fertility of British womanhood.

There were 27,000,000 bulk barrels of beer consumed in Britain in 1949 (the last year covered by the report); 231,100,000 restaurant meals were served that year and there were 69.9 live births per 1,000 women in 1949, compared with 53.6 live births in 1939.

The report shows how Britain is becoming a nation of older persons. In 1949 there were three times as many persons over 65 than in 1871. The 1949 figure was 5,351,000 compared to 1,344,000. The total between those years increased 85 percent, with 50,000,000 population estimated as of mid-1949.

Another table showed that the number of persons seeking divorce in 1949, was the lowest since 1945-but that 1949 figure was three times greater than in 1938. From 1938 till 1948, adultery was most frequently given as the reason for divorce. In 1949, desertion moved into first place.

The total working population remained around the 23,000,000 mark between 1948 and 1950. In 1938 it was 19,473,000. There were three times more men than women working in 1938, but only about twice as many last year.

More than 1,000,000 persons were registered as unemployed in 1938. This figure was 714,000 in 1949.

Family Smuggles Sick Private Out of Army

Chicago, May 1—(AP)— Stanley Amborski, 21, a sick army private whose family smuggled him out of an army camp because he said he was not receiving proper medical attention was described today as is serious condition.

Amborski was brought 450 miles to Chicago by his family from Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Sunday. The father, John Amborski, said the boy had received two letters from Stanley complaining that he was ill and unable to get proper medical attention at the camp.

The camp commander, Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr., said records there showed the soldier had been treated by medical officers four different days between April 13 and 27.

Amborski said the second letter from his son said: "Get me out Dad, I'm going to fall down."

Upon arrival home, Amborski called in the family physician who said the soldier was suffering from peritonitis. But at Naval Training Hospital, he was diagnosed as double pneumonia. Sturgis said that Amborski is absent without leave. His case is being thoroughly investigated."

Scientist Says Timid Rabbit Tops Man in Handling Some Situations

Cleveland, May 1 (AP) —The timid rabbit tops man in handling some "alarming" situations, Dartmouth College scientist said today.

There's no denying that Peter Cottontail is a scary-scary, but in the face of danger he sometimes looks the situation over and acts accordingly, he said in an address at the American Dental Society's annual meeting here.

The rabbit would just let what he does.

His heart beats fast, the flow of blood through his muscles increases, he breathes is deep, but the rabbit, said Forster, sometimes reaches a temporary "quiescent state" in which various bodily processes, including breathing, are conserved.

In human situations, he said in an office or at the American Dental Society's annual meeting here, the rabbit would just sit still.

Council Approves Purchase Of Property on John St. By Board of Education

Approval of city council for purchase by the local board of education of the two properties immediately south of the Belleville Collegiate was granted at the regular meetings of the council Monday afternoon.

Two readings were given to a by-law to provide the board with $18,000 to purchase the property and the by-law will be forwarded to the municipal board for approval. The board of education requires the two properties to enlarge the collegiate grounds in case an addition to the school is planned.

Members of the Belleville board of education along with representatives of the South Hastings High School Board, waited the council with respect to the formation of the proposed Bay of Quinte District High School area.

Desire Amalgamation

Chairman of the Board, Arnold C. Campbell told council that the board had met with a committee of the South Hastings High School Board since the announcement of the proposed district but they desired amalgamation with the local board for high school purposes, and had agreed on a recommendation to be forwarded to council.

A letter from E. M. Dafoe, secretary-treasurer of the South Hastings High School District was read confirming the decision to seek amalgamation with the city.

In reading the recommendation of a combined committee representing the high school district and the local board of education, Mr. F. A. Kells noted that the rural district now favor amalgamation with the city with the addition of the school. To continue as at present. The rural area was not at all interested in purchasing education under a long term agreement, it was stated.

Cost Provided in Act

Costs of financing a high school district including a city is provided for in the High Schools Act and would be charged against the municipalities in accordance with their assessments.

Membership in an Area Board would be entirely appointed. In the proposed Bay of Quinte district Belleville city council would appoint six members with two retiring each year. The Belleville board of education would appoint one member and the Belleville Separate School one member, making a total of eight for the city.

Thurlow would have two members, this number to be raised to three, when the population reached 6,000. Trenidinaga, Ameliasburg and Hastings County, would also have one member each. If at any time Sidney and Frankford came into the district, this would alter the representation.

Construction of an annex or addition to the present collegiate was favored to provide additional high school accommodation.

Signed by Committee

The committee signing the recommendation to council were Reeve Bill Sidney, Arthur Barker and Brooks Allen from the rural area, and Arnold Campbell and George Wishart of the local boards of education.

City councillors asked a few pointed questions in respect to assessment, pointing out that the city assessment is mostly greater than that of the rural area which would contribute to the high school district and therefore would cost the city more money.

Depends on Assessment

Mr. Kells admitted that if the city assessment rose more rapidly as compared to that in the rural area, the city would be called upon to pay more money.

Mr. Roy Sills, as chairman of the South Hastings district, explained why his people were not agreeable to purchasing education from the city on a long-term agreement.

"Our people feel they do not want to tie themselves up for 20 years and have no say in the education of the school," he said, "if it was for a short term, or on a year to year basis then many more would have been agreeable to continue purchasing education."

Council took no action on the recommendation for formation of the high school district but laid the matter over until the next meeting.

If the South Hastings High School Area were formed now it would not come into operation until January, 1952.

Planning Committee to Attend Meeting Conservation Authority

Members of the city planning committee along with council representatives will attend a special meeting of the Moira Valley Conservation Authority to be held at Foxboro on May 9th.

Decision to have city representatives attend the meeting was made at council Monday afternoon following receipt of a communication from Col. R. Vanderwater, Authority secretary, asking whether the city intended to maintain an active interest in conservation projects, which might be undertaken.

Alderman Rollins, as council representative to the Conservation Authority membership, said he was humiliated on every occasion that he attended meetings due to the fact that council had not shown active interest. He said the city should decide now on what part it would take in future plans.

Purchase Considered

The alderman noted that purchase of property in Hungerford township was being considered for reforestation purposes; also a dam north of College Street was recommended to control river flooding in the city. Tweed and Hungerford council had voted to survey to determine the cost of constructing two dams to control the level of Stoco Lake.

Mayor Potter said he could not see how the city, with its present program of expenditures, could take any definite action on the proposed College Street dam. This view was also taken by Alderman Rollins.

Alderman Lummiss noted the question before council was whether or not the city remained in as a member of the Conservation Authority. He felt the city should remain a member.

"This conservation is dear to my heart," he said. "Without conservation neither the city nor the country can last. If there is no forest there are no farms."

It was decided that the planning committee and along with council representatives would attend the May 9th. meeting of the Authority and then report to council their recommendation as to the action to be taken.

New Concrete Base May be Necessary On Bridge St. W.

Possibility that a new concrete base may have to be laid on West Bridge Street and on Dundas and Ave. before the proposed new asphalt paving is put down, was discussed yesterday in city council.

Alderman Don Thomas, public works chairman, told council that tests by the engineering department showed that the base on the two streets due for repaving had all but disappeared. He said that unless there was a solid base on which to lay the asphalt patching would be necessary before many years had elapsed.

A communication from the H. H. McFarland Construction Co. was read confirming that Mr. McFarland would undertake to repave Bridge St. West for the same tender price, which had been agreed on last autumn. A condition of the offer, however, was that the work would have to be done within the next two or three weeks before equipment was moved out of the district.

Will Test Further

Every effort will be made by council to get the work underway as soon as possible. Further testing will be done to determine if a new concrete base is necessary.

The public works department and finance committees were given authority to call for tenders for the concrete base if the work is deemed advisable and if approval of the Highways Department was received.

To a question by one of the aldermen council was informed by Alderman A. M. Haig that on highway routes through the city the highways department paid a share of approved costs while the balance is charged against the general rate.

Commercial Fishing Better Than Average

Commercial fishing in this part of the Bay of Quinte and Lake Ontario has been better than average, and the cold conditions probably above that of last year, according to Herbert McCabe proprietor of the Bay of Quinte Fisheries.

Reaching almost unprecedented heights, prices of white fish and trout climbed to $1.10 the pound during the season. Pickerel, however priced at 90 cents the pound would be the same as last year, but dropped to the present price of 35 cents. Whitefish and trout prices have also noted a substantial decrease.

Mr. McCabe shipped approximately 1,700 fifty and one-hundred pound boxes of fish during the month of April, a noticeable increase over the same month last year.

The pickerel yield was well above that of last year as was the mudcat production.

Butter Output Drops 17 P. C. During March

Toronto, May 1 (CP) —Ontario residents bought more fluid milk, chocolate dairy drink and cultured milk in February than during the same month a year ago.

The provincial agricultural department said Monday in its monthly dairy report that wholesale and retail sales of fluid milk totalled 34,013,100 quarts last February at an average price of 19.3 cents a quart. This compared with the February, 1950, sales of 33,547,000 quarts at 18 cents.

Chocolate dairy drink sales totalled 947,200 quarts, compared with 603,500 quarts and cultured milk sales amounted to 874,000 quarts, as against 819,700.

During March, however, the output of butter dropped 17 per cent to 3,793,500 pounds, compared with production in March, 1950.

Cache of Turtle Eggs Found

Nature is never at a loss. When she lacks one thing, she makes use of another. So thought mother terrapin, more uncommonly known as the "Kinosternidae" or land variety, found near sluggish streams and ponds. For when sand was not available, the next best suggestion for her snowy-white eggs, though more pungent was a well-rotted manure hill.

Last week, a resident along the front road, while getting some of the byproduct of hay and oats for a flower bed, came across a cache of turtle eggs, smugly deposited for incubation in this warm, but spicy medium.

The eggs, which are round, and about the size of a large glass alley, were carefully put into a wooden box containing the bi-product, and replaced in the manure hill to await further developments.

As the situation is close to a winding stream, it will require most careful vigilance to watch the little turtles come forth from their warm nest and slowly, but surely make their way to the stream, where Nature never disappoints, has so bountifully provided for their immediate needs.

'Showboat Days' All Set for Stage Presentation

The stage is all set; the rehearsals are all but over, and on Wednesday the show goes on!

The final rehearsal for the Kinsmen show "Showboat Days," is being staged this evening and Wednesday evening the curtain on the period musical of the old south, will go up at the collegiate auditorium. The show will run for three nights, May 2-3-4.

Every bit of talent for the singing and dancing musical is local. Rehearsals started little more than three weeks ago and have continued nightly under the direction of George Zarfas, well-known amateur stage director from Hamilton.

Well over 100 persons will appear on the cast of the show, and even those participating have been surprised at the quality of the local talent. Included in the show is a "darkie" vocal chorus made up of Kinsmen members; three chorus lines of local girls and vocal numbers by the local barbershop singers.

After weekend rehearsals Mr. Zarfas predicted that "Showboat Days" would be the best show of its kind ever to be presented in the city.

Demand for tickets for the three nights of the show has been keen, but there still are a number of good seats left. They can be procured at Bill Cook's Cigar Store on Front St.

HEAD FOR WAINWRIGHT

Ottawa, May 1 (CP) — The last Canadians will move out of Fort Lewis, Wash., within the next two weeks and head for Wainwright, Alta., the army said Monday. They will train as replacements for Korea.

The army said Wainwright will be the training base this summer not only for this remainder of the special force but also for three regular army units.

Plans for Sewage Disposal Plant to Include Extensions Of City Beyond Present Limits

When final plans are drafted for the proposed sewage disposal plant and its network of sewers they will take into consideration the additional load should the city's boundaries be extended beyond the present limits.

The actual planning will be within the city as of its present boundaries, but sewers and plant equipment will be such to take care of much larger area and considerably increased population.

For the purpose of preparing plans for a sewage area it was recommended that an area west to the O.S.D. lane, north to a point approximately 2,700 feet north of Harmony Road and east to the easterly limit of lot 22 in the 1st and 2nd concession of Thurlow township and south to the Bay of Quinte be considered.

No Thought of Annexing

Alderman Hyde said he was opposed to any action being taken in, but Mayor R. T. Potter pointed out the area was no thought of annexing this area or even in five or ten years time.

"All we want is for sewers in the existing area to be able to take care of any extension," he said.

Alderman Rollins pointed to the advantages of long term planning. Where Alderman Lemmins also urged that nothing be done now which would have to be undone later on. The same was true for Alderman Thomas.

The firm of Gore and Storrie, consulting engineers, will complete the plans for the sewage area at a cost not exceeding $2,000.

On a recorded vote Mayor Potter and Aldermen Argue, Clarke, Duffy, Haig, Lattimer, Lummiss, Porter, Rollins, Thomas and Tice, approved of the recommendation, while Aldermen Countryman and Hyde opposed.

Will Install Pumps

The city will go into the gasoline business to the extent of installing pumps for its own vehicles, it was decided—but not before a rather spirited discussion on the matter.

When the recommendation came up Alderman Countryman declared it was time the city took Council turned down the request of J. J. Trudeau for a quit claim deed for certain river bed property opposite his Station Street place of business, and also turned down the offer of Mrs. Lawrence Bauer for river bed property. The fire chief and one fireman will attend a civil defence course at Toronto at a cost not exceeding $100. G. Fortyce will be hired as switchboard operator at the firehall at a salary of $100 per month.

Authorize Plans

City Engineer Charles Mott was authorized to prepare plans and specifications for locating the city rest rooms in the northwest corner of the city hall basement.

Where there is near unanimous opposition to replacement of sidewalks, the city will, not undertake to do the work, it was noted in council. Alderman Thomas said it was policy to replace all the sidewalk in sections where there were numerous and extensive repairs to be made, but where there was strong opposition on the part of ratepayers the city would not carry out the work.

Council Made No Promise

Under Inquiries Alderman Countryman sought to seek information as to whether the city would refund Queen Street residents the cost of street lights done last year. The aldermen said he had been informed by resident that this was promised by last year's mayor.

Mayor Potter said the last year's council had made no such promise.

The question of spraying marshes to control the mosquito menace was brought up by Alderman Countryman. He was told that the Board of Health looked after the matter.

EARLY MENTAL TREATMENT IS NEEDED

Early treatment for mental disorders in the province is urged here last week by Dr. MacKinnon Phillips, Minister of Health for Ontario. The urgency of Dr. Phillips' statement is expressed in the number of persons in mental hospitals in the province at the present time. More than 9,000 are housed in the Ontario institutions, and there is waiting list of more than 3,000.

Of that total, 17 per cent, or almost 3,000 people, are mental defectives, but are in the institutions because their age. These people, over 65, often have no other place to go but into a mental institution when their span of life starts to run out. In actual fact, there is no need for them to be in a hospital for while they are definitely not at a mental peak, neither are they defective. Forgetful, perhaps, but not defective. Dr. Phillips laid their presence in the institutions to the economic status the younger generation today. He claimed that many people find themselves in an economic circle trying to keep their own standard of living at a decent height, and must look after their elders. It is a sad thing to admit, true.

Of the remaining 14,110, 48 per cent of the total, or 6,800, are schisophrenics. Schisophrenia has become more and more popular a term during the past two decades. Simply, it means that there are more than 8,000 persons in the province suffering from a split personality disease, complete with hallucinations and delusions.

Seventy-five per cent of the schisophrenics, according to the estimation of the Minister of Health, are admitted to the institutions in the United States and Canada, could be cured while still in the teenage stages. That means that accommodation for 6,120 schisophrenics would never have to be provided. Hence, if proper care could be given older cases in centres other than mental institutions, and early treatment available for young near-schisophrenics, more than 9,000 persons would not be in mental institutions today.

Nine thousand persons more than make up half the people now confined to mental institutions, and when it is considered that the Ontario government spends more than 4 million each year on maintenance for the mental hospitals, the problem reaches alarming proportions.

One of the concrete moves made by the provincial Department of Health has been the establishment of a pilot plan in St. Catharines, where treatment for persons showing schisophrenic signs will be available early in life. It is designed neither as a quick cure for the situation, nor for immediate relief for overcrowded hospitals, but as a research project to determine the value of early treatment. If it proves worthy, community psychiatry may be extended throughout the province in an effort to cut down on schisophrenia.

From a purely economic standpoint, the pilot plan has much merit. From the point of the welfare of the people of Ontario, it has a great deal more.

RURAL MAILBOXES

At least one man in Hastings county has drawn our attention to the state of rural mailboxes in the surrounding district. In that area, the letter boxes are not considered to be in prime shape, and the Windsor Star has this to say about them:

"Kent County Junior Farmers Association will be doing the county a favor, and perform a public service, if it takes on the job of the 5,500 rural mailboxes contain the names in one-inch high letters.

"When one is visiting a farm, on business or pleasure, the first thing one looks for is the mailbox, unless there is a conspicuous sign on the farm itself. For it serves as identification, with the name of the owner transcribed on it. It serves poorly, however, if the letters be small, or partially obliterated by the weather.

"Often these identifying marks do it than that. If the mailbox, and the post to which it is attached, are well-painted, straight and neat, it suggests the farmer has pride in his farm. A decrepit looking mailbox, sagging from its post, is a poor advertisement indeed.

"If the Junior Farmers Association achieves its objective, and it is in the interests of all farmers to co-operate, it will enhance the appearance of the roadways and the entire county. Kent is one of the richest farmland areas in Canada, and well-kept mailboxes will be an indication of that fact. It is an example we would like to see followed in all other Ontario counties."

Hastings county should take a back seat to no other in pride of neatness and accomplishment, and perhaps such a move here is in order. As the Star says, the mailbox may well be a badge of honor, and the better it looks, the better the impression gained.

GLAMOROUS MAY

In she comes, the Mistress May,
Young and beautiful and gay;
Greeted with exquisite song,
Robins dancing at her feet,
Smiling, as she trips along.
World, I'll tell you, she is here!

Name your glamor girl I'll say,
None is lovelier than May,
Every apple blossom spray
Fragrance makes the breath of May.

And in crowds the tulips push,
Her arrival to behold.
Glamor girl that you are found
Fay!
She has charms, but more has
May.

Yes, my hair is silvered now.
Deeply time has lined my brow.
Still at beauty I can stare, Notwithstanding all the years,
And the joy of it can share
Wherescever it appears.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
May 1st., 1931

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Morton of Stirling celebrated the 53rd. anniversary of their wedding yesterday. The event was spent quietly and Mr. and Mrs. Morton received congratulations and expressions of good wishes from many friends.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

When we read of prominent and distinguished Americans attempting to organize a large-scale exodus of population from England and Scotland to the four different countries of the commonwealth, on the ground that these fabulous isles are now too vulnerable in the mounting disorder of world affairs, we get a sudden lump in the throat. It is a plight that involves us all. Yet we shy off from the very thought of it.

Those of us of Anglo-Saxon origin who have been several generations in Canada extract a little comfort from the thought that this new land of ours is the desperate occasions in the past century and a half which forced large migrations upon the British people They were generally economic or political, and had to do with war.

But it is wise to remember also the little causes which needled thousands of our ancestors into coming hither. The little causes had to do with a thing called freedom.

As late of 1810 and 1820, in many parts of the United Kingdom, a child on reaching the age of nine, whose parents, in the opinion of the churchwardens and the overseers of his parish, were unable to maintain it, could be apprenticed to a farmer until it reached the age of 21. Neither the parents nor children were consulted. What a way to solve the cheap labor problem! The abuses must have prevailed! The English quarterly, The Countryman, has a brief but documented article on this "apprenticeship in husbandry", which must have sent thousands of its readers scurrying back through history, or even into the novels of Charles Dickens, to refresh the memories of those days and those unfortunates who contributed heavily to the building of Canada.

Not fear, but anger, rebellion of heart and soul, and a fairly brave determination to be free, and find a new and better world to be free, were among the motives that filled the ships a hundred or more years ago.

It would be a valuable spirit to conserve among us, if we can find out how.

THE LATCH ON OUR SIDE

Very often as we pray, our prayers seem barren, little more than the mumbling over of a set of words. All, other than one minute of earnest prayer will raise us no higher in realization. Why this tremendous swing between the mood of despair and the mood of ecstasy?

Sometimes the reason is physical. We are tired or dizzy or in some way because the chemical instrument we call the body is out of order. Then we go into the quiet place of prayer. We ask ourselves why God should do anything for us, and if we examine our own unworthiness we are pretty certain that God will not grant our requests. But we begin to remember that God's gifts to us are not on the basis of our worth but on the basis of His love. We do not have to be worthy to receive—all we need is to be sincere, both in repentance for evil done and determination to do better.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

A BATTLE LOOMS

It isn't too soon for us to begin buckling on our armor, girding our loins and otherwise fatalistically preparing ourselves for The Battle of Television. We are going to lose it, of course, but we might as well go down fighting.

Editorial writers across Canada are chafing at the delay of the CBC in releasing the monster on a nationwide basis, many border cities are getting the hooliag product from the United States (its most common experience failing to looking at Mark Sennett comedies through a Manitoba blizzard) and it is now only a question of time before there's a little action. Serie is every Canadian living room.

This impending cataclysm is being awaited with surprising calm by most Canadians. Seems as yet no real awareness but video, with the single exception of the harnessmaking of the stout, which have a most profound effect on our generation than any other technological gimmick.

When TV was in its infancy it was the fashion to think of it as a novelty like the long or lip saw puzzles. When the novelty wore off, so the experts said, it would be able to take it or leave it alone. That prophecy has yet to come true. In the years since in America today television set owners spend more time staring at that hypnotic square than they spend with any other medium of entertainment, including sleeping.

A typical survey, made in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, showed the average viewer spends three hours a day crouched in a video stupor. In the course of a year.

It was freely predicted, too, that TV would be a growing force for entertainment. On that score, too, the gamers were right. Compare the potent critics of TV in the States agree that Video is years away from living up to its promise as an entertainment medium. Nothing or its responsibilities and probably never will as long as it remains a big advertising man's toy.

What we have to expect, then, is an influence on our lives far greater than any other means of communication and one that is to say little more than a frivolous time-waster. We have to be prepared for it, therefore, to give it a lout who will occupy our attention more and more.

For the Kiddies

The critics of TV range from the mild (Stuart Griffin) who started it off by saying, "You just see girls jumping up and down" to the extreme Sir Cedric Hardwicke has said that he prefers the atom bomb to TV set because "it is better to be killed in an explosion than to have the human mind deteriorating in the home."

Nearly everyone in the States, with the exception of those who make a buck from the business, is agreed that television is dangerous on children—or "televix-kidz"—is staggering and almost completely evil.

A high school down in Stamford, Connecticut made a survey and found that half of its students had television set in their home. Over 20 per cent had insufficient outdoor exercise. Home work was in the first casualty.

All this would be excusable if television were giving junior something worthwhile. It isn't. The children's shows are 90 percent garbage with a heavy accent on crime. In a single week the Southern California Association of Radio and Television counted 91 murders, plus assorted kidnappings, suicides, homicidal explosions, assaults, arson, burglaries and jailbreaks.

Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, president of Boston University, has said, "If the television craze continues with the present level of programs, we are destined to have a nation of morons." And this is what the editorial writers insist we must have immediately!

The Television Battle in this country could be won by public over-night. It is losing it if we have the sense to learn a few lessons from the American debacle.

We now know that the advertising men cannot be trusted with either the ownership or control of video. They have no taste—and to-the lowest possible taste, as indeed they do in commercial radio.

We know that the best shows must be established from the beginning to seek a rating in education and entertainment. Television is too powerful an influence to be left entirely in the hands of actions to be treated like comic magazines.

We know that there must be a vigorous and competent critic-ism of what is put on the screen, only balanced programming, but selective audiences. The part of the critic is to be the open finger and the eye on the world.

We know that the severe form television takes in Canada, it is going to demand more parental control and discipline than ever in your living room, and I predict that this child dominated calm is in for a rude awakening. It is about the only safe prediction that you can make about television.

Sharp Teeth In This Law

(Ottawa Journal)

An Ottawa woman learned last week the hard way how costly it can be to deprive Canadian Customs of any part of its authorized 25 per cent revenue.

A case in police court concerned a platinum and diamond brooch bought in Florida for $2,000 and brought into Canada without being declared for duty purposes. For having in her possession this imported article valued at $2,200, on which no paid its owner was fined $200 plus $2 costs.

But this was just the beginning. She had to pay $1,316 for duty, plus sales tax, on the brooch. Action she was assessed by the Department of National Revenue was paid for the brooch plus exchange—an item of $2,000. These items, added to the $200 court fine, the duty and tax item, the penalty, amount to $1,516 in all. This, plus the fee of her lawyer who defended her in police court, is what the piece of jewelry will cost her when all the bills are in.

How on other hand the woman says to Customs "I am sick and tired of all this fuss over keep the old brooch", the total cost is reduced by the item of $2,200. The brooch then will have cost the $2,000 paid for it in Florida, the $202 imposed as a fine, the $1,316 collected for normal duty and taxes, for a total of $3,518, with nothing to show for it but experience—and the brooch will belong to the Department.

Had the brooch been declared at the border its final cost would have been the $2,000 paid for it in Florida plus the $1,316 for duty and taxes.

Customs officers stationed at border points are suave, courteous, tactful, and show not the slightest inclination to fill the hills with Canadian citizens who "forgot to mention" a carton of cigarettes or a bottle of the borrowed or a new dress. But such incidents as the one in question will give us some idea of the powers, who the sharp teeth in the law.

ARE YOU A SALT SHAKER?

A healthy adult requires 2 to 5 grams of salt a day—the equivalent of a scant half teaspoonful to a level teaspoonful. This includes the salt naturally present in such foods as milk, meat, fish and eggs and the salt added to food in cooking or at table.

Years ago "salt-free" diet was popular in the treatment of edema (dropsical state of tissues) in cases of heart trouble, kidney trouble or hypertension (extremely high blood pressure). It this was not too rigidly limited nor too long continued it often brought about improvement. On the other hand if the salt-poor diet ("salt-free" is hardly attainable) is employed only as an emergency measure it may prove more effective than much medicine. In any case the salt-poor or "salt-free" diet should be used only under the direction of the physician who knows the patient's condition and requirements.

Regulation of the amount of salt one ingests is a daily habit in another matter. Any one whose physical condition and for personal appearance and enjoyment of life is affected may advantageously consider whether his or her intake of salt is excessive and, if it is excessive, change his or her habits to correct it.

Most people have come to like much salt, salt added in cooking and salt used at table. Without going into the physiological and pathological effects of excessive salt consumption we may say that the habit generally causes retention of too much water in cells and tissues, thereby causing overweight and excessive sweating.

In most instances these effects of excessive salt consumption are due not to foods which naturally contain salt but to the habit of putting salt on the food at table. Although most cooks are nearly overgenerous in the cook, unless cautioned not to do so, still many persons eating in restaurants reach for the salt-shaker and apply more salt before they taste the food. Then there is the habit of nibbling on salted nuts, salted crackers, salted cheese, salted potato—or perhaps we should say potatoed salt and pure unadulterated wind.

One subject to angina pectoris or coronary disease should go very light with the salt and also tagonizes calcium and calcium tends to prevent coronary thrombosis (coronary) that supply blood (oxygen) to the heart itself. As I have said here again and again, the diet of most of us is deficient in calcium and the principal reason why the diet supplies insufficient calcium is that it does not include enough milk or milk products; you just can't enjoy v-i-t-a unless you consume at least 1½ pints, three glasses of milk a day.

Although there is considerable salt naturally present in milk, neither milk nor any other food containing salt should be in any way restricted in the ever-day diet, unless under your physician's orders.

Various skin troubles may be due to excessive consumption of salt—but more about this another day.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Lemon Juice

I have been urged to drink lemon juice every morning for health. A pharmacist tells this is unwise. Constipation, irritation of the stomach, etc. due to the acidic acid in lemons. (Mrs. A. M. W.)

Twenty-Five Years

We have been using your perspiration lotion for years and we think it is tops. I have donated this lotion to the hospital for this cause grey sickness? I am 45 years old. (Mrs. H. P. S.)

Answer—Glad to prepare and use the lotion for excessive or obnoxious sweating is described in my pamphlet Excessive Sweating. No, donating three gallons of blood would not suffice. Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet The Facts Sickness—Definition Anemia. If you ask for the other pamphlet too inclose ten cents.

So Women Give No Blood

I notice that pictures showing people donating blood to Red Cross women are conspicuous by their absence. Is there any reason why women cannot contribute to the blood bank? (Tom D. F.)

Answer — There are a good many women who have donated a gallon or more. Maybe women are not quite as eager for publicity as are men.

Council Instructs Dog Catcher To Get All Loose Dogs in Town

Trenton (Special)—A dog's life in Trenton for wards is now more than it was four days ago.

Council, at the regular monthly meeting on Monday night, decided to equip newly appointed dog catcher Fred Smith with a set of instructions, plus to go all out in rounding up dogs reported to be running the streets in large numbers.

Councillor Vic Ryan has taken a particular dislike to man's best friend. He advocated putting some new teeth in the dog by-law, declaring that dogs are not wanted in the town at all. He figured that 75 per cent of the dogs running the streets now are mongrels digging up lawns and flower beds and causing all sorts of other trouble.

Dog catcher Smith reported he had picked up six dogs and destroyed three in the first month on the job. Mayor Couch criticized the pound-keeper's results saying he should pick up at least six every day.

Council's action followed on the heels of a case reported by police that Mrs. Cecile Gilmour of Front Street had been badly bitten on the left leg one night last week by a pair of dogs that knocked her off her bicycle while she was riding to see her mother.

Dog catcher Smith was informed that he was not responsible for dogs that had attacked and bitten people. He was told that the police would look after vicious animals.

Main reason for gathering in a few of the wandering curs was due to not being able to trespass on a dog owner's property, the dog catcher said.

Plan Arena Site

At the same meeting Friday night, councillors Banfield and Ashley were appointed to meet with the Community Centre Planning Committee and plan a site for the proposed arena.

Mayor Couch, expressing his views on the subject, said the ideal place for the new centre was where the present arena is located on Quinte Street. It was noted that owners of the property entering the present wooden arena had asked $15,000 for their land.

Councillor Banfield stated that council is definitely behind the community project and the backers should not worry about the initial purchase price of the property.

Mention was made of a subdivision which has been laid out by William Hendrick's land at the west end of the town south of Highway No. 2. It was suggested that a high class district be opened with houses costing $15,000 and upwards. Three applicants had already made enquiries, it was revealed.

Trenton Briefs

TWO BREAK-INS'

Trenton — (Special) — Thieves pulled off two successful breaks over the weekend and made clean getaways in each case.

Early Sunday morning, a late model car was stolen from the W. W. Weaver Company's parking lot on Elgin Street. Up until late last night, the police had not recovered the stolen vehicle.

Earlier the office at the car lot had been entered, and the keys to the stolen car removed.

Constable Bradshaw on foot patrol reported he heard noises in the direction of the parking lot and later discovered the office broken into.

At the other end of the town, Hesalip's store on West Street was entered through a side window and $11.75 worth of merchandise and small change as well as a Cancer Clinic bank sponsored by the IOOF local branch was missing. There was an estimated $2.00 in the clinic bank and that amount was included in the total stolen.

DOG OWNER REMANDED

Charged with harboring a vicious dog, scrap dealer Jack Zigman of Front St., was remanded for trial when he appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in police court here. He was represented by barrister R. H. Parks.

Police laid the charge after Mrs. Cecile Gilmour of Front St. was knocked from her bicycle one night last week and pounced upon by a pair of dogs. Mrs. Gilmour's left leg was gashed by dog bites and required medical attention. The slacks she was wearing were torn below the knee.

Unattended Auto Runs Into Parked Car on Station

An unattended auto which wandered away from where it was parked at Duffy's Service Station caused nearly $300 damage yesterday.

Ralph Bancroft, 166 Burnham St., had left his car at the service station and while it was unattended the vehicle moved backwards and gaining momentum bumped into a parked vehicle owned by the Swift Canadian Company. The car also struck a hydro pole damaging it to the extent of $25. Police estimated it would take about $135 to iron the bumps out of the Bayeraft vehicle and about $35 to repair the second car.

POLICE COURT

Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city magistrate's court this morning dismissed a charge of common assault against a member of the Canadian Army stationed at Picton.

The soldier had been arrested by police Sunday night following the complaint of a Mary St. woman who said a man had grabbed her as she walked on the sidewalk.

The court was but a brief session with most of the cases being pleas of guilty. These included speeding charges, infractions of the city traffic by-laws and a number of drunks.

On April 10, Mr. Zigman paid a fine of $8.00 for allowing his dogs to run loose on the streets.

RED CROSS CAMPAIGN ENDS

Red Cross canvassers made collections at the Trenton Air Station last night winding up a campaign that lasted two weeks longer than the countrywide drive. When chairman Allan Vanderwater joined the RCAF last month, the local appeal was set back, and had to be re-organized under the newly appointed chairman Chief Constable Jack Taylor.

Results to date have been very encouraging Chief Taylor reported yesterday. He said that the goal of $8000 should be reached by the time the airport canvass was finished.

11,000 Young Trees Planted In County

Upwards of 11,000 young trees were planted in reforestation projects of the county over the weekend.

At the Actinolite tract, Belleville Boy scouts under Scoutmaster Kenneth Moore and assisted by Zone Foresters W. E. Edwards and D. Scott planted 3,000 trees in rainy, inclement weather. Jack pine and poplar were the varieties planted.

Yesterday at the Thurlow township project near Corbyville, 8,000 trees were planted by pupils from the twelve public schools in the township. Twelve teachers and 157 pupils were assisted by the zone foresters.

Orillia Mayor Continues Feud With Police Chief

Orillia, Ont., May 1 (CP) Mayor Wilbur M. Cramp carried his feud with Police Chief W. G. Garson further at a special council meeting Monday night when he asked for suspension of the chief.

He charged the chief with six breaches of local police regulation, alleged shortcomings in law enforcement, discipline, knowledge of regulations, area jurisdictions, courtesy to council members and newspaper publication of information confidential to a person about to go on trial.

The mayor has himself been charged with assaulting a police officer, asking from a police station incident during the arrest of a local druggist on a liquor charge. He will appear in court May 11.

Alderman J. William Clarke, chairman of the council's police committee, refused to take action on the mayor's demands for the chief's suspension and an investigation of the police force by the attorney-general's department.

$200,000 Loss In Toronto Fire

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—A three-alarm fire which swept through the four-storey O-Cedar of Canada building late last night caused $200,000 damage and minor injuries to six firemen.

Nearly 20 engines and scores of firemen battled the blaze for more than two hours. Firemen wearing smoke masks perched precariously atop aerial ladders as they fought to bring the fire under control.

Hundreds of spectators lining the streets were ordered back when firemen feared heavy explosions from the building — where wax and polish are manufactured.

Heavy, choking smoke from the burning materials hung over the area, at times completely obscuring the burning building.

A family living across the street were evacuated by firemen for a short period, but their home was not damaged.

Several trucks left the scene of the three-alarm blaze to battle a $15,000 fire at the Monarch Chrome Furniture and Ornamental Ironworks nearby.

Jones and Potts will be remodelling the present Glossy Cafe across the street for their new business premises.

BANCROFT

Public School H&S Assoc. Decided Success

Bancroft—Once again the annual "Hobby Show" of Bancroft Public School Home and School Association was a decided success. There was an increase in both the quality and quantity of exhibits; the crowd was as great as that of the past two years, and weather was fine.

The general idea was the same as that of previous years with two innovations, demonstrations of enthusiasts working at their individual hobbies and door prizes. The demonstrators were Mrs. George Brown (smocking), Mrs. J. Barker (oil painting) and Muriel McKenzie (weaving). For estimating the correct number of gold adult admissions triplicate prizes, baskets of groceries, were won by Mrs. T. F. Nickle, Mrs. Roy Barker and Mrs. Dillon because each guessed within one of the paid attendance of 209. The numbers in attendance were far above this because public and high school children were admitted free.

Curios, Antiques

In the basement rooms were displays of antiques and curiosities, kindergarten and primary work and in the room. On the main floor one could see adult exhibits, motion pictures, demonstration of hobbies and the work of primary and junior grades. Here also was a fish pond and a booth where candy and home baking were sold. The supply room was a refreshment booth and the office held a Junior Red Cross display.

North Hastings High School had their exhibits on the top floor. Their work represented the work of the classes in crafts, home economics and shop work. Competitive displays of boys' and girls' work filled two more upper rooms and the Boy Scouts were in another. Besides this the work of the senior pupils of Bancroft Public School and exhibits from a number of rural schools in Faraday, Dungannon and Herschel-Monteagle school occupied sections of all rooms on the second floor.

Among the various items were noticed — hand-carved wooden animals, bantam baby chickens, a cheetah fur from India, a seal fur from Newfoundland, a Norwegian candelabra, dainty and practical furniture from orange crates, cedar chests, a number of quilts, a pen of baby chickens, oil paintings by both adults and children, girls' clothing that was made by girls, occasional chairs, coffee tables, book ends, wall shelves, large murals in temper, crayon and coloured chalk, all types of knitted goods, and dozens of other articles.

The gross receipts for the evening were $130, with a net of approximately $100.

A MESSAGE OF IMPORTANCE TO THE HOUSEHOLDER:—

Your home heating system represents a substantial investment in money and is one of the most important sources of comfort and health for your family. As such, it deserves good care and should get this care as soon as possible in the Spring.

An automatic oil burner should have a yearly inspection each Spring. The burner should be adjusted, oiled, cleaned and any necessary repairs or replacements made. AN EXPERT CHECK-UP WILL SAVE YOU MONEY.

If you have a coal-fired furnace or boiler, the firebox should be emptied. Every vestige of ash, clinkers and unburned fuel should be removed. This will protect the grates and firebox against the damaging effects of corrosion caused by the combination of Summer moisture and sulphuric acid in the ashes and clinkers.

The grates should be inspected and grate bars that are broken or damaged replaced.

Soot in the flues or radiator of the furnace, and in the smoke pipe should be removed in the Spring as well. If this is not done, the soot will absorb moisture from the air and set up a corrosive action that will eat away the metal.

We are pleased to submit this information to you and trust that it may save you money. If we can be of assistance in cleaning, modernizing or replacing your heating equipment, we will be most pleased to furnish estimates on request.

WEDDINGS

SLAVEN—LANG

Picton.—St. Gregory's Church was the scene of an interesting wedding at 9:30 Monday morning, April 30, when Rev. J. G. Clancy united in marriage Clara O'Brien Lang, of Picton, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien, of Alexandria Bay, N.Y., and Harry B. Slaven, Sr., Bloomfield Road, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Slaven.

Pink and white snapdragons decorated the altar.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, A. F. Eaton, of Watertown, N.Y., the bride was becomingly attired in a street-length dress of navy blue faille, the accent being on a circular-cut flare at the back of the skirt below the hipline, also wide, rolling collar with square neckline, complemented by pink jewelry. Her hat was of navy straw with pale pink roses and veil, and her corsage of pink roses. She carried a prayer book with white pearl Rosary, a gift.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Rundle were the attendants. Mrs. Rundle wore a two-piece navy dress with white trim, a matching straw hat and a corsage of red roses.

Wedding music was played by Sister Mary Gerrard, while Miss Jean Seed was soloist.

Spring flowers centred the table.

The groom's gift to his bride was a leather purse, the bridesmaid received a necklace set with rhinestones, and the groomsman, a lighter.

Mr. and Mrs. Slaven left for a trip to New Windsor and Detroit. The bride travelled in a navy blue suit with white accessories with yellow stripe, yellow nylon blouse, luggage tan shoes, purse and gloves. She will be greeted with flowers and veil.

Mr. and Mrs. Slaven will be at home to their friends at their home, Wellington Road, May 13.

PAUL—FOWERS

Picton.—The parsonage of Picton United church was the scene of an interesting wedding at eleven o'clock, Saturday morning, April 28, when Rev. A. E. McCutcheon united in marriage, Frances Marguerite Powers, daughter of Mrs. N. J. Gardner, and the late Harold Powers, and Lorne Harold, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paul, West Lake.

The bride chose a powder blue suit with navy accessories and corsage of pink roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Fred Jewell, of Belleville, whose wine suit was complemented by white accessories and corsage of yellow carnations and roses.

Fred Jewell was groomsman.

A reception for the immediate members of the family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Gardner.

The bride was given her attendant a gold compact, while the groomsman received a gold tie clasp.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul left for a trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls. They will reside in Picton.

AKEY—GALBRAITH

Pink snapdragons and pastel-tinted sweetpeas formed a lovely background in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, on Saturday, April 21, at 10 a.m., when Lois Yvonne Therese Galbraith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Galbraith, became the bride of William Bernal (Chris) Akey, of Point Anne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wellie Akey. The Reverend Father J. J. Mackey officiated.

Miss Mary Flurey, church organist, provided the wedding music, and the soloist, Miss Genevieve Tracey, sang during the ceremony, "Ave Maria", and during the signing of the register, "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother"

The bride, given by her father in marriage, was charming in her bridal gown of heavy, white slipper satin, fashioned with fitted bodice buttoned down the back, with off the shoulder neckline and nylon yoke. The sleeves were tight-fitting ending in lily points over the wrists, and the fashion skirt falling gracefully into a slight train. Her full length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a white prayerbook and an arm bouquet of pink lilies tied with wide white satin ribbon.

The bride was attended by her four sisters, Mrs. Thomas (Medina) Belnap, as matron of honor, wearing a mauve taffeta floor-length gown with matching floral headdress. She carried a white prayer book and arm bouquet of Talisman roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Greta Galbraith, Miss Kay Galbraith, Miss Rosemary Galbraith, and Miss Genevieve Tracey, were gowns in pastel colors of pink, green, yellow and soft blue, respectively, the former three in marquisette, and the latter in taffeta and net. All wore matching floral headdresses and carried white prayer books corsaged with pink, white sweetpeas and white streamers, while Miss Tracey carried a white prayer book corsaged with Talisman roses, white sweetpea and white satin streamers.

Mr. William Galbraith, of Windsor, brother of the bride, was groomsman, and the ushers were, Mr. Mac Akey, and Mr. Ross Akey, brothers of the bridegroom, and Mr. Carl Cox, cousin of the bridegroom, all of Point Anne, and Mr. Joseph Galbraith, brother of the bride.

The wedding breakfast for 110 guests, was served at the Kiwanis Centre, where the bride's mother received wearing navy crepe with navy accessories and corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who was gowned in aqua taffeta with navy accessories and corsage of pink roses.

The bride's table was beautifully appointed with white damask linen, silver candelabra with white tapers, and centred with a three-tier wedding cake, topped with a tiny bride and bridegroom, underneath an arch, and flanked by silver baskets with red tulips.

The toast to the bride was proposed by the Rev. Father Buckley and responded to by the groom.

For travelling by motor to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride chose American Beauty taffeta gown, topped by a navy three-quarter length box coat, and a corsage of red roses. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Akey will reside in Point Anne.

Out-of-town guests were present from Windsor, New Toronto, Toronto, Trenton, Point Anne, Enterprise, Kingston, Lansdowne, Brockville and Point Pleasant.

Previous to her marriage, the bride was entertained by Mrs. Belnap and Mrs. Mundy; Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Mohan; and Mrs. Tracey and Mrs. Cleaver.

Women's Activities

Victoria Avenue W.M.C.

The April meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church was recently held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Wells. Geddes a Street, with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. C. Campbell, presided, with Mrs. Post at the piano.

After the singing of the hymn "Shine Over Way," Psalm 23 was read by Mrs. Neal. Mrs. Carr led in a brief devotional period, basing her thoughts on two brief portions of scripture, 2 Kings 5, 1-3 and 7-9, and also read two comforting poems "Wits End Corner" and "Point Thou the Way."

Instead of the "Watch Tower" which is usually conducted by Mrs. Eastman, a period of special prayer was held at this time for the beloved pastor of the church, the Rev. H. O. Eastman who is very ill in the Belleville General Hospital, and for Mrs. Eastman and Nial, who are going through such an anxious time.

The topic of the evening was taken by Miss Ethel Nurse, who gave an interesting and informative talk on "The Grande Ligne Mission" locating and telling of the places mentioned on a wall map of the district. The Mission School, "Feller Institute," is the central point of hub around which the work of the district radiates, which make up the mission field revolves.

It was founded by Mme. Feller, a young widow, who came from Switzerland and began this great work in 1835. To every generation it is like a garden in which the seeds of redemption can be planted and cultivated. This results, not only in new harvests, but also in new sowing, for each pupil won for Christ "bears fruit" in his own surrounding.

More Works Needed

Since all missionary work must be built upon both evangelization and education the work of the churches and the work of the school depend upon each other. There is a real need for more workers and increased finances. The door to him who knocks will be opened. May we as good neighbors knock and enter with the light."

During the business period, it was decided to make a special donation to the work of Feller Institute from the offering received at the Easter pageant, and to donate the rest to the R. S. Neyond buying supplies for the Vacation Bible School.

Miss Nurse and Mrs. Wells were appointed as delegates to attend the convention which will be held in Picton, May 29-30-31.

After the meeting closed, dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and Mrs. Hetherington and her social committee.

Peter Smith Rated Brilliant In Recital at Collegiate

By EUGENE LANG

The Collegiate Auditorium was well filled last evening with Belleville music lovers who came to hear, for the second time in two years, the very talented and gifted young concert pianist, Peter Smith. Peter, son of Archdeacon and Mrs. F. C. Smith of this city, is now concluding his fifth year at the Juilliard school of music in New York City and is at present studying under the famous Madame Rosinna Lhevinne, one of the last of the great women of the grand manner style of piano playing of the last century.

The program chosen by Mr. Smith was a duplicate of his recent New York recital, and one that could honestly be called a musician's concert, not one built of familiar compositions. This was exemplified in the very first selection, the Toccata in F Sharp Minor of J. S. Bach, an introspective work of great depth and seriousness of style. Least known of the seven Clavier Toccatas, this lofty and deeply moving piece was given a performance of intense expressiveness and fervent feeling by Mr. Smith and one in which he realized its dignified fashion the true perspective that Bach sought for. The clarity and detail of the three voiced fugue was exceptionally well carried through—and clearly articulated.

Artistic Pianism

The next composition, and the major work of the recital, was the seldom heard Fantasie in G Major, Op. 78 of Schubert.

As in most of Schubert's piano music, the Fantasie leans heavily on romantic outpourings spiritled with deftly charged modulatory passages. Mr. Smith made of this work a model of artistic pianism, and sought for and attained the beauty and melodic charm that Schubert put into each movement. The last movement, a study in perpetual motion, was played up to tempo throughout and at no time was there that feeling of lagging and nonchalance that often tends to creep in. Here Mr. Smith gave an exhibition of clean and brilliant dexterity in the deceptively difficult passage work throughout.

Following intermission, a Sonata by Norman Dello Joio, now living in New York, was played. The four movements, all short and at times pointless in progression, were played admirably by the young artist. On the whole, this was a breathing spell between the preceding and succeeding 19th century pieces. Full of dissonances and chord clusters, the Sonata, with the exception of the Adagio movement is a good example of the trends in modern composition.

Meticulous Fingering

The last part of the recital was made up of two Mazurkas and the lilting Barcarolle of Chopin. The two Mazurkas were polished off with nice sheen, but the Barcarolle suffered at the hands of an over-laden bass that would have sounded better with less careful attacks. As for the two Brahms works that followed, they were done with a meticulousness of fingering combined with a sensuousness of phrasing that put the interpretations given by Mr. Smith in the definitive class. Here, as in the Schubert, he holds full away and can mould every measure into perfection.

In his performance of Liszt's difficult "Mephisto Waltz" he satisfied those who came to see, rather than hear, his recital. But he gave this morbid waltz a fine going over—both technically and musically. Two encores, again a Schubert Impromptu and a Brahms Intermezzo, gave hearing another chance to really let his musical abilities have full sway as to emotion and styling. This young artist has a distinguished and successful career ahead of him that, in the years to come, will put him in the class of the first rate pianists of this era. Following the recital a reception was held in the Household Science rooms at the Collegiate for Mr. Smith, his family and friends. The University Women's Club are to be commended highly for sponsoring this recital.

Iran Nationalizes British-Owned Oil Industry

Tehran, Iran, May 1—(AP)—Iran last night nationalized its giant oil industry—the world's largest producer—but Premier Mohammed Mossadegh gave little indication how he plans to run the $500,000,000 industry.

The senate unanimously ratified the seizure of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company, sole developer of rich fields in this strategic southern neighbor of Russia.

The nationalization, already approved by the Majlis (lower house of parliament), becomes effective on promulgation by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi. He has no veto power.

"Praise God, Iran has regained her rights!" shouted Mossadegh, leader of the minority nationalist group, which pushed the nationalization through parliament and seated Mossadegh in the premier's chair yesterday.

Regarding future operation of the company, the premier said only that an 11-man board created by the act will serve at first only in a supervisory capacity—not as actual managers.

Britons Study Situation

Presumably, negotiations will be necessary to work out an arrangement for any British operation of the properties under Iranian supervision. In London, company officials and the British government, which owns 51 per cent of Anglo-Iranian anxiously studied the situation. The British ambassador Sir Francis Shepherd is expected to confer soon with Mossadegh.

Britain has protested that the nationalization violates international law.

The law provides for the nationalized organization to continue to supply oil to present customers, and to set aside 25 per cent of its profits to meet claims of the company.

The new premier may feel his first real test of strength today if widespread leftist May Day demonstrations erupt into violence. Declining to enforce a previously-ordered ban on a communist-called rally, Mossadegh appealed for a peaceful demonstration.

Last Meeting On Seaway Project Held

Washington, May 1 — (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, winding up hearings on legislation to authorize the $318,000,000 St. Lawrence seaway and power project, was told yesterday that there is "no reasonable possibility"—it could be made to pay for itself by traffic tolls.

Such an assertion was contained in a statement by Walter J. Kelly of the Association of American Railroads.

In another statement, the committee was told by Caleb H. Magee, vice-chairman of A. A. R.'s car service division, that the country's railroads are "physically capable" of moving to steel mills the iron ore which is expected to come from new mines in Labrador.

Thus, he said, construction of the seaway would be unnecessary.

Production from the Labrador development, containing a large quantity of high-grade iron ore, is held by seaway advocates to be needed to augment the dwindling resources of American deposits.

They say the most feasible way to transport it over the proposed seaway.

The committee has scheduled an executive session for today and a vote on whether to approve or reject the legislation may be taken.

TOTAL CASUALTIES 117

Ottawa, May 1—(CP) — The army today issued the 14th casualty list of the Korean War, reporting two men killed in action and one wounded.

The list brought to 117 the number of casualties suffered so far by the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, in Korean action. They include 23 dead, 77 wounded and seven injured in battle accidents.

Britain Will Buy Surplus Cheese At 30 Cts. Pound

Ottawa, May 1—(CP)—Britain has decided to buy up all of Canada's surplus cheddar cheese this year at a price of approximately 30 cents a pound, informed quarters disclosed Monday.

This is an increase of five cents a pound over last year's 25. However, in 1950 the federal government granted a three-cent-a-pound subsidy to producers shipping to Britain. This and all other food subsidies on food to Britain have been brought to a halt.

A contract with Ontario producers on price and quantities already has been drawn up. Negotiations with Quebec producers likely will start within the next few weeks. The two provinces represent the main cheese-producing areas in Canada.

School Teacher, Two Children Reach Anchorage

Anchorage, Alaska, May 1 — (AP)—A school teacher and two children, missing for eight days in their snowy Alaska wastes, reached Anchorage safely yesterday.

The three—one of the trio is only six years old—told of subsisting for the better part of a week on meagre rations after making a forced landing.

They were Bert Gann, Bethel, Alaska, high school teacher; his six-year-old daughter, Linda; and Alex Hately, 16-year-old Bethel schoolboy.

Search planes had hunted them since April 22 when they started the hop from McGrath to Anchorage.

Their only food when they made their forced landing consisted of a can of orange juice, a can of potato chips, a half sandwich, two packages of chewing gum and a candy bar.

Yet little boy when asked what she missed most, replied: "My mommy."

Senators Call On Gen. Bradley For Explanation

Washington, May 1 —(AP) — Senators today called on Gen. Omar N. Bradley to explain how a formerly-top-secret account of President Truman's Wake Island conference with Gen. MacArthur came into existence.

Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem., Ga.), chairman of two committees looking into the policy dispute involved in the president's firing of MacArthur as Pacific commander, told a reporter he had asked Bradley how the report was prepared. Bradley is chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

Despite its top-secret classification, what was described as a summary of the report was published recently. Some Republicans accused the administration of having "leaked" the document to discredit MacArthur.

Among other things, the account described MacArthur as not believing at the October, 1950, conference that red China would intervene in Korea.

Russell will preside when the Senate Armed Services' and Foreign Relations' committees formally open an inquiry Thursday—with MacArthur as the first witness—into the policy disagreement.

The groups have voted to hold the hearing behind closed doors.

Arrest 2 Boys For Vandalisms In Cemetery

Kitchener, May 1—(CP) — A series of petty vandalisms in Mount Hope Cemetery here came to a wild finale Monday when two teen-age boys were apprehended in neighboring Waterloo.

They were caught in a friend's home after a chase by Sgt. Ed. Wick of the Waterloo police department and Wilfred Meyer, Kitchener cemetery superintendent.

The boys admitted they recently stole fresh flowers from graves and presented them to their high school teacher. They cut guy ropes from tents covering graves and used the ropes to lasso crosses and other ornaments off the top of tomb stones.

Glass flower jars and metal lodge emblems had been broken throughout the cemetery.

Mr. Meyer spent several nights in the cemetery trying to catch the culprits. Monday he decided to wait in daytime. The boys arrived at 12.30 p.m.

What punishment the boys, 15 and 16, will receive hasn't been decided.

Soo Council Asks Attorney-General To Probe Force

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 1 (CP) —City Council Monday night decided to ask the attorney-general to investigate administration of the Sault police force.

A motion to leave the investigation in the hands of the city's police commission was turned down.

The resolution was passed after an hour-long discussion of conditions leading to the resignations of five constables in the last four months.

Mayor C. Herb Smale told council he had wanted an investigation of police departmental relations for some time, but had been unable to get it through the commission, of which he is a member.

Friction has been growing between junior and senior officers recently, he said.

TEACHER REVEALS SECRET

"Blue makes white"

"Helping my young Johnny with his homework proved interesting the other night. He said his teacher had told the class that seven colours combine to make white—and blue is one of them. I've always used Reckitt's Blue in my washing and now I know why. Out of the blue comes the whitest wash, and Reckitt's Blue costs just a few cents a month."

COURT FACILITIES CRITICIZED

Windsor, Ont., May 1 (CP) — Court facilities in Essex county were criticized by Mr. Justice G. A. Gale in his charge to the Grand Jury at the opening of the spring assizes here.

Inadequate facilities for judges, members of the legal profession, juries, and those involved in court cases "are a shame in a county as large as Essex county," Mr. Justice Gale said.

Labor Confident Of Defeating Conservatives

London, May 1 (CP) —Labor party officials said after a check of their House of Commons forces they are confident the government will defeat a Conservative challenge tonight on the raw material crisis.

A Conservative motion for the debate was framed deliberately to embarrass the three rebel ministers who quit the government last week. Defeat on such a motion probably would bring the fall of the Labor government and a general election.

The three rebel ministers, led by Aneurin Bevan, resigned "on the grounds that scarcity of raw materials makes the arms drive impossible." Winston Churchill's motion expresses anxiety that the rearmament program was based on estimates of defence production which were not accepted by the ministers principally concerned.

The Bevan group, pledged to do nothing that could bring down the government, is expected to vote against the motion regardless of its feelings.

Communists Cut Off River Water To Aid Attack

Tokyo, May 1.—(AP) —Communist troops preparing for a new attack in central Korea today cut off the water supply for rivers blocking their invasion route.

The Han River dropped so sharply that United Nations engineers had to adjust pontoon bridges three times Tuesday.

An allied spokesman said the Chinese closed the sluice gates to the Hwachon dam in an effort to dry up the Pukhan and Han Rivers. That would make it easier for red assault forces to cross.

Censors prevented correspondents from saying how much the river had fallen.

Simultaneously the reds shifted their forces to the central front after massed allied artillery, naval guns and record swarms of planes disrupted their plans for a May Day assault on Seoul.

An correspondent Nate Polowetzky described the build-up of red forces along the Chunchon-Hongchon invasion route as ominous.

No Ground Action

There were no reports of ground action of any size on May Day either on the central front or in the west near Seoul, where the reds had hoped to celebrate their international holiday.

Three allied tank columns probed northeast of Seoul this morning in an unsuccessful hunt for reds. Only a few bodies remained in one sector where 1,000 dead Chinese were seen Monday. Reds had removed or buried their dead during the night.

A censored dispatch from AP correspondent George MacArthur said U.N. commanders estimated the main body of reds still in the west was staying far enough north to keep out of range of devastating American artillery.

"A GUY NAMED KELLY"

Detroit Red Wings' flaming red-head, Leonard Patrick (Red) Kelly, retires for the summer vacation with plenty of National Hockey League skeleton in his locker. The former St. Michael's star who won a defence position on the NHL All-Star team, worth $1,500, picked up a similar amount yesterday when he was named the first winner of the Lady Byng Memorial Trophy. These bouquets with his salary should see the sorrel-top in fairly comfortable financial circumstances during the fishing and football season. Kelly polled 21 points out of a possible 54, nine points ahead of Woody Dumart, of Boston who totalled 22 points. Bill Quackenbush, Boston, was third with 17.

No less than 13 players received consideration for the trophy, although four only garnered one third-place vote each. Following Kelly, Dumart and Quackenbush there were Buddy O'Connor, New York Rangers, 11 points; Ray Coxacher, Chicago Black Hawks, 10 points; Sid Smith, Toronto Maple Leafs, 8 points; Don Raleigh, New York Rangers and Max Bentley, Toronto Maple Leafs, 3; Frank Eddolls, New York Rangers, 2; and Bert Olmstead, Canadiens; Turk Broda, Toronto; Sid Abel, Detroit; and Leo Reise, Detroit, one point each.

The Lady Byng Memorial Trophy is presented by the National Hockey League in memory of the late Countess Byng of Vimy, wife of a former Governor General of Canada, who died last year In 1925, Lady Byng, an ardent hockey fan, presented the trophy to be awarded annually to "the player adjudged to have exhibited the best type of sportsmanship and gentlemanly conduct combined with a high standard of playing ability during the season." The Lady Byng Memorial Trophy replaces the Lady Byng Trophy but the basis for selection remains exactly the same.

"... AND HEAVEN, TOO!"

So professional hockey is a lucrative job, eh. Well, after potential pro pucksters read this they'll probably hunk the hockey gear, grab themselves a pipskin and start kicking, throwing, jaughing for "there is the big bucks".

Why toil six months for a paltry $12,000 or $15,000 when you can knock off twenty grand for a few weeks work, plus training? Take the case of Bob Porterfield, Los Angeles Rams quarterback. Yesterday, Eric Craddock, of the Montreal Alouettes Big Four club confirmed a report that Porterfield has been offered $20,000 to play for the Als.

The word from Detroit is that Porterfield has, if he accepts the offer. He's the hubby of curvaceous Jane Russell of the movies. Imagine the guy taking time out to play football.

PEEWEES ORGANIZE!

Looks as though the Peewee Baseball League is off to a good start. According to Bellevilla Baseball Association minor convener Walter Bent, six teams will enter the loop with the squads being sponsored by Ted Schwab, Bruce Lattimer, Charlie Cawker, Empire Groceteria, Walkers Hardware and Commercial Credit.

The Peewee League has been arranged for boys who are 13 and under by May 1st. Any boy who comes within this age limit is eligible to play and should contact Mr. Bent in the YMCA. All games will be played on Saturday mornings. Sweaters for the various clubs will be available in the near future.

Six coaches will assist Bent in the operation of his league. At the end of the season an all-star squad will be selected from the league to represent the city in the provincial Peewee playdowns.

During a recent service club visit to Watertown Bent was in conversation with Bob Shawkey, former Yankee hurler, who is vitally interested in minor baseball. Shawkey told Bent he was willing to assist in any way, and would be here during the summer to look things over.

REDMEN TO GATHER

The senior Redmen Hockey Club will wind up its official season in the immediate future, we are informed. The Reds will sit at a banquet table in the Vanity Fair at a date to be announced. Manager Fred Stevenson and Coach Walter Bent were named a committee of two to look after banquet arrangements.

'IS LUDSHIP 'EE AGAIN!

While Morgan is recognized as one of the most ruthless and damaging wrestlers in the game, Layton's legal specialties have been sufficient to bring him victories all over the world and against all types of opponents — including the Morgan ilk. Thus, their meeting promises to be a fiery one.

Chief Sani Wac Cloud, the Wasak tribe Indian wrestler with the fearsome Indian deathlock favorite winning hold, will oppose Tommy O'Toole, explosive and experienced Irish grappler, in the semi-final test. The first bout will stack Pat Flanagan against Sonny Kurgis, of Columbus, Ohio.

End of Giants' 11-Game Losing Streak and Season's Biggest Trade Tops Baseball News

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The biggest trade of the season and the end of the New York Giants' victory drought put a new complexion to the early-season baseball races today as eastern and western teams came to grips for the first time.

The Giants ended a crushing 11-game losing streak last night by besting their arch-rivals, the Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-5, before a capacity throng of 33,562 at Ebbets Field. It was the only game in the majors.

There was no booting or backslapping in the Giant clubhouse after the victory. "It's been a long dry spell," Manager Leo Durocher said with a wry smile.

But the Giants have a long way to go before they can live up to their winter-book rating as pennant contenders. The Giants are in last place with three victories and 11 defeats, nine games off the .500 mark.

Open 10-Game Stand

Durocher's athletes return to the Polo Grounds tonight where they open 10-game stand against the lightly-regarded western clubs, Chicago, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Cincinnati.

Last night the Giants went to town early, scoring all of their runs in the first two innings against Chris Van Cuyk, Earl Mosser and Joe Hatten.

Sal Maglie started for the Giants and lingered until the 6th when Sheldon Jones came on to stamp out a rally. The Dodgers outhit the Giants 10-8. Three of the Dodgers' blows were home runs by Gene Hermanski, Jackie Robinson and Duke Snider.

The biggest trade of the year was engineered yesterday by Cleveland, Chicago and Philadelphia of the American League. It involved seven players.

Strengthen Flag Outlook

Cleveland considerably strengthened its pennant outlook by acquiring Lou Brissie from the A's. The Indians have been seeking a starting lefthander for a long time to go along with their big four of Bob Lemon, Bob Feller, Early Wynn and Mike Garcia, all righthanders.

The three-cornered deal sent catcher Ray Murray, pitcher Sam Zoldak and outfielders Gus Zernial and Dave Philley to the Athletics, outfielder Paul Lehner and infielder-outfielder Ornette Minoso to Chicago and Brissie to Cleveland.

Hank Greenberg, Cleveland general manager, said he was reluctant to part with Minoso, "who has a chance to become one of the really-good players of our time." Murray was Cleveland's third-string catcher and Zoldak a relief pitcher.

General manager Frane Lane of the White Sox said, "we gave up a lot of power but we think we made a good deal." The Sox sent Philley and Zernial to the A's. Zernial set a club home-run record last year.

Art Ehlers, A's general manager commented, "I think we made a good one. We're going to keep moving players." The A's have lost 10 straight.

Brissie, who had a disappointing season last year for the A's after two excellent years expressed disappointment. Explaining: "I know I've been bush so far, but I never thought Jim (Dykes) would do that."

The Yanks open their first tour of the west in Chicago today. Other pairings are Philadelphia at Detroit, Boston at Cleveland and Washington at St. Louis.

Other National League games are St. Louis at Boston, Pittsburgh at Brooklyn, and Cincinnati at Philadelphia.

FIVE TEAMS IN

Wallaceburg, May 1 (CP) — Only five teams in this area will be in the intermediate loop of the Western Counties Baseball Association here this year, said local officials who expected to have at least seven teams on the list.

Officials received notices that Windsor and Strathroy teams had dropped out leaving Wallaceburg, Chatham, Sarnia, Petrolia and Dresden to draw up a schedule.

First game in the league is slated for May 24.

Owen Sound Mercs Score 4-2 Win Over Fort Frances

Owen Sound, Ont., May 1—(CP) —Odds on the Allan Cup Uppers in favor of the east again last night when Owen Sound Mercurys scored a tidy 4-3 victory over Fort Frances Canadians.

The win gave the Mercurys a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series for the Canadian Senior Hockey championship. All games are scheduled for Owen Sound with the fourth meeting Wednesday night.

Neither coach was satisfied with his team in last night's meeting before about 1,500 fans, smallest crowd of the series.

"It was the breaks," said coach Bud Jarvis of the westerners. "Our fellows weren't playing their best, but it was the breaks that won the game. We'll be back Wednesday night with a lot more fight."

Jack Markle, Owen Sound coach, was dissatisfied despite their victory. He felt his players weren't playing the type of hockey they're capable of. He figured the forward lines will be clicking more smoothly in the next game.

Brooks Johnson and Bill Mosienko led the Mercurys to their win. He picked up two goals in the last period to provide the team with its winning margin.

Better Ice Surface

Playing on an improved ice surface, Owen Sound jumped into an early lead and Fort Frances couldn't quite catch up.

Tommy Burlington opened the scoring on an unassisted goal midway in the first period.

Harry Kazarian made it 2-0 early in the second period before Dennis Sampson, working with Ric Ricard, got the first goal for the Canadians.

Mosienko made it 3-1 just past the eight-minute mark of the final period, Ricard put Fort Frances back in the game and MacDonald's second goal clinched it.

Over-eagerness appeared to be one of the causes of the Canadiens' setback. Regularly through the game Fort Frances forwards rushed good attacking plays by just beating the puck over the blueline.

Seven penalties were handed out in the cleanly-played game, four to Fort Frances, including O'Donnell's first penalty of the season for tripping. Jack Ingoldsby of Owen Sound was given a misconduct late in the third period for arguing.

MAX KIMINSKY GETS JOB

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 1 (CP) — Max Kiminsky who played in the National Hockey League in the 1930's with Ottawa Senators and Boston Bruins has been signed to coach and manage Philadelphia Falcons of the Eastern United States Hockey League.

Kaminsky, general manager of Philadelphia Rockets until the team folded a year ago, will have the job of assembling a new hockey team. He will train in Hershey, Pa., starting in mid-September.

Pitching Staff Of Syracuse Talk of League

(By The Associated Press)

The pitching staff of the Syracuse Chiefs is the talk of the International League today.

Manager Bruno Betnel's curves are chiefly responsible for the Chief's rise to the top of the ladder. The Chiefs have won seven out of eight starts and the mound staff has turned in seven complete games.

Art Hartley pitched the Chiefs into the lead last night by turning back Ottawa Giants 2-2. The Chiefs moved 75 percentage points ahead of Montreal Royals. The Royals dropped a 4-3, 10-inning decision to Rochester Red Wings.

Hartley scattered nine hits in posting his third straight victory. The chiefs collected only two safeties but capitalized on rookie Charlie Bishop's nine walks.

The Chiefs scored twice in the third inning without the aid of a base hit. Foul' walks and an interference penalty against catcher Neal Watlington did the damage. They scored the winning run in the eighth on a walk, single by Ed Stokes and a fly ball.

An error by veteran infielder Hector Rodriguez enabled Rochester to edge the Royals. Charley Krese singled to open the Rochester 10th, moved to second on a sacrifice and scored when Rodriguez erred on Nippy Jones' grounder. Jack Fazzholt went all the way for Rochester.

Buffalo Bisons swamped Springfield Cubs 9-1 behind the six hit pitching of Cookie Savernasky. Bob Wellman led the Bisons' 11-hit attack with a double and two singles.

STEVE-KARRYS SIGNS

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—Steve Karrys, backfielder with Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four when they won the Canadian title in 1945, Monday signed an Argo playing certificate for the 1951 season.

Another development on the Toronto football scene was the signing of Art West, former Argo backfield star, as coach of Argos' farm club, Toronto Beaches, replacing Gerry Tuttle and Dwight Follin.

Suit is Filed To Test Legality Of Reserve Clause

(By The Canadian Press)

Jim Prendergast, former Syracuse University football star, filed a $50,000 suit against organized baseball Monday to test the legality of the player reserve clause.

The suit—served Intendant Judge Vincent Leibell—charges baseball officials with conspiracy and violation anti-trust laws.

The reserve clause binds a player to one club until the club either transfers or cancels his contract.

Prendergast claimed reserve clauses in his contracts during his baseball career "continually tended materially to hamper the plaintiff in negotiating his salary and employment.

The Syracuse club transferred Prendergast to the Beaumont club of the Texas League on April 20. His contract, he said, reported.

The veteran pitcher has not signed a 1951 contract.

New York banker William Woodward Jr. whose 2 was established the 5-to-1 favorite for the May 30 Epsom Derby at an official betting session at Caxton Hall Monday night.

Mayor Nosawicz Nyangal was second choice at 4-1 to 1 and his Dantzig was a joint fourth choice at 10-1 to 8.

Turbo II, Dantzer and Praise du Boise II are scheduled to run Wednesday at Newmarket in the two thousand guineas, first of the English classic races. Dantzer is the favorite at 5 to 1.

Laurent Dauthuille, French welterweight king, knocked out Bobby Dawson of New York after one minute and 25 seconds of the first round Monday night at Paris. The bout was scheduled for 10 rounds.

Dauthuille weighed 160, Dawson 157.

At Yonkers, N.Y., Richard Scott of Toronto drove the six-year-old mare, Constance Scott, to her third triumph in five starts in the second half of the featured Monarmock pace Monday night at Yonkers Raceway.

At Providence, R.I. James J. Parker, heavyweight from Bayside, Queens, scored a technical knockout over Heywood Henry, 185 3-4, New York, in the second round of a scheduled six-round preliminary bout Monday night.

In the main 10-rounder heavyweight challenger Rocky Marciano of Brockton, Mass., won his 24th straight victory by outpointing Red Applegate of Monticello, N.J. Marciano weighed 185 3-4; Applegate 185.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference Monday announced the signing of Regan Dandurn, with Saskatchewan Rough Riders the last two seasons. Dandurn has been transferred here by his firm. He played at both guard and fullback spot last year.

Fred Urquhart, president of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association, today said a requirement rule change may make it possible for Bob Richardson of Montreal to ski for Canada in the 1952 Olympics.

Urquhart said Richardson Canadian combined champion, was reinstated by the CASA as an amateur after he gave up ski instructing. But under Olympic rules, he cannot participate in the games in Norway because reinstatement was made after Oct. 1, 1948.

However, a meeting of the Olympic Rules committee in Vienna this week may change that rule. If it does, the Canadian Olympic Committee will be notified.

Little Dynamite, Washington featherweight, made a punching bag of Richie (Kid) Howard Monday night in scoring a technical knockout victory over the Canadian 126-pound champion from Halifax in the ninth round of their scheduled 10-rounder.

Dynamite, who outpointed Howard in the same Washington ring last month, dropped the Nova Scotian in the seventh round and again in the ninth.

Farrell Family Again in Court Over Horse Racing

Baltimore, May 1 (AP)—The Farrell family and its horse-racing business is the subject of another court suit.

John W. Farrell Monday filed a suit asking for an accounting of proceeds from operations of Thorncliffe track in Toronto.

He asked as co-executor of the estate of his uncle, Joseph A. Farrell, who died in 1946. Earlier this month John W. Farrell was presented by the Grand jury with a charge of larceny of $10,000 from the estate.

Asked for an accounting of approximately $5,000 in Monday's suit were Edward F. Farrell and Mary A. Farrell.

The Farrells also were involved in court actions over the Bowie racetrack of which they own the majority of stock and are former officers.

The track was placed in receivership after the family got in a squabble over management.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 1—(AP)—Jersey Jones, who sees boxing flourishing in Britain while it withers on the coastal cable in the United States, can't understand why Eddie Thomas should want to fight in the US...A buck is a buck in Jersey, even when it's a fraction of a pound, and there are more available in Britain . . .

The pick is for Thomas—"champion of the rest of the world outside the western hemisphere"—to meet the winner of the Kid Gavilan-Johnny Bratton welterweight title bout . . . "It would not do more than $40,000 here with television," sighs Jersey, "in London or Cardiff it would be $150,000 to $300,000. There's tremendous loyalty in Wales and they've just opened a big new stadium in Cardiff . . . They must be very anxious to get a title. They haven't got one over there now; they had two but lost them both—and Jack Solomons would be passing up his promotional profit...there."

The It's Have It

American League tub-thumper Earl Mulligan of this one out of the past . . . Seems George Moriarty, the old-time ump, called a third-strike on Mulligan and the player who had tangled with him before . . . As George believed third-strikes . . . the player turned calmly and asked: "Mr. Moriarty, how do you spell your name!" . . . George boomed out "M-o-r-i-a-r-t-y."

"I knew it," roared the player . . . "Knew what?" asked George puzzled . . . "Moriarty—with one I."

Anniversary Item: It was on May 1 (1920) that Charley Robertson of the White Sox pitched the last perfect game in major-league history. On May 1 (1920) Leon Cadore of Brooklyn and Joe Oeschger of Boston pitched a 26-inning tie, longest major-league game on record. Also on May 1 (1939) Joe DiMaggio ended his string of 2,130 consecutive games for the Yankees.

(By The Canadian Press)

The longest major league baseball game was played between Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston 21 years ago today at Brooklyn. The National Leaguers were tied 1-1 at the end of nine innings and played another 17 innings without a run when the game was called on account of darkness. Leon Cadore of Brooklyn and Joe Oeschger of Boston pitched the whole distance.

OIL MAKES A COUNTRY STRONG

"SURE...I WAS HERE WHEN IT STARTED!"

You can bet Jimmie was on hand when the first Imperial drilling crew turned up at the farm gate. And he's been an untiring fence post superintendent ever since. But that's not all—in his short lifetime he's lived enough years to see the growth of a new major industry.

Less than five years ago Canada's oil producing industry was far from robust. Our oil fields were dwindling and produced only one barrel in every 10 we used.

Today only eight countries in the world are known to have larger oil reserves than Canada. And production this year is expected to meet about one-third of our needs.

Every barrel of this "home grown" crude lessens our dependence on other countries and brings us a step closer to self-sufficiency in oil. With oil increasingly important to our daily life in peace or war, any improvement in security of supply means new security for Jimmie and for all of us.

Canada's newest major industry gives promise of becoming one of her greatest.

About Canada's Oil—

Last year Canada's oil industry stepped up its production of crude oil to more than a billion gallons, an increase of 35 per cent above 1949.

Imperial drilled more than 400 wells in 1950 searching for and developing oil fields in Alberta.

Canadians are using almost twice as much oil as they did only five years ago.

Oil now provides for one-quarter of Canada's total energy requirements.

The brilliant ignorance of a clever dumb-ox takes the joy out of any good bridge foursome. Any bid he makes may be fish or fowl or an assortment of devilled meats.

His defensive bid is always in some suit. He may have a powerful hand, or a medium strong, or a borderline, or less than a minimal, but he always bids a suit. Always, bids a suit.

The keeps his partner guessing what to do about it. So they play poker bridge, which is just about the schnocks with a single deck, adapted only to the lower form of animal life.

Defensive bidding is a delicate operation. In their order of strength, they are: (strongest) overcall in opponent suit; jump overcall, double for takeout, simple overcall.

Overcall in opponent suit shows a game hand with no losers in opponent's suit; double shows as good as an opening bid of one.

Simple overcall shows weakest of all defensive bids. It shows a hand that is not good enough for an opening bid in anything. All it shows is enough tricks with a sure trick among two bids.

So, if you simple overcall, you don't strength needed for a double. If you double, you don't the needs for jump overcall. If your overcall is a jump, your needs for overcall in opponent suit.

An opponent opens with a heart when you have this hand:

♥8 5 ♥
♣K Q 4 ♣

You are too strong for a simple overcall of one spade; not good enough for jump overcall or overcall in opponent suit, day double. You have a hand that could have opened the bidding.

A double tells your partner that you are not relying on your own trumps for future tricks. You would like to know his trump suit.

Don't signal partner to bank up when you mean go ahead.

General Picture Is Heavy Demand For Low Rent Units

(By The Canadian Press)

May 1 has gone by the boards as the traditional moving day in most Canadian cities. Families have long since learned that housing is where you find it.

A Canadian Press survey shows that most tenants across the country move wherever the opportunity presents itself.

The general picture is of a heavy demand for low rental quarters, still largely unsatisfied despite six years of heavy post-war building.

Booming population growth has changed the face of many cities, and ringed them with suburbs.

Edmonton, with an average increase of 1,000 persons monthly, is having trouble supplying utilities services to its new areas. Winnipeg is finding room to grow in the suburbs of east, west and north Kildonan and St. James. High rents in Montreal have boomed hotel, especially to the west and north.

Toronto has little building room left, and is seeing a master plan to amalgamate with 13 surrounding communities.

Halifax residents, who would face dangers in wartime, are moving to neighboring centres such as Bedford and the pressure of commuter needs has speeded the plans for the proposed Halifax-Dartmouth bridge.

City rents are generally high on accommodation which has passed out of federal rent controls, and assumption of expiring federal controls in each province will not affect this greatly.

Wages Increased For Building Industry Workers

Toronto, May 1 (CP) — Wages in the Toronto building industry will be increased today, through higher cost-of-living bonuses and rises in the basic rate.

Bricklayers, who begin the second year of a two-year contract, receive a wage boost of five cents an hour bringing their basic rate to $2, which is increased to $2.15 by cost-of-living bonuses.

Plumbers have signed a new one-year agreement for a 15-cent hourly increase to $2 an hour while painters get a five-cents boost to $1.85 plus a 10-cent cost-of-living payment.

Electricians who receive $1.85 an hour without any cost-of-living formula are about to open negotiations.

Hoard of Recluse Maybe Concealed In Old House

Victoria, May 1— (CP)—A fortune in excess of $100,000—the hoard of an aged recluse—may be concealed in a ramshackle home in neighboring Sannich, it was disclosed yesterday by an estate administrator.

The solitary house, surrounded by a 17-acre orchard and weed-ridden gardens, was the retreat of Leonard Leney, 71, reputed heir of a wealthy English family, who died here recently.

Alan E. Bigelow, administrator of the estate, said there was a possibility that considerable money and valuables might be hidden in the junk-filled house. He added that a search of the home might be made before the estate is settled.

Leney came to Victoria 20 years ago and was comparatively unknown at that time, Mr. Bigelow said.

Mr. Bigelow said he was instructed by a cousin, Eric Leney of Duncan, B. C., to administer the estate. He said Leney has a brother and sister living in England.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 1 (AP) —"Off We Go Into the Wild Blue Yonder" is Hollywood's theme song today. But this applies to interplanetary flight, not mere airplane travel.

Latest studio to explore the possibilities of the outer world is 20th Century-Fox which is making a film called "The Day the Earth Stood Still."

"We thought that since movie goers have been to the moon and other planets, they might be interested in what might happen if a visitor from another planet came here," producer Julian Blaustein told me.

"But our visitor is not a vegetable or anything frightening. He looks and acts just like us. His mission is peaceful. There is no reason to believe that a person from another planet would necessarily come with evil intent."

Radio Robots

Blaustein briefly described the story: A strange aircraft arrives at Washington. At first there is doubt as to whether it is from another galaxy or from another world. Finally it is determined that it must be from outer space.

The world is buzzing with curiosity. Then a ramp comes out from the ship and the door slides open. Out steps a man-like creature, completely covered by what looks like army fatigue clothes. He starts to open a strange object in his hands and his voice says, "I come in peace." Then a trigger-happy soldier shoots him.

Turmoil ensues, but it is quickly quelled by a robot in the ship which destroys all weapons with a ray. The space visitor, played by Michael Rennie, is taken to hospital where he quickly recovers, aided by an interplanetary salve.

"Our man tries to get across his idea," reported Blaustein. "He tries to arrange a meeting of all the heads of state in the world. Coming from a civilization that is 5,000 years ahead of ours, he observes that we can be a danger to galaxy peace, since we now are conquering atomic power and rocket travel.

"But he cannot get a meeting and then escapes his guard and poses as an earthman. Finally, after an interlude of observing our civilization, he reaches an Einstein-like savant, who tells him to do something dramatic to get his message across."

Shock Treatment

The space man offers to level Manhattan Island or drop Gibraltar into the sea, but settles for stopping the earth's electricity for 30 minutes (except in planes, hospitals, etc.) Then he makes his point: That his more advanced civilization has created a robot to put down violence immediately.

"This is a plea for a stronger United Nations with an effective police force," Blaustein explained. "Our man tells us we must do this or the world will be destroyed. Then he gets back into his ship and flies away."

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

Peking at Peter and Sondra, who wondered if they were in this thing alone, or if Jasper also knew. Or if Jasper had killed Miss Maggie and his wife and his brother were covering up for him. But it was Peter whom Miss Maggie had feared most. It was Peter against whom Miss Agatha had wanted her door locked.

"Is Miss Aggie all right?"

"Certainly," Sondra snapped. "It wasn't her will."

No, Leesna thought. Also it wasn't Miss Agatha who had all the money, whom they all hated because she had plans of her own for its disposal. Agatha lived on her sister's generosity and a small annuity; it was Miss Maggie, the eldest, who kept the Thorne family purse-strings tied in a hard knot.

Leesna had thought herself pretty well inured to insults after seven months in the same household with Jasper and Sondra, but even their bitterness had not prepared her for being accused of murder. Even at their worst they had not looked at her as Peter looked at her now — daring her to prove herself innocent.

Deputy sheriff Mart Preston arrived first. He burst into the hall without knocking and left the door open. Behind him, ushered in by the biting November wind, were Sheriff Clem Purdy, Jasper, and two other men whom Leesna didn't know.

"Leesna," he said — Mart remembered his status, he continued officially, "what goes, Miss Thorne?"

Leesna bit her lip. "You know —what they say?"

"What Jasper says," Sheriff Purdy put in.

"I didn't do it." Leesna said simply. "You can take it or leave it."

"Thanks, we'll leave it—for the time being," he added hastily. "I never trust snap judgment, especially when it's somebody else's."

Peter Thorne flushed, but Sondra fixed an icy stare on the sheriff.

"Will you show us the — body, please, Jasper," Clem Purdy turned again to his guide. "Dr. Zimbrunsky will — ". He cleared his throat. "He's the coroner."

Jasper Thorne started for the stairs. Zimbrunsky and his aide were at his heels. The sheriff trudged off, too. Sondra followed him.

"Peter!" Her voice shook, "Peter! —I—I'm faint."

Peter Thorne was at her side in a flash — too swiftly, Leesna told herself, for mere brotherly interest. She looked up at Mart Preston.

"I suppose you're to question me?"

Mart's grin was crooked, worried, far from confident as he took his eyes reluctantly from the pale going slowly up the wide stairs, Peter's arm was around Sondra, and she was leaning on him.

"Just one," he said. "Or maybe two. First — did you?"

Leesna shook her head. "Cross my heart."

Cold fire burned deep in Mart Preston's eyes. He said, "Then why, Leesna, was your bag packed—and in the car?"

The suitcase was hers. Sick with fear, Leesna turned away from the car in which Jasper had gone for help.

"Jasper found it when he started after Clem," Mart Preston explained. "He left it right there —didn't even touch it." He added hopelessly, "of course there won't be fingerprints."

It was a straw. Leesna snatched at it.

"Then you don't think I'm lying to you?"

Deputy Preston shook his head. "I don't," he said. "But Clem, now —"

The silence was sudden and terrible.

Anyone could have packed it," Leesna half whispered, referring to the pigskin bag that had been her father's going-away gift. "Why, they didn't get nearly all my things and—"

"There was no time for that!" Peter cut in. "Sheldon, if he—or she—wanted to make you look guilty, he wouldn't dare take all your things. He would have taken only a few, so your suggested 'flight' would not be discovered until enough time had passed to make you look more guilty than ever."

Leesna shivered. He made it sound so right.

"Don't you see," Mart stopped, as though he realized that his hands on her shoulders, his eyes looking deep into hers, were not the proper officer-suspect relationship. His hands dropped to his sides, and became fists. "Somebody is trying to frame you!"

Leesna was surprised that she could smile and even more astounded that the cold lump in the pit of her stomach was giving way to warmth.

"Mart?"

"You think it's Peter, don't you?"

Leesna ignored him. "Mart," she said again, "if Peter and Sondra were in the living room together, then that makes it Jasper, doesn't it?"

"Does it?" came the hard, dry voice from behind them.

Leesna felt her heart curl up in her breast as Jasper Thorne came out of the darkness toward them.

Jasper Thorne's wizened little face looked cunning, animal-like as he held the lighter to his cigaret, feigning nonchalance that was denied by his shaking hands.

"I would say," Mart Preston replied coolly, "that it all depends on how much of the truth Jasper was telling me when he said he was in his study, reading."

Jasper's light went on. "I was," he said shortly, and added that Sheriff Purdy had sent him to "fetch" them. "You might as well know, Leesna—Peter's swearing you did it."

"Miss Maggie wasn't afraid of me."

Surprisingly enough, Jasper fell into step beside her.

"No," he admitted, "and it would have been to your advantage if she had lived—until Dev—got that new will all fixed up, legal-like."

Leesna kept her eyes straight ahead. The repulsive creature! she thought angrily.

Peter Thorne's football – hero silhouette in the doorway throttled her disgust. She was glad when Sheriff Purdy came to stand beside him, even if his appearance probably did mean she was more suspect than ever.

But the sheriff's eyes were kind when he stepped aside for her to enter the wide old hall that had held so much terror — so much suspicion. When he spoke it was to Martin.

"Bring the old man—Jones," he ordered. "And see if Cynthia Carstairs has gotten over her hysterics."

Cynthia was the housekeeper, and Leesna couldn't imagine anything ruffling her enough to stir emotion of any sort, let alone hysteria. Cynthia was the genuine article; when she laughed, even, which was rarely, the sound was like someone walking on cracked ice.

"Mrs. Carstairs," Leesna said slowly, "is hardly the hysteria type."

Purdy was quick on the uptake. "I wondered about that when Mrs. Thorne mentioned it." He motioned for Mart to go—bring them. "Then, "the rest of you will wait in the living room, please."

Leesna preceded the Thorne brothers into Miss Maggie's "parlor," where Sondra and Agatha Thorne were waiting.

So Leesna thought, it was Sondra who had told the sheriff about Cynthia. Well, if Cynthia Carstairs had hysterics, she had reason for it. Reason beyond grief for poor Miss Maggie. But only old Arthur Jones would have grief.

The reason for Mrs. Carstairs's hysterics—if she had been upset at all, which Leesna doubted as soon as she saw her—was apparent as soon as she sidled into the room.

Peter Thorne. Her eyes sought Peter's —and fell. But not, Leesna was sure, before Sheriff Purdy noticed the warning that sprang at her.

The sheriff cleared his throat, waited until Arthur Jones, who had been followed into the room by Mart Preston, had seated himself, and began:

"Margaret Thorne was murdered." He was purposely blunt. "She was smothered by one of you people who held her pillow over her face until you were sure —you—were —safe." His words came slowly, as slowly as his keen gray eyes passed from face to face.

Leesna was looking at Leesna; Sondra was looking at Peter. Then, as Leesna met Peter's accusation without flinching, he seemed to sense Sondra's gaze and turned his head. Sondra gave him a confident smile.

"Which one of you," the sheriff continued his attack, "wants to tell me something? And I don't mean accuse someone else — unless you're sure!" A short sit Sondra as her full lips parted.

"Oh!" she said. "Well, all right. It's just that I had nothing to gain either way. Except through my husband, of course."

WARSHIPS AID IN SEOUL DEFENSE

This is the Seoul front as the reds again pour into battle near the city. U.N. forces have forged a defence (black) around the north-west approaches, with orders to stand as long as casualty ratio is favorable enough. The Chinese communists, newly reinforced, have advanced south from the Munsan area and through Uijongbu. U.N. naval units are pouring shells from Inchon area, even as the pointing arrows advance red battalions. U.N. fighter planes attacked reds in the Masogu area. U.N. forces may withdraw from Seoul if the Chinese advance through the centre threatens the supply lines to the city. — Central Press Canadian.

Granted Under 99-Year Leases on Military Bases

Ottawa, May 2 — (CP) — The United States had agreed to relinquish some rights and privileges granted under terms of 99-year leases on military bases in Newfoundland.

Prime Minister St. Laurent told the commons yesterday that after two years of negotiations the U. S. has agreed to changes in the leases signed in 1941, eight years before Newfoundland became a Canadian province.

Four Newfoundland bases and other lands and facilities were leased to the United States in exchange for 50 over-aged destroyers. The U. S. was given broad control over both military and civilian persons in the areas where the bases were located.

In newfoundland all the bases are located at St. John's, McAndrew, Stephenville and Argentia. Mr. St. Laurent said the U. S. will retain full military control, but certain civilian privileges will be changed.

Taxation exemptions now held by U. S. contractors and employees will be eliminated as will the right of U. S. military courts to try Canadian civilians within a certain area.

Few Dairies File Financial Statements With Milk Board To Back Request for Increase

Toronto, May 2—(CP)— Only six or seven of Toronto's 34 dairies have complied with the Ontario Milk Board's request for financial statements to back their case for a milk-price increase, Judge A. B. Currey, board chairman, said today.

Judge Currey said the companies should "have an end in mind the board is not losing sight of such a dilatory action."

The board wanted statements covering the last six months to compare operations with both the preceding half-year period, he said.

Press dictated price in the city is 20½ cents a quart, and the milk board chairman said serious consideration will be given to reducing deliveries in an effort to save distribution costs. The board might also increase the United States cities where deliveries have been reduced and retail sales made successfully from stores.

The board is considering formal requests by both producers and distributors in the Toronto area for price increases. Dairy farmers Tuesday got their first boost from $4.20 to $5.71 per hundredweight. Dairy owners said if this were allowed they would seek an increase of three cents a quart.

Mayor Hiram McCallum, chairmen representative on the board, said a boost in prices of delivered milk could be avoided if deliveries were made every other day.

GEN. MACARTHUR'S BACKERS CLAIM POLICY WRONG

May Make Public Record of Conference

Washington, May 2—(AP)—Backers of Gen. MacArthur claimed today that the long-secret Wedemeyer report on Korea, made public yesterday, proves that administration policy in Korea and China was wrong.

Meanwhile, it was reported that the publication of the conference on Wake Island last fall between President Truman and MacArthur may be made public.

Three key Republican senators — Kennedy, Wherry and Jenner, Indiana, William F. Knowland of California and Styles Bridges of New Hampshire— said the report by Lt.-Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer gives new insight to MacArthur's views on far east policy.

The Republican leaders cut of the conflict between President Truman and MacArthur over the conduct of hostilities in the Orient. The disagreement led to MacArthur's removal as far east commander.

Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem., Ga.), hearing chairman who got the "top secret" label removed from Wedemeyer's 1947 report, said he thinks the other former "top secret" documents.

It is a purportedly-official copy of the conference between Truman and MacArthur last October on Wake Island.

Copies to Reporters

Russell said he will hand copies to reporters at 10 a.m. today. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, explains how the conference was compiled.

Wedemeyer, formerly command. of the United States forces in China, made a survey of China and Korea in 1947 and then reported his recommendations on the threat of communism in the far east.

The China portion of the report was made public as part of a 1949 white paper. Korea, while papers but the Korean sections were not official secrecy until yesterday.

In the report, Wedemeyer forecast possible "soviet-controlled" invasion of south Korea. He said Korea was "American-officered south Korean army" organized and called for military aid and training for South Korea.

Unless U.S. aid went to Korea and nationalist China, the report forecast communist domination of Manchuria and China itself, with events now in motion.

Wherry, Senate Republican leader, said the "administration has failed to learn the opposite side of the Wedemeyer report, that Korea and China can be competently well with the recommendations of MacArthur."

New Red Assault In Making Warns General Van Fleet

Says First Part of Battle Victory for United Nations

Tokyo, May 2 — (AP) — The communist spring offensive has been stopped by "a great victory by the United Nations," Lt.-Gen. James A. Van Fleet said today — but a new communist assault is in the making.

The reds lost, too, in their battle to control the rivers which must be crossed in the next phase of their spring offensive.

American naval planes bombed gaping holes in the floodgates of Hwachon reservoir and sent waters rushing back into the Pukhan and Han rivers. The reds had closed the gates in an effort to lower these water barriers for an easy crossing.

As the rivers returned toward normal levels, U. N. tank patrols probed out Wednesday on red hunts.

Meets Enemy Ambush

One tank force stabbed 11 miles north of Seoul to the Uijongbu area and into a Chinese ambush. The force fought their way back through red attempts to set up a road block.

Other armored patrols searched the "no-man's-land" opened up by the Pukhan and Han rivers east of Seoul. They found no reds.

Allied fliers found plenty of targets on the highways. They blasted red efforts to build up manpower and supplies for a renewal of their halted offensive.

The "annihilation" of the red drive was summed up by Van Fleet after a flying visit to the 10th corps front. He said:

"We have punished the communist forces severely. No communist army has failed in the first phase of his offensive. He has paid a very high price (more than 75,000 casualties in nine days) The first part of the battle has ended in a great victory for the United Nations.))

The Fleet made it clear he didn't consider this the final end of the red offensive.

Confident of Results

Communist forces he said, have "the capability of hitting again as hard as before of harder. However, I am confident the results will be the same."

Every red attempt so far has been met by a hail of U.N. shells.

The communists closed the sluice gates Monday to lower the level of the two rivers.

Planes from U.S. carrier Princeton opened the gates Tuesday. They swept in across the reservoir and dropped 1,000-pound bombs into two flood gates First reports said they used several torpedoes later in the day. A respondent Tom Bradshaw said they used bombs with delayed fuses to cause the greatest amount of underwater damage.

At least 18 sluice gates were destroyed. A 10-foot hole was ripped in another.

MANSLIFT DEFENDS CAPITALISM

Birmingham, England, May 2—(AP)—Norman Thomas, United States Socialist leader, defended capitalism in an interview today.

"There is no lie greater" Thomas said, "than that in Russia," the union reporter, "than that in June, 1950, American capitalism was in such a position that it wanted the Korean war.

"The war was undertaken because it backed the one positive thing that came out of the world war—the United Nations. We believe we have got to see it through."

Many Civilians Join 'Law And Order' Force

Wellington, N.Z., May 2 (Reuters)—Men lined up at New Zealand ports today to join the country's new civilian "law and order" force.

Their enrolment for the emergency force came as Dockers' Prime Minister Sidney Holland had called on every able-bodied man to fight "wreckers and trouble-makers trying to overthrow orderly government."

Holland's appeal for civilian volunteers came as the dock workers' strike dragged through its 10th week. Meetings and the assembling of men in district bridge had added to the tension.

Police had formed before the civilian recruiting offices opened in many places today. More than 1,000 men had volunteered in Auckland by the early afternoon.

Police in 109 police used batons on the Wellington strikers when they tried to march through police lines to the parliament buildings.

The marchers dispersed after being told a deputation would meet the government.

New Zealand's industrial crisis stems from the decision to end higher wages. The government dismissed the Arbitration Union and appealed to the men to form new unions.

Duplessis Ordered to Pay $8,123 to Restaurant Owner For Cancellation of Licence

Montreal, May 2—(CP)—Premier Duplessis was today ordered by a court judgment today to pay Frank Roncarelli, restaurant owner, $8,123.53.

The court action arose from Roncarelli's claim that his liquor permit for his restaurant was cancelled Dec. 4, 1946, without cause because he interceded for Premier Duplessis, Mr. Justice C. J. Mackinnon agreed.

The cancellation came at the height of attention on Jehovah's Witnesses religious sect, particularly in Montreal, through distribution of literature without permits as required under a city by-law.

Sympathetic Toward Sect

Roncarelli, wealthy Montreal restaurant owner, at that time said he was sympathetic toward Witnesses and it was he who literally supplied bail funds.

Main issues, said His Lordship in a superior court judgment, were whether Premier Duplessis was responsible for cancellation of the permit and, if so, whether that would on that account be liable for damages suffered by the petitioner.

A further question arose as to whether any right in law existed to cancel the permit without reason and, if not, whether the permit was cancelled for a proper reason.

His Lordship noted that Roncarelli's liquor licence was cancelled because of his alleged activities as a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses religious sect.

Activities Caused Anxiety

During 1945 and 1946, he recalled, there was active by Crown to spread its religious beliefs throughout Quebec, and the activities of the sect had created considerable anxiety to the authorities.

In that connection, Premier Duplessis, as head of the Quebec government, was deeply concerned with controlling those activities.

In defence of the action, counsel pleaded on the premier's behalf that Roncarelli's licence was cancelled by the Quebec Liquor Commission and that in doing so the commission only exercised a discretionary power given to it by the Quebec Liquor Act.

It was further contended that the premier could not be held liable for any part he may have played in the cancellation of the licence as whatever he did was done in connection with duties as premier, attorney-general and minister of the Crown in a matter affecting the public interest, and from the public interest.

From the evidence His Lordship found that the defence had failed to establish that Roncarelli was a leader of the Jehovah's Witnesses or that he was more than a simple adherent of the sect.

Nor had it been shown that, throughout many years as a liquor licence holder, Roncarelli was guilty of any infractions of the law. Actually, said His Lordship, the main complaint against Roncarelli was that he had "steadily and consistently" furnished bonds for sect members accused of infractions of city of Montreal by-laws.

Board Reserves Decision On Producers' Request

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) — Use of "milk refrigerators" in cutting down the price a consumer pays for milk was described to the Ontario Milk Control Board Tuesday by an Essex dairyman.

A. R. Webber, chairman of the Essex Country Milk Distributors' Association, said a Minneapolis dairy gives customers a discount if they buy milk in larger quantities. He said it is considering supplying customers with small refrigerators so they could take delivery of a week's supply at a time. Thus the dairy could cut deliveries to one a week.

The board reserved decision on the Toronto District milk producers' request for a 2½ cent increase in the whole milk price to $5.71 a hundredweight from $4.20. The producers said granting the boost could add at least three cents to the present retail delivered price of 20½ cents a quart.

Too Much Powder Used Causing $10,000 Damage

Huntsville, May 2—(CP)— An explosion in an excavation Tuesday night heard by boys rock and 16-foot timbers 250 feet in the air and caused $10,000 property damage in the centre of this Muskoka district community.

Rock and timbers cascaded down on the roofs of automobiles, scattered across the street, an adjoining house and a new gasoline station. No one was injured.

Fire Chief Ed. Hunter, chairman, was driven through a small construction shack on the job. Mr. Hunter, a man sitting in the shack at the time was unharmed.

Harry Cooper, Toronto (Dec.) who supervised a detail barring traffic from the area, said too much powder was used, thus causing the blast to be greater than intended.

Possible Fields Outlined For New Investigations By Senate Crime Committee

Washington, May 2 (AP)— dor.

In its report yesterday, the committee hit hard at O'Dwyer, who resigned as district attorney of New York's Kings County (Brooklyn) from 1940 to 1945 and as mayor from 1946 until last fall, when President Truman named him ambassador.

The committee said neither O'Dwyer nor his successor made any effective action against the top echelons of the gambling, policy, numbers racket, or bookmaking rackets . . . in fact, his activity impeded promising investigations."

No Alternatives Claim

In Mexico City, O'Dwyer said he had no comgent "at . this time."

Toe committee, meanwhile, formally named a new chairman Senator Ernest C. O'Connell (Dem. Md.)—and made plans to start fresh action on the job of limiting of big crime and gambling syndicates.

The committee's report said, however, that the main housecleaning job can be handled by state and local authorities.

O'Conor, who succeeds Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem., Tenn.) as chairman, said the committee will write about 20 bills to implement its recommendations.

Among other things, the report called for legislation to ban transmission across state lines of gambling information, to tighten income-tax laws, to provide heavier penalties for dope peddling, and to tighten immigration laws to rid the country of undesirable aliens.

Nationalization Of Oil Industry In Iran Official

Tehran, Iran, May 2—(Reuters) —The Shah of Iran today signed decrees nationalizing the country's British-run oil industry.

With his signature, the Shah passed into law a series of bills pushed through the Majlis (legislature) in five day.

The British and United States ambassadors called separately on Premier Mohammed Mussadegh earlier today.

They are understood to have told him their countries wanted the oil dispute settled, but that a one-sided action but in a manner affected by the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company.

Britain already has announced she would regard the immediate nationalization of the oil industry as a breach of Iran's contract with the Anglo-Iranian and she says she is ready to agree for the formation of a new company in which Iran would share control.

The British government owns 52 per cent of the common stock of the Anglo-Iranian.

Abdul Hussein Ansari, head of the press and propaganda department, denied that the nationalization law, passed by both houses of the Iranian legislature, means exproprietion of the $1,400,000,000 company in which the British government has a controlling interest.

A committee of 11, representing both houses and the government, is to take over the oil and all the company's assets, installations, production and oil-fields.

Kirkland Lake Pioneer Built Small Business Into Fortune

Kirkland Lake, May 2 — (CP) — Hyman Kaplan, the man who underwrote Sir Harry Oakes' first mining venture, died here last night. He was 69.

One of the district's pioneers, he built Kirkland Lake's first business establishment, a general store, and parlayed the enterprise into a fortune from the fur trade while Kirkland boomed with the discovery of gold. His business interests included six theatres and numerous properties in and around Teck township.

Shortly after gold was found at the Lake Shore mine, Sir Harry Oakes staked a claim and built a mine shares. Mr. Kaplan rejected the offer, however, saying that he knew nothing about the gold industry. Lake Shore went on to become Canada's richest gold mine and its founder one of the wealthiest men in America.

Born in Russia, Mr. Kaplan came to New York in 1902. A few years later he moved to Toronto and came to Kirkland Lake in 1913.

He is survived by a brother, three sons and a daughter.

Restitution Made After 52 Years

A Rummaging through the files recently, Lieut. Angus Duffy came upon a letter dated Sept. 15, 1946, which told the story of a guilty conscience carried for 52 years. The letter, from a gentleman of Binghamton, N.Y., enclosed a money order for $5. It seems that in 1894 this man was a member of the 49th Hastings Rifles Reserve Regiment. At that time he collected from friends pieces and eight or ten buttons for souvenirs. It was not until 1946, however, that his conscience overcame him and he felt that restitution should be made.

Film Director Was Communist For Ten Years

Vienna, May 2 (AP) —Frank Tuttle, American film director who has been making pictures in Vienna for the last nine months, admitted publicly today that he was a communist party member for 10 years, until 1947.

Tuttle issued a statement along with the text of a cable sent to Rep. Clyde Doyle, (D) California committee of the House of Representatives asking an opportunity to testify in Washington.

Screen writer Richard J. Collins testified before the committee May 1 that Tuttle had told him that Tuttle was a former communist. The director also recently finished making the picture "Hell," a story of Adolf Hitler, which has been censored.

"I have read in news reports that my name has been given to the House committee on American activities as a member of the communist party. I was a member of the communist party in Hollywood from 1937 to the middle of 1947, when I resigned because I was completely out of sympathy with its aims and tactics. I will be glad to affirm these facts before any properly constituted agency upon request."

Boy, 14, Struck In Back By Near-Spent Bullet

Accidentally struck in the back by a near-spent .22 bullet from a rifle being used for target practice by Constable Fred Ryan, 183 Station Street, was taken to hospital Tuesday evening where the bullet was removed. The spent bullet lodged just under the skin and was removed without difficulty.

Ryan with another playmate, Leonard Shanks of John Street, had visited the fairground and while in the park unknowingly got in the line of fire where James Doig was using a .22 rifle for target practice. Doig was shooting at cans into a mound of dirt.

Ryan and Shanks were lying on the ground when Ryan jumped up and said he had been struck. Mr. Doig took the lad to hospital where the bullet was removed from his back about six inches below the shoulder blade. Doig then reported the matter to police.

It was reported that the injured lad had been released from the hospital today.

Meeting Calls For Punishment Of Two More Nuns

Hong Kong, May 2—(Reuters)—Communist reports from China today said a mass meeting in Chungking called for the punishment of two more Roman Catholic Missionary Nuns for alleged neglect and ill-treatment of orphans.

This is the latest incident in the communist "orphanage purge" in which several foreign missionaries in China have been arrested for alleged neglect of orphans.

Five Canadian Nuns are being held in Canton on similar charges.

The reports today said an "accusation meeting" last Monday called for the arrest of the mother superior of the Franciscan Mission in Chungking, Identified by Catholic sources here as Mother Chrysanth, a Swiss citizen.

It also demanded action against the Catholic sister at Our Lady of Peace Hospital, Chungking, who was accused of spying for "imperialists" as well as of neglecting children. The sister is Chinese, say Catholic here.

Catholic sources admit hundreds of orphans die every year in Chinese missions, often because they are on the brink of death through starvation and disease when they are left at the doors of the missions.

Transform Bomb Site Into Rustic Garden

London. (CP)—A rustic garden, costing £ 40,000 (About $120,000) is being built on a bomb site in the shadow of St. Paul's Cathedral as a permanent retreat for city workers. The project represents London corporation's contribution to the Festival of Britain.

The garden will have a magnificent lawn of Cumberland turf, with rose fountains, and will contain some of the most elaborate stone work of its type in London. The work which began last December is expected to be completed before official opening of the Festival next month.

Already in position around the edges of the site are 50 lime trees which will provide a protective screen 10-feet high between the garden and the busy traffic. Around the lawns will be three lines of flower beds.

Laying the paving stones around the sunken garden will pose a tricky task for masons assigned to the job. Two experts from the Yorkshire quarry from which the stones have been sent to London to study the plans calling for 120 stones, all different in size and contour. The experts returned to the quarry to supervise the cutting.

Pageantry Marks Court Opening By Sen. Davies

Welshpool, Wales, May 2 (CP) —Probably for the first time in history of this old Welsh town on the River Severn, the half-yearly assize court sessions have been opened by a Canadian.

Senator W. Rupert Davies, 71-year-old publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard, was the central figure Tuesday in the traditional pageantry which marked the opening of the court sittings.

Among the spectators were many who remembered Davies as the local lad who left in 1895 with a guinea sewn into his shirt to try his luck in Canada. And Welshpool, with its timbered cottages and miniature railway threading through back gardens, looked much the same as it did to the young emigrant of 14 who once worked in his father's store here.

Davies authorized the court sittingsas his capacity as High Sheriff of Montgomeryshire, a county set in the hilly border country which for years was disputed by England and Wales. He was sworn in as Sheriff March 19.

Two trumpeters greeted the Canadian Senator as he entered the courthouse wearing his brilliant robes of office.

The cost of arms on the trumpeters' banners was designed by Davies and approved by the College of Heralds in London. Two symbols on the crest, resembling fishmongers' hooks, are derived from the old ink-balls used in the early days of printing before rollers were introduced.

INNOCENT UNTIL PROVED GUILTY

One of the most important principles of British and American justice — that a man is innocent until proved guilty — is to be incorporated into United States government procedures against so-called communist-led and sponsored organizations. In effect, the Supreme Court has told the government that it cannot legally brand organizations as being tinged with Russian red unless a proper hearing is given them.

The application here of one of the basic tenets of true justice is that these organizations, while they may be known to be under communist sponsorship, cannot be branded as such until they are given a hearing. Each will have a chance to declare their purpose before their reputation, if they have any, can be damaged by what may be a misdirected red label.

The government barely hurdled the contentious question of whether or not it should have the right to dismiss employees suspected of communist leanings without a trial. On a divided vote, the Supreme Court indicated that while there is some doubt that the procedure is legal, there still is room for consideration of it as either within or without the bounds of the law.

Possibly a good indication of the government's right to dismiss employees without hearing is shown in the record. The government has fired 308 employees since 1947 for being fellow travellers in the communist ring. The most important point, however, is that more than 3,100 have quit while being investigated. Hence, the procedure has the effect of a sanction. It cleans out the known bad, and scares out those thought bad.

—On the other hand, however, there is the question of whether or not such a method is constitutional. Indeed, some of the organizations listed by the government as being subversive have already appealed their listing. Two lower courts denied their right to a hearing, but the Supreme Court, by a five-three vote, upheld their view.

There is little sense in purging the communists from a democratic state if the method used is a direct violation of the constitutional backbone of the country involved. It is a dangerous procedure, for it gives the communists even more grist for their propaganda mill. Thus, the free nations of the world find themselves faced with a ticklish problem. In the first place, one of the most important bases of constitution must not be violated. And yet, in the second place, each nation must guard, to its best ability, against the plotting to overthrow its form of government.

The effect of the Supreme Court order in the United States will be that hasty labelling of organizations will be retarded. Even though it will gripe most Americans and Canadians to think that underground communists will be given a fair chance in the country they plan to sabotage, it is the only sensible procedure. They are dangerous to democracy's welfare, but they must not be allowed to push a democratic nation into fascist or communistic systems of justice.

A HOME FOR CANADA'S LEADER

For a long time, Canada has lacked a home for her government leader. For years, Canadian prime ministers have found it necessary to live in Ottawa, and have had no official residence at which to receive visitors from the reaches of the far-flung dominion, as well as from other countries.

Inaugural has its No. 10 Downing Street, world-famous for its occupants; part of the history of the United States is anchored in the White House; and now, as Prime Minister and Mrs. St. Laurent move into 24 Sussex Street, another important step in Canadian nationhood has been taken. The St. Laurent home is owned by Canada, and will be the official residence of prime ministers, regardless of party affiliations, for years to come.

Cost of the establishment of a permanent home for the state leader may be debated by some quarters. It is estimated that purchase and renovation cost the government — i.e., the people of Canada — approximately $500,000. It cannot be denied that that amount is a great deal of money, but the establishment of a home for the prime minister was a necessary step in the growth of a nation, and it had to be done sooner or later. It is perhaps a mistake that it was not done before. Now that it has been done, there should be no objections. Rather, Canadians in government circles and out should be proud that the prime minister will have a proper place in which to receive his distinguished guests. Mr. St. Laurent's new home will add one more shade of dignity to the noble character exemplified by the Parliament Buildings of Ottawa.

Had no pistols in my hand.
Had no horse for herding cattle.
Had no desperado band
I was soon, alone, to battle.
Just their grandpa heard me sing
On the television screen.

Wasn't doing roping tricks.
Wasn't any bandit stalking.
Little Jane, grown up at 25,
Watched and said: "That's grandpa talking!"
Speaking pieces. Oh, well, let him.

I'm not staying. I don't get him."

Little Terry, only three
(It may be that he had missed me)
On the screen discovered me,
Stepped up to the set and kissed me!
Fond of both of them! Yes, yes,
Six-year Jane and three-year Terry.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One inch above the right eye is the correct position of the edge of the wedge cap of the modern Navy and army have similar strict regulations governing the wearing of their head dress.

The reason for this over-the-right-eye business is that seventy-five per cent of men part their hair on the left side of their head, that means they brush the hair over to the right. And the cap in both services sometimes more and more securely worn on top of that bunch of hair.

The seventy-five per cent who part on the right side simply have to accomodate themselves to the whim of the majority. It means trimming their hair short, so that the exposed mop does not project unseemly into the air.

Only one man in five parts his hair in the middle or brushes it straight back like a squaw.

The other four majority of left-side-parters, the number of men who tilt their civilian hats a little to the left seems greater than those who tilt them to the right. This opinion is open to question. One hatter assures me that the proportion of men who slant their hats to the right is about the same as those who brush their hair to the right—that is, left-hand-parters, or seventy-five per cent. But if you make a check on the street, you will find a baffling situation. In twenty minutes, you will note an overwhelming majority of male hats tilted to the left. Only in pessimism, swings, and for the next period of observation, fifty out of sixty will tilt up the right. Montreal goes for left-handers, Toronto for right-handers, the Winnipeg had an extraordinary number of males who wear their hats without any tilt at all, but dead centre on the head, like the early Quakers.

An old banker I knew would always lend money to a left-hand tilter; there was only suspicion on all right-hand tilters; and said he rarely ever had to lend money to a man who wore his hat dead level.

Baltic Partisans Face Extinction in New Drive

Stockholm, (Reuters)—The existence movements in Russian-annexed Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are in a desperate fight for their very lives after nearly seven years of bloody struggle against communist oppression.

Russia's secret police are slowly starving out the "forest brotherhood", as the movements are termed locally.

Reports from the three Baltic countries confirm that Russia's drive is directed first and foremost against the Estonian partisans. They have been hitherto the key to patriotic resistance, were allowed to keep their own weapons although their actual base was collectivized.

But a new decree by Estonia's Moscow-dominated communist government says that farmers' cottages shall be pulled down. The farmers will be rehoused in communal living centres on the collective farms.

This means they can be more closely watched by the Russian secret police, and forced to turn over all their produce to the state instead of reserving part of it for the "Brethren".

Russia, rushing up submarines, bases, radar stations, military airfields and guided missiles bases on the Baltic coast, is in a hurry to carry out this measure.

Similar decrees to turn the farmers of Latvia and Lithuania out of their homes are reported under preparation.

The Estonian partisans are trying to meet this threat by slowly shifting from their forest headquarters to town centres and offices. To do this they must obtain "workers books" in which Estonians' past and present employment is registered.

Fortunately for them, false workers' books, according to direct reports from Tallin, can be bought for about 1,000 roubles each.

The "Brethren" can afford the price because they have 4,000,000-roubles loot they made in 1940 by robbing the Russian mail trains.

But the Russian secret police is intensifying the hunt of partisans who "take to the trees" when threats to the towns. They have been particularly active in the Parnu forests. One patrol ambushed and killed "Hans the Terrible", one of the key leaders of the Parnu area. The other leader, Elmar Sillp, is still alive. The Russians have put a price of 50,000 on his head but no Estonian has yet betrayed him.

At the same time Russia is having "unreliable" officials purged in the three countries.

A red army general, Johannes Lombat, has been appointed minister of the interior in Estonia replacing Aleksander Resev, another Russian general. Arnold Letman, has taken over Aleks Kelberg's job as communist party secretary.

Nature as well as these Russian measures is helping the partisans hard. They live in caves or open air camps on dry days in the forests. Many have succumbed to this life, made harder by the increasing cold of the spring thaw.

A number of independent sources have reported that the number of partisans in three countries is: 7,000, Lithuania (farthest from Russia); 2,000 in Latvia, 2,000 and Estonia (nearest to Russia) 1,500.

Russia says there is a total of about 100,000 secret police, but supporting the partisans are the populations of the three countries, totalling about 6,000,000 people.

Iran's Seizure Of Oil Creates Serious Problem

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Iran's seizure of the vast British-controlled petroleum industry in Iran creates a serious problem not only for Britain but for the Western Powers in their defense against communism.

Iran, with its wealth of petroleum, is a key spot in the strategic Middle East. And military operations — and the industries on which they depend — must be fueled.

The development is doubly serious in that it has been inspired by Moscow, working through fifth columnists in Iran.

Ironically enough, the seizure was achieved by parliamentary legislation nationalizing the oil industry. And the Socialist government of Britain, which is nationalizing home industries, has been handed a dish of its own porridge.

Companion Piece

By strange coincidence this Iranian explosion was a companion piece to Pelping's confiscation of the British Asiatic Petroleum Company of China. The Chinese move, theoretically in retaliation for British capture of a tanker, involves a distribution agency—the British - Asiatic Petroleum Company—put in operation in China.

Pelping's drastic move naturally widens the breach between red China and Britain. It is a new music for Moscow, although there is no indication that Russia was responsible for the move.

The Iranian oil zone at the head of the Persian Gulf is the richest as the highest single field known anywhere.

This nationalization crisis and the general red-inspired political fever there are a serious problem which might inspire a communist coup.

Russia has been working persistently in and for Iran into the red camp, partly because Moscow wants control of Persian oil, but more because she wants a warm water port on the Persian Gulf.

WHEN A DOG BITES A MAN

The editor who assured children of the reality of Santa Claus defined news with this much quoted epigram: "When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news."

Hefting my ever ponderous file on rabies (three-syllable word pronounced rap-ich-eeze) down on the rug, I as in if I think I could show that newspaper editor today generally give half a column or more space to a story of a dog biting a man, especially where the local health officer gets into the picture with a few stereotyped comments calculated to whip up a mad dog scare.

One of the clippings received today is a whopping long. It tells of the finding of the "first case of rabies in 10 years" in a mid-western city. From the context I gather that this case is not so alarming as the headlines would lead one to think, for the story goes on to say that "the rabid dog" had died Sunday, 101 hours after biting the boy. Therefore its death occurred beyond the period of possible incubation. None has shown symptoms of the disease."

The city health commissioner stars in this piece. His name is mentioned in every line of the column. But a veterinarian managed to get his name mentioned, and what's more, the street address of his office. It's a neat trick, if you like it.

The health commissioner says that one good medical authority said that one out of every 10 of humans bitten by rabid dogs contract the disease. In my

Canadian Firm May Mechanize Diamond Industry

Winnipeg, (CP)—A Canadian, Dr. John T. Williamson of Montreal, several years ago discovered one of the world's richest diamond mines in Tanganyika, British East Africa.

Now another Canadian, Robert A. Kirk, of Winnipeg, may help mechanize the diamond industry by a new process at present dogged by hand labor methods.

The firm, Kipp Kelly Ltd., manufactures concentrating and separating machinery used in the mining industry. Several months ago it received an inquiry about machinery which could separate diamonds from concentrates.

Mr. Kirk suggested samples be sent for laboratory tests here. But it developed Dr. Williamson was not allowed to ship diamond concentrates out of Tanganyika, so it was decided the Winnipegger should make the 10,000-mile trip to Tanganyika with sample machines to be tested.

The company previously has sold machinery to the tin-mining industry in Nigeria, to a West Indian plant in Egypt and to mining concerns in North Africa, Australia, Scandinavia and other countries.

Commerford, regarding Dales Avenue.

The bride was attractively attired in a street-length dress of champagne Chantilly lace with cocoa accessories. Her flower was a cascade of Talisman roses and cream gladioli petals.

Miss Anna Commerford, of Toronto, cousin of the bride, was maid-of-honour. She wore a street length dress of poudre blue lace over taffeta with navy accessories, and carried a cascade of pink roses and gladioli petals.

Albert Kelly, of Brockville, was groomsman.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Hotel Manitou, where a luncheon was served. Assisting in receiving the guests were Mrs. Rose Cancilla, mother of the bride, wearing a street-length dress of green Chantilly lace with beige and brown accessories, mink scarf and corsage of yellow roses, and Mrs. H. T. Commerford, mother of the groom, in a navy crepe dress with navy and white accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Plight of Blind in Africa Causes Concern to Authorities

Johannesburg. (Reuters) — Helen Keller, the 70-year-old blind and deaf American authoress now visiting South Africa, is arousing public conscience here to the need for great exertions in the prevention of blindness and help to the blind.

Miss Keller, who was blind and deaf at 19 months but learned Latin, French and German and took a college degree, is loved all over the world for her lifetime's work in the cause of the blind, the deaf and the dumb.

Miss Keller's visit is inspired by a desire to awaken interest in the present plight of the African people.

In 1950, of the 32,701 registered blind in the Union of South Africa, only 2,428 were Europeans. These figures do not take into account the large number of Africans who are not registered because they do not know they are entitled to a small government pension.

Two years ago, the South African National Council for the Blind established the bureau for the prevention of blindness, which has since made some notable researches in the African field.

Opthalmological surveys have revealed that the roots of blindness lie in poverty and ignorance and the resulting dirt and malnutrition.

The most widespread and infectious disease among Africans is trachoma. It is a common sight in African villages to see flies crawling up the faces and into the eyes of infants who are so used to the discomfort that they make no attempt to brush them away. Their mothers are too ignorant to connect these insects with eye troubles.

Suspicions of Hospitals

In its early stages trachoma is curable, but the facilities for treatment are in the towns. The department for native affairs provides free rail transport to these centres, but few can be induced to take advantage of them. The African who has never left his kills is suspicious of hospitals.

So preventable blindness increases on account of ignorance.

It is the training of the blind, however, that provides the National Council with its biggest headache. Its own activities are inadequate to cope with the number of sightless who could be trained to do useful work, and the individual employer cannot be expected to provide these. As a result, hundreds of blind people are unable to find employment.

Government departments, municipalities and the mines, normally find work for the blind telephone operators, but outside, the difficulty of teaching, concentrence and loss to output are invariably cited as reasons for unwillingness to accept blind workers.

Fortunately, the idea that the work of a blind person is confined to some sort of basket-work or knitting is rapidly disappearing. Much has been done to alter this old-fashioned conception by the Union's two schools for blind children.

The answer to prevention cannot be found immediately, since its roots are in economic causes, but much could be achieved in staving off blindness by the provisions of mobile units to visit the outlying districts.

The reply to unemployment must be increased training facilities for the blind who are at present unable to crowd into the centres open by the 20 societies affiliated to the National Council.

It is hoped here that Miss Helen Keller's visit will apply the spur where it is most needed.

Chorus-Girl B. A. is Heading Back to Show Business in N. Y.

By ADELAIDE KERR

New York (AP)—Lois Prechtel worked her way through college as a circus performer - crorus girl and earned a B. A. degree with honors.

Now she is heading back to the chorus line — this time, she hopes in a Broadway musical hit.

"I love dancing," she says, "and it's exciting being in a show. I love travel too. And all these things are offered in show business. So I'm starting after a Broadway job. That's as far as I plan right now."

Helen Keller, the blue-eyed copper-haired daughter of a Bronx truck driver, has no deep convictions about the advantages of a college education to a woman, though she thinks it is useful to mothers because "it teaches you how to think."

"I was only 15 when I finished high school," she said. "Nobody would give me a job. My teachers urged me to go to college. So I started. But I didn't like it. And besides the cash was low.

"So I left and joined Ringling Brothers circus in Florida. I did not like the circus as well as I thought I would and I began to realize that I might regret not having gone to college, so I came back and went to Hunter College. If I hadn't started college, I would not have wanted to finish. But I like to finish what I start."

Played in Toronto

Six months with the circus gave her enough cash to go to school another year. Next summer she was on the choral line of the Gershwin and Johnson show at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. The next year she captained the chorus line of the Radio City Rockettes' travelling troupe.

Other times she worked as a baby sitter, tutor and clerk in a hotel store. In her spare time she taught Sunday school, took dressmaking courses and made her own clothes. At college she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, the honorary society.

How did she get so much done?

"I saw long ago that if you do all that's required of you you will never get finished," she says. "So I tried to do as little as I could and get by. I used to get one part of my lessons well and volunteer to recite on that. Then I paid excellent attention in class, took very extensive notes and studied them before examinations. Then in the examinations I would give back to the teacher what they had lectured on and they loved it."

"Now I have my degree to fall back on if I can't make musicals do. In that case I haven't planned just what kind of a career I'd head for — I might do office work or teach."

British Women Will Show World They Can Cook

London, May 1—(CP)— Thousands of British women will be trying this week to bake a fruit cake good enough to win a £250 (1117) gas kitchen to be presented by Princess Elizabeth.

The competition, part of the Festival of Britain, was organized by the Women's Gas Federation to show the world British women can cook. A dozen finalists will come to London in July to cook a full meal in public

Dame Vera Laughton Mathers, adviser to the council on Women's affairs, said:

"Your competition is going to prove that British cooking is as good as any in the world.

"British cooking has a character of its own. It is not disguised by foreign sauces, spices, but is good wholesome and uncomplicated."

...quality, spoons her marriage.

...years ago, a young woman ...who is now 34 fell in love. ...and her young man went to ...and two years with the ...of eventually marrying. ...but there was a difference ...what she calls their "religious ...positions", and also because her ...family disapproved of the young ...saying that "he wasn't my ...of people," as she puts it, the ...finally broke up. The girl ...out to another city, took ...job and has supported herself ...ever since. Many of the child had ...to make a go of marriage. ...now that his wife is very ...ous, that she never made a home ...him and the child, and even ...is so far to date other men. ...now Bill has asked me what ...chances are to pick up the ...he wants to get his divorce. He ...been called into the Army ...the divorce is soon to be final. ...arry Connie?

...I realized that I still loved him, ...I said I would marry him. The ...problem is that I have told my ...family that I intend to marry him, ...they are more bitterly opposed ...to him than ever. He is well ...to support me as he has a ...rivate income. My family has ...always been very close and I hate ...to tell my boss to go jump in ...his wishes. But I love Bill and ...believe in him. He is different ...ever, as he does, that he is 'a ...an with a past'. We both feel ...we know is handle my present ...situation. We intend to get ...married in any case, but would ...like to have their blessing.

...think that when they see Bill ...husband; they will accept him, ...just see the surface, but down ...in?

Since this girl has already made ...her mind to marry this young ...man, and will obviously have to ...do whatever the occasion may ...be, Apparently she is pre-...pared to do this, but naturally ...would like to remain on friendly ...terms with her family if possible. ...This is very understanding, since ...no one can possibly tell her, no ...matter what arguments she makes ...her family, whether they will ...accept the fact of her marriage ...to Bill. However, she and her ...family have always been very ...close, so she says is the case, I ...would think the chances were that ...they will. If the marriage worked ...out happily, their opposition ...would gradually lessen and final-...ly disappear.

...Much will, of course, depend ...on the young man's own attitude ...toward her parents. If he is pa-...tient, tactful, tolerant and as at-...tentive as they will permit him ...to be, he can probably in the end ...win them over. But the girl has ...got to be very certain indeed that ...the young man is not likely to ...make any more foolish mistakes ...like putting her money into his ...hands. Otherwise, if she marries ...him and comes to grief, her family ...will be in a position to hold ...it against her that she refused ...to heed their warnings, and they ...may be alienated for good.

BEAUTY

Do you shave your feet?

Are you feet in bondage? Are they poor little over-worked slaves that never receive com-forting attention? Have you be-grimed them in shoes that bind and blind, or have you, per-haps, comfortably in shoes that conform to their contour? Answer truthfully, now.

Jump is for sweet girl graduates too!

Medical men condemn extremely high heels.

When the feet smart and burn, when they take on hardened calcite in various places, they are crying out to you to be kind and reasonable. They carry you around all day and half the night. Why shouldn't they protest against abuse?

Among 100 civilized women, only ten have normal feet. The others suffer from minor deformities and defects of one kind or another, all of their own creating. If the women will act with the determination to find shoes that provide support, that are without pressure on certain spots, that have flexible leather soles to provide ease of move-ment, the feet will quiet down, be tranquil.

The wearer's posture will im-prove and so will her disposition. One nagging little corn can turn an earth angel into a snappy meanie. An ingrowing toenail will upset the nervous system nicely.

What used to be known as the "sensible" shoe has disappeared. It was an ugly ground-gripper and the woman who had to wear it felt that life was unfair. That is not the case nowadays. Shoes can be had that combine style and comfort. Shoe designers are making every effort to pro-duce footwear that caters to foot health and well-being. Of course, they also produce fancy shoes that do not provide sup-port and are no help to Mrs. Walker.

Extremely high heels have been condemned by medical men. They throw the body out of balance, cause the shoulders to contract, bring about poor posture that may have a deplorable effect upon the internal motors. Just why women feel that they must bob-ble around on stilts is something that cannot be explained. Shoes with moderately high heels can "look cute" if they are beautifully designed.

Wherever there is pressure on the flesh of the foot, nature pro-duces a thick, hardened mass of tissue as a measure of protection. This tissue can form a corn or a calloused spot. When that hap-pens, a woman should seek pro-fessional services. Bathroom surg-ery, accomplished with the manic-cure scissors, has been known to result in painful infections. Cut-ting the nails down at the sides may result in ingrowing nails that prove painful.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

Politeness . . .humanity

"Politeness is the flower of hu-manity. He who is not polite enough is not human enough."—Joubert.

Here's a girl who prefers a topaz bracelet to a diamond ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Do you advise that girl gra-duates of high schools—or of any other schools where the graduates would be that age, about sixteen or seventeen—should wear silk-white dresses, and white acces-sories? My daughter, of that age, is a senior in a small school, and she and her classmates have been discussing with us, their mothers and myself, their graduation dress-plans. Just what type of dress do you suggest? (Not suitable Commencement exercises.)

M. V.

I'm most enthusiastic about white dresses for girl graduates of that "wonderous age" . . . and I'm always so delighted when I see all the girl graduates dressed in white (soft shades are now practically out last year, and I hope will be banished out this June). A ideal graduation dress for this age this year: white mar-quisette, probably this year nylon marquisette, a really wonderful fabric, an all-year-round fabric, that will make the dress wear charmingly and effectively for a party dress next summer or even into next fall, or for a dance dress next winter; a smartly simple design, no lace or ribbons or other frills, but stitching of some in-teresting kind as the basis for the design; short sleeves (a no-sleeve dress is not in good taste for this use), perhaps with stitch-ed, turn-back cuffs; a Peter Pan collar, always becoming, or high, turn-down collar; and, of course for a morning or other daytime commencement, the skirt street-length. Accessories: white pumps

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have always longed for a beautiful topaz bracelet, my birth-stone and my favorite stone. I have never had any interest in rings, particularly in a solitaire diamond, which always seems lacking in personality to me. (I'm sure this sounds "queer" to you, doesn't it? It does to most people.) Now I have just become engaged, and my fiance says I may have the bracelet as an en-gagement present, instead of the traditional solitaire diamond, if this is my wish.

What do you advise I do?

Beatrice T.

Follow your heart's desire, and have and wear your topaz brace-let as the symbol of your engage-ment. I've known many brides, untraditionally-minded like you, who found much happiness in having a beautiful bracelet (or beautiful earrings, as are often the choice) rather than a diamond ring. (And, dear girl, your preference doesn't sound at all "queer" to me. . . one's pre-ference about this so-personal pos-session is as individual as one's preference as to color.) What you'd "rather have". I'm sure what your fiance would rather you'd have! And the topaz has a wondrous sparkle, a deep radiance.

CHILD OUT OF DANGER

Chicago, May 1—(AP)— Nine-teen-day-old Cheryl Lynn Ga-brenz, who was given two blood transfusions despite her parents' opposition on religious grounds, will leave hospital soon "com-pletely out of danger," a spokes-man said Monday. The baby was born with an Rh blood condition which often proves fatal. The par-ents, members of the Jehovah's Witnesses, maintained that blood transfusions violate biblical di-rectives against "blood eating."

Sparkling New Jewels

By ALICE ALDEN

THE bolder the stones, the simpler and more serene the de-sign is the credo of the fine jew-el designer be it of the real or the upper bracket costume type. Coro-subscribes to this belief as demonstrated in a handsome choker-of flashing rhinestones sur-rounded by sapphires in a grace-ful leaf-like motif. Endorsed by Paris, the simple but striking jeweled circlet is worn to em-phasize the low, strapless decol-letage as well as to add sparkling beauty to an entire ensemble.

Fashion Flashes

NOT ALL hats are of the straight-on-the-head, level type. Some of the prettiest hats we have seen are worn tilted to the side and well forward over one eye-brow. One such hat is in pale yellow taffeta entirely covered in heavy dotted veiling and soft-ened with a yellow taffeta rose in front.

POPULARITY is the happy lot of the silk print and jacket en-semble. A delicate violet print, shading to lilac, has a navy back-ground. This print is used for a scoop neckline dress, the neck-line piped in navy like velvet. The matching print jacket has a navy velvet collar and piping on the flared cuffs of the push-up sleeves.

NICE AND NEAT little hats that pack well are always in de-mand. Very attractive is a hat done in white silk faille embroid-ered all over with tiny star-shaped flowers studded with rhinestones.

A WEALTH of beautiful detail marks fur jackets for Spring. Gray broadtail makes a handsome jacket, the body of the garment a darkish gray, with a lighter shade of gray broadtail with scallop effect for the collar, cuffs and deep border hemline. The pet-al-scalloped cuffs are especially pretty.

COLOR plays a big role this Spring. Violet crepe ottoman is used for a charming little date dress, a two-piece design. Jew-eled buttons fasten the nipped-in-at-the-waist jacket, and the skirt has triple pleats on either side of the front.

A BIG REASON looms ahead for the dry cleaners, what with all the emphasis on white for late spring and summer wear—for suits, coats and dresses as well as accessories; in town as well as for country and resort wear. Creamy white silk and wool faille is used for a handsome costume, a sheath dress with trouser tucked skirt and a deep scoop neckline. With it a matching jacket smartly tail-ored, closing with four jeweled buttons, and made with notched revers and flared, pointed, turn-back cuffs on the bracelet-length sleeve.

BE WISE...!

The owl says: "Be wise, take care of your clothes today." For the cost of clothes will run you into money. So store your Win-ter clothes at City Cleaners and have your Spring clothes made ready to wear.

Toronto's M.O.H. Is Frustrated Psychiatrists

By MEL SUFFIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 2—(CP)—Toronto's medical health officer is a frustrated man.

That might imply that he should go to see a psychiatrist. But the trouble is that psychiatrists are the cause of Dr. Gordon Park Jackson's frustration.

For months Dr. Jackson has been trying to hire a psychiatrist as director of the mental hygiene division of his department.

He reported yesterday to a board of health meeting that he has interviewed eight applicants, all friendly and interested to a point. Then, inevitably, they pottered out.

In many cases the prospects said their future in present positions appeared to be much better despite the fact the salaries offered by the city was higher—ranging as high as $10,000.

Asked why the city is having so much difficulty filling the position, Dr. Jackson said he has a suspicion that some "guiding influence" is frustrating his efforts. He declined to amplify this explanation.

One possible cause of Dr. Jackson's frustration is the way the whole question was kicked around politically before the city decided it wanted a psychiatrist.

For months there was bitter debate between two groups in civic politics. One wanted the mental division headed by a doctor with psychiatric help. The other wanted an outright psychiatrist in charge.

The campaigns of both sides appeared on the road to success several times before the city made up its mind.

Now, it has been suggested, psychiatrists would rather stay with lower-paying jobs than step into a position which is still the subject of some political ill-feeling.

In other words, maybe they don't want to expose themselves civil servant on a political hot stove to the frustrations of being a

Old Pet Mallard Famous on Coast

Vancouver, (CP)—A 15-year-old pet mallard, "Goo-goo" has become a famous duck in these parts.

It was a good laying duck until two years ago, when it laid the biggest egg of all by turning into a drake. Since that time 13 years ago Goo-goo has never looked back.

His pins are rusty with age and he hobbles wearily around the backyard of Mrs. Lamontaine, who found Goo-goo when it was a downy baby.

In the first blush of growth Goo-goo laid some 324 eggs, then output slowed and it began cluckling. The tall feathers changed and the colored ring typical of male mallards came on the neck. The beak darkened and the eggs stopped entirely.

Experts came around and suggested its name be changed to says the recipe," but it never able to its sex.

As a baby duck, Goo-goo had only one brief fling. "A wild mallard was winging over the yard and saw Goo-goo and put on his brakes," said Mrs. Lamountaine. "Goo-goo fluttered nobly and got about two feet off the ground. Then she sank. She'd put on too much weight to fly."

So Goo-goo resigned herself to the quiet life, and now tobbles around in the sunshine, smug in its fame.

Eskimo Chief Pilot At Northern Harbor

Churchill, Man., (CP)—Eskimo John Eli has been official pilot at one of Canada's most northerly harbors for more than 30 years. And he's the official interpreter, too.

He has been in Fort Churchill hospital most of the winter undergoing treatment. There, he finds the central heating a pleasant contrast to the igloo he lives in at Coral Harbor, on Southampton Island at the top end of Hudson Bay.

Southampton Island is 300 miles northeast of this Hudson Bay port.

Mr. Eli first saw a white man when a United Whaler put into Coral Harbor when he was six. Later he joined a whaler crew and learned the English he has stood him in good stead as an interpreter throughout his adult life.

When not serving as pilot or interpreter, he hunts white bear and narwhal, the latter for its tusks. On his hunting trips over the Polar Ice he uses 12 dogs, hitched fan style.

SOLD OLD COCONUTS

Birmingham, England—(AP)—A man was rebuked in court here for offering for sale coconuts which, he said, had a drink in them had dried up. He had compensated for the lack of fluid by filling holes in the coconuts and filling them with water.

U.S. RELINQUISHES

Mr. St.-Laurent described the agreement as a "reasonable compromise in an admittedly complicated situation." Although under no legal obligation to do so, the U.S. Canada charges only specific requests originally put forward by the Canadian government.

Praised Co-operation

He praised the co-operation shown by U. S. authorities when, legally, they didn't have to modify the lease in any way.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Mr. St. Laurent's praise would reassure those Canadians who were beginning to feel the two countries no longer could co-operate in the old friendly way.

In announcing the agreement, Mr. St. Laurent disclosed the government would introduce before the parliament legislative measures to help Canada discharge obligations under the Atlantic pact, including bills to extend anti-espionage and anti-sabotage laws to protect allied forces serving in Canada.

Other Developments

There were these other developments in the commons:

1. Opposition members renewed a campaign against a 5 per cent distribution levied by the general sales tax to 10 per cent from eight per cent.

2. Finance Minister Abbott brought down a supplementary estimate of $2,000,000 to provide $40-a-month supplementary payments to unemployable veterans to help them meet the cost of living.

3. The government moved to extend civilian job protection to some member of the armed forces besides the special Korean force. The extension applies to members of the reserve forces joining the active services for three-year terms.

The senate, meeting for the first time since the Easter recess March 31, dealt with a variety of minor legislation.

Tax Capital Gains Proposed

In debate on the taxation resolutions, Ross Thatcher (CCF-Moose Jaw) suggested that a tax on capital gains would eliminate the need for an increase in sales and excise taxes.

James Sinclair, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott, said one of the insin reasons why a capital-gains tax was not imposed in Canada was that it would discourage the investment needed to develop resources.

Several opposition members repeated requests for repeal of the increase in the general sales tax. F. D. Shaw (SC-Red Deer) described the tax as one which "goes right into the pockets of the poorest man in the land."

Donald Fleming (PC-Toronto-Eglinton) said the government had reduced the excise tax on candy, chewing gum and chocolate to 15 percent from 30 percent because of the damage the high tax had done the industry. He believed the tax should be repealed completely.

Mr. Sinclair said the opposition was opposed to every taxation proposal advanced by the government. However, the government was faced with the need of raising revenues to meet defence costs.

Meet In May

Labor Minister Gregg told the Commons National Advisory Council on manpower is being called to meet some time in May.

He made the statement when Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC-Hamilton West) had said there was a great scarcity of skilled labor to meet the needs of industry.

Mrs. Fairclough suggested the committee—which has met once since its formation early this year—should work more continuously because of what she termed the "lack of adequate labor forces." She said the operation of the committee is to advise the government on how best to utilize available labor in carrying out the defence preparedness program.

No Significant Results

Agriculture Minister Gardiner said the experimental farms service has tested the treatment of soil with lime and artificial fertilizer before sowing and found that it does "not give significant results to the farmer."

However, he told W. Chester S. Mackenzie (Progressive) in the Commons, that his department, though it has made this information public, has not discouraged the use of liquid fertilizer.

Mr. McLaren had asked whether the department had discouraged farmers from using liquid fertilizers.

THREE PAKISTAN PORTS

Karachi (CP) — With the port of Chalna now in operation, Pakistan now has three ports geared to handle import and export trade. Chalna and Chittagong are located in eastern Pakistan while West Pakistan's port of Karachi is a historical outlet for the sub-continent.

African Tribes Wealthy From Wool Like Air Trips

Johannesburg. (CP) — An almost naked Bantu boy stepped from an airplane here the other day. Unconcernedly he strolled up and down until the onlookers made him wrap himself in his brightly-colored blanket.

Passengers and airport officials in South Africa are becoming accustomed to such sights as these. But the Basutos who fly today, were yesterday on their ponies, and probably never before saw an airplane or a train.

The lives of the 564,000 Basutos who live in the beautiful mountains of the 12,000-square-mile British protectorate between the Orange Free State, Cape Province and Natal are changing rapidly.

For the Basutos are mostly sheep-farmers, and of all sheep farmers they pay no income tax on the fortunes they have been reaping in the wool boom of the past few years.

Now they're in the money and some of the best wool-growers are getting cheques for as much as £2,000 ($6,000) at a time. But they're thrifty people. When a payment of £7,000 was arranged for a Basuto Co-operative of 200 members, they told the district commissioner they would like to cash the cheque. The plane that brought the cash returned with £4,000 of it to be placed in the savings bank.

Other natives hoard their earnings in a hole in the wall or a niche in the floor.

Enlightened Race

The Basutos however are not content with merely saving their money. More than any other tribe they appreciate the benefits of education. They are planning to impose a graded levy on wool profits to speed developments of their schools. At least two-thirds of their children now receive free schooling, a very high attendance record for African natives.

Many of them are buying "luxuries" that were only dreamt of in former years. They ride down the steep gullies on their ponies to local stores to purchase dress lengths for their women, and the multi-colored blankets that are their national costume. They order bicycles and baths, refrigerators and expensive saddlery.

In a region where the only roads are mere tracks, air travel has made an enormous appeal to the natives. Five chartered air companies operate to Basutoland while planes are frequently chartered for special trips by parties of natives. Football fans for instance recently hired an airplane to attend a match at a place that would have taken them three days to reach by horse.

DID NOT KNOW WORDS

St. Thomas, May 1—(CP)—Last week after diligently practising singing of America, the St. Thomas Kiwanis Club went to Milwaukee on an international good-will visit. The Star Spangled Banner was called for at dinner but not one of the St. Thomas Kiwanians knew even the first line. They were aware that it was the official United States National Anthem but 300 Milwaukee Kiwanians sang the first verse of God Save The King without using song sheets.

Broadcast Did Not Mention Shower of Eggs

London, May 2. (AP)—Monday radio, quoting the Soviet Tass agency, Tass gave this description of New York's May Day parade:

"As many thousands of workers, students, youths and professional people began marching in the streets, many more thousands lined the sidewalks.

"A large number of police cars were stationed along the line of march. Many workers watching the parade, applauded when the demonstrators passed them."

The broadcast didn't mention the shower of ripe eggs, fruit and vegetables which greeted the thin line of communist marchers.

HEADS R.C.M.P.

Ottawa, May 2 (CP) — The first big breach in the defence department's program of unification for the three forces has been disclosed.

C. M. Drury, deputy defence minister, told the commons public accounts committee yesterday that the department has abandoned the experiment of having the army generally made responsible for repair and maintenance of vehicles for all three forces.

The reason, he told Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C. (PC-Nanaimo), was 'that the navy and air force "had perhaps a lesser feeling of responsibility for looking after expenses" than when they themselves had to pay for looking after the vehicles.

"They put in for repairs that were unnecessary," he said, "and they didn't take as good care of motor transport as they might have if they were personally responsible themselves."

So the idea was dropped as an economy measure, it was originally adopted as part of the drive to consolidate the forces as much as possible.

Intrigued by this departure from unification, Progressive Conservative Pearkes called for a full statement on any other similar breaches in the unification line and was promised one.

Emerges As Issue

The motor vehicle emerged as an issue on another front when members impaled a familiar figure on their parliamentary controversial and indignation. He is the military officer who allegedly plays fast and loose with staff cars and other vehicles bought and run at government expense.

Capt. George Cruickshank (Liberal Fraser Valley) said some officers get driven to work in Ottawa and have military cars take their children to school as well. That sort of thing could only cause ill-feeling. Even captains were entitled to call cars to go short distances.

Entitled to Drive

Mr. Drury said only the chiefs of staff are entitled to be driven to work but other officers have the right to call on the pool of vehicles for their duties if the use of a car is necessary. If some of Capt. Cruickshank's statements were true, the system must have been abused.

Ross Thatcher (CCF-Moose Jaw) said he saw a lawful lot of officers getting driven around by privates" in Ottawa and wondered why the officers didn't drive themselves.

Mr. Drury brought down the House when he said "that's one of the most expensive things you could do."

By experience, he said, it has been found that the one way to operate a staff car satisfactorily is to put one man in charge of it, make his responsible and let no one else drive it.

Egyptian Police Stand Guard After Ban Lifted

Cairo, May 2 (Reuters) —Two thousand steel-helmeted Egyptian police stood by in Cairo yesterday when the 2 1-2-year-long ban on the fanatical Moslem Brotherhood was lifted.

They stood guard as members reoccupied their old headquarters. Large units were also posted outside mosques where prayers were said for revival of the Brotherhood, an extremist political as well as religious organization.

But everything went off quietly.

The Brotherhood was officially dissolved during the Arab-Jewish war in Palestine. It continued to operate underground, and was blamed for terrorism culminating in the assassination of Premier Minister Nokrashy Pasha in1948.

Parliament voted to lift the ban, but said it will not permit it dabbling in politics again.

Saleh Ashmawy, Moslem leader, warned that it accepted "no limitations on our activities—or we fight."

Distinct Lack Of Outstanding Class in Derby

By JOHN CHANDLER

Louisville, Ky., May 2 (AP)— With a distinct lack of outstanding class in the field for the 1951 Kentucky Derby, it began to appear today that the $100,000 gallop Saturday may be a scrap between Eddie Arcaro and Ben Jones.

At least, these two old partners in this famous turf classic have a pretty good hand in the 77th derby. This showed up yesterday in the $10,000 derby trial, a one-mile race which affords three-year-old horses their final prep for the main event.

Jones, a Texas-United Calumet Farm colt which wasn't even considered for the derby after two weeks ago, pounded down to the wire a driving winner of derby trial. More impressive, thought some observers, was the fast-closing Battle Morn ridden by the Cain Hoy Stable veteran Arcaro.

Jones has won five derbies, more than any other trainer. Arcaro has ridden four derby winners, more than any jockey.

Although Arcaro piloted three winners for Jones — Lawrin, Whirlaway and Citation—they will be on opposite sides of the fence Saturday.

The derby trial did little to clear up the confusion, for none of the more-highly-regarded horses skipped the race. Now the weekly goes right to the big grand climax, where Battle Morn, Fanfare, Repetoire, Mamelukes, Noble, Big Stretch, Ruhe, and the others will have to put up or shut up.

There is little doubt, however, that Battle Morn and Fanfare would be close to favoritism on the mutuel board, if for no other reason than the derby trial. Battle Morn seems to have the edge here because his trail of coming from far back and the derby itself is a quarter of a mile longer than yesterday's race.

Chinese Owner Captures First British Stake

Newmarket, England, May 2— (Reuters)—Ki Ming today won the two thousand guineas first stake of Britain's five annual classic turf races.

Ki Ming, ridden by Australian Arthur Breasley and starting at 100-8, collected the richest prize in the 142-year-history of the race—£14,631 ($43,181).

Officers and Men in Field Welcome Decision to Form Commonwealth Division

Tokyo, May 2 — (Reuters)— Officers and men of the Commonwealth forces in Korea today warmly welcomed the decision to form a Commonwealth division.

They said it will give the Commonwealth a bigger say in the tactical handling of the Korean campaign, lessen supply and administration problems and "show the world how an empire division fights."

Brig.-Gen. John Rockingham, commander of the Canadian 25th Brigade, said he is glad there will be a Commonwealth divisional commander, an officer with sufficient seniority to be given a say in how to deploy the Commonwealth forces as one team.

(The commander - designate himself, British Maj-Gen. A. J. H. Cassels said in Melbourne, Australia, has some ideas of Korea fighting "but I am not telling just yet, I will wait until I get there to check them.")

A British staff officer, announcement by his own wife, attended: "at last we shall have someone of sufficient seniority to be able to speak for us at higher levels."

Fifty per cent of our headaches will disappear once the division is operating. With two separate brigades operating independently of each other, as it has been hitherto, administration and supply problems have been a constant hindrance to our efficiency."

A British sergeant who endured last winter's campaign in Korea put it more earthily: "We will not feel poor relations out here any longer. Perhaps we shall not have to beg for sufficient kit and equipment from our allies."

The division, whose formation was officially announced yesterday, will embrace British, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand fighting units and an Indian field ambulance unit. Cassels will be its operational commander, but its administration will come under Gen. Sir Horace Robertson, Australian commander of Commonwealth occupation forces in Japan.

Robertson said here today that Cassels is not expected to reach Korea for about three weeks, and he will take a month or more for the new division to be ready as an integrated fighting unit.

"A lot of additional ancillary troops, such as signallers, military police and supply troops, will have to be shipped to Korea to bring up the division's strength," he said.

"I think it will be a first-class division."

Hangman's Tree Sinister Scene

Lillooet, B. C. — (CP) — Gaunt and sinister, a hangman's tree stands on a bluff overlooking this Fraser Valley town.

Just who was hanged there, and when, seems to be unknown but six unmarked graves at the foot of the twisted pine are a grim reminder of what may have been early carbon justice, carried out when the town was a roaring mining camp.

The hills around Lillooet once were covered with this bush, but when in there since they cut it all down for firewood and building material except for the pine plus. The tree has become a tourist attraction, but only in daylight. Not many like to be there at all past the grim relic in the dark.

Standing in the spring sunshine the old pine keeps its history to itself.

OUTLAW POKER

Sacramento, Calif., May 2 — (AP)—The State Assembly voted 61 to 9 yesterday to outlaw draw poker in California.

Voting Shows Slight Trend To Right

Glasgow, May 2—(Reuters)— Voting in yesterday's Scottish municipal elections showed a slight trend to the right, results indicated today.

Conservatives in Glasgow increased their majority over Labor on the local council from one seat to five. In Dundee they seized two seats from Labor.

Socialists over the whole country lost 23 seats but gained 16.

The results showed no changes in control anywhere.

Apathy and rain kept citizens from the polls. In some places only 30 per cent voted.

ON FRIENDLY TERMS

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) Archie Markovitch, 40, on trial for murder in the Feb. 19 stabbing of his 20-year-old nephew, testified Tuesday that he and the nephew, Lawrence Markovitch, had been on friendly terms.

"I treated him like a nephew — more than a nephew, like a real pal," he said.

Markovitch is accused of stabbing his nephew in the chest with a knife after a quarrel in their week-end apartment.

The case is expected to go to the jury today.

British People Ready to Open Festival Gates

London, May 2 — (CP) — The British people, who are said to take their pleasures painfully, set out tomorrow to show that they, too, can be the life of the pary.

From tiny villages with such rakish names as Nether Wallop and Great Duddington to the strange metal structures which have been grafted on the grey, blitzed heart of London, Britain will be "at home" to the world in a five-month frolic of fun, fantasy and color.

For better or worse, the Festival of Britain—a reality at last —will unfold with varying pomp on 2,000 communities across the country. With touching faith sponsors of festival arrangements in some small places have even engaged interpreters to cope with the expected tourist traffic.

The festival was originally planned years ago as a token of national resurgence, a sign that Britain had come back the hard way. Since then the lofty purpose has been somewhat changed by world events, and the keynote now is gaiety.

"I want everyone in Britain to see it, to take part in it, to enjoy it," says Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison, today a festival booster. "I want to hear the people sing."

Ready for Fun

There appears to be a good chance that Morrison will get his wish. A mounting sense of exhilaration is in the air. The festival will be as big a success as a previous one 100 years ago. After a winter of sacrifice, Britain again seems to be ready for a season of fun.

The festival's centre-piece, a 27-acre site on the River Thames carved out of an unpromising maze of warehouses, wharves and bombed buildings, certainly has curiosity value. Everything about it is original.

There is a 250-foot-tall, latticed-steel object, shaped like a slender cigar and suspended on pylons. Dubbed the skylon, it casts an eerie glow over a famous stretch of the river between Waterloo and Westminster Bridges. Approximately, it has been christened "Skylon" by an indignant housewife who wrote a London newspaper complaining that the term "vertical feature" was not dignified enough.

The architecture of the south bank as a whole is light and airy, despite a furious controversy among designers.

Squabbling Socialists Unify To Beat Down Conservative Attempt to Split Labor Party

London, May 2 (AP)—Britain's squabbling socialists closed their ranks solidly last night to beat down a divide-and-conquer maneuvre engineered by a chuckling Winston Churchill.

Taking his cue from the rebel Labor members' own protests over rearmament, the Conservative leader came up with a cagily-worded motion designed to draw support of the dissident Socialists.

But the rebels refused to be taken in. They kept a solid party front that defeated Churchill's motion by a 13-vote margin — 305 to 292—and left Prime Minister Attlee still clinging to control of the government.

Churchill sent in his deputy, Anthony Eden, to offer a motion expressing the anxiety of the House that the rearmament program" was based on estimates of defence production which were not supported by the ministers principally concerned.

The reference was to Aneurin Bevan and Harold Wilson, who resigned as Labor Minister and Board of Trade president in protest over the budget.

But both Bevan and Wilson refused to be put on the spot. Along with other Labor party left wingers, they voted with the government.

Assailed Program

Both Bevan and Wilson had assailed the rearmament program as incapable of fulfillment unless a bid was forthcoming from the United States., but neither went as far as to refuse to accept the production estimates.

Commening on the Tory manoeuvre, Bevan said:

"I hope that before long the House will have an opportunity of discussing this matter in the absence of old-fashioned parliamentary tactics."

Churchill was in top taunting form all evening. Toward the close of the debate, Defence Minister Emanuel Shinwell started to say he was aware the Conservative motion was designed to widen any cleavage that might exist in the ranks of the Labor party. I can assure Mr. Churchill, . . .

But Churchill broke in to remark "I do not want your assurance."

"I do not value it if you give it," he insisted.

The gist of Shinwell's remarks were lost in an uproar of laughter and jeers.

Miners to get Personal Letter From Attlee

London, May 2—(CP)— Britain's 700,000 miners will get a personal letter from Prime Minister Attlee along with their pay cheques this week.

In it the Premier will express his thanks for their response to his call last January for 3,000,000 extra tons of coal by the end of April.

Officials announced yesterday that the miners had passed the figure with 78,000 tons to spare. Fuel Minister Philip Noel-Baker said the Saturday shifts made most of the difference, adding: "The miners have kept it up in a way everyone admires."

Production in the 17 weeks to April 28 was 71,321,700 tons, compared with 68,244,000 tons in the first 17 weeks of 1950.

BAYSIDE

New Windows to Be Dedicated at Wesley United Church

Plans are in readiness for the formal dedication of the new windows now installed in Wesley United Church, Bayside. Two years ago, the congregation re-decorated their church, placed two pulpit chairs and carpeted the aisles, choir loft and pulpit platform. At the last congregational meeting it was decided to install new windows in place of the ordinary painted glass which never proved satisfactory.

These new windows are of frosted glass in alternating colors, the two centre windows on each side of the church display an amber cross with light shaded background.

The dedicatory service will be held Sunday evening, May 13th, when it is expected many of the former members and friends of the congregation will be in attendance.

Advised Truman Four Years Ago Korean Danger

Arlington, May 2 (AP) — Lt.-Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, adviser to President Truman nearly four years ago, was quoted today as having told a Soviet-controlled group of North Korean officials:

"The United States is not going to intervene militarily in Korea."

Wedemeyer's report, which he submitted to Mr. Truman on Sept. 8, 1947, was released with certain parts deleted. It was made public by the senate, which has been "consulting in advance of its inquiry into the recall of Gen. Douglas MacArthur."

Questioning on MacArthur's dismissal from Korean military command are to begin Thursday.

Wedemeyer warned against U.S. retreat at its forces from Korea, stating out that the Russians installed North Korean through communists.

Considerable Unrest

"There is considerable unrest in South Korea," Wedemeyer reported. "Security forces available to General Hodge are adequate to cope with any internal disorders, but are definitely inadequate, even with United Nations support, to defend South Korea against an all-out attack by the Soviet Union."

Wedemeyer was sent to Korea by President Truman on June 19, 1947, to make an appraisal of the situation there. He headed a fact-finding mission which made a two-month survey of the Far East.

Wedemeyer was sent to Korea to sponsor a huge new aid program for the country. He met with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek first agreed to sweeping reforms in his regime. Chiang's promises as to China were not followed.

Wedemeyer's recommendations for Korea were carried out in part by the U.S. American occupation forces were not withdrawn until after the Soviet forces in North Korea had pulled out.

Thereafter the U.S. continued military and economic aid, and had a military advisory group on the scene at the time the North Korean invasion last June 27.

Court Dismisses R. A. F. Officer From Service

Didsforth, England, May 2—(Reuters)—PILOT Robert D. Elsick, 31, a fighter officer in the R.A.F., base here, Tuesday was charged with rubber-stamping an enlisted woman's midriff—and ordered to be dismissed from the service.

The court's findings are subject to confirmation. Elsick defended all charges.

LAW. Patricia Elliott alleged Elsick had stamped her midriff with a rubber device which left the legend: "Signals Traffic, R.A.F. Didsforth." She said he told her it was part of an initiation ceremony.

Cpl. Jean Nancy Turnquil said Elsick once pulled her shirt out and put his arm around her. "I was scared of him," she said.

Elsick called witnesses who identified him as superintendent W.A.A.F. girls for wearing their shirts pulled out of the front and tied in a knot "like a pantie."

Weather Control Thought Possibility for Future Years

Victoria, B.C., (CP) — The man who put rain-making on a scientific basis explained his work here recently to a conference of Canadian and United States government officials.

Tall, youthful—looking Dr. Vincent J. Schaefer of Schenectady, N.Y., addressed a joint meeting of the Columbia River basin forecast committee and the western water conference. The meeting was attended by more than 100 officials from British Columbia and eight American states.

Employed by the General Electric Company for 29 years, Dr. Schaefer has been in the research department for 20 years.

During the Second World War he did research work on aircraft icing for the U.S. government and discovered that icing occurred because of super-cooled clouds.

"It was while studying why clouds super-cooled that I discovered how to make rain," Dr. Schaefer said in an interview.

Most only did his studies show him how to make rain, he added, but how to prevent thunder, lightning and hail.

The 44-year-old researcher said his work now on producing certain types of weather, and preventing others, was being done for the United States signal corps and the office of naval research.

General Electric, he said, was only interested in making rain from the scientific, and not commercial, viewpoint.

Dr. Schaefer himself, however, believes great benefits will some day be derived from control of the weather. He maintains that there should be government control of rainmaking and that there will be need of international agreements.

"Weather is no respecter of boundaries," he said, "so if we're going to do anything about it, there has got to be a plan on a large scale."

Dr. Schaefer feels, too, that as the art of rainmaking is developed, there will be need for licensing those engaged in the practice in order to protect the public from unscrupulous operators.

While he discovered the method of seeding clouds with dry ice and silver iodide, he actually has yet to make any rain himself.

"I work in the laboratory," he said. "Others do the seeding."

He said that close to 1,000, and possibly more, rainmaking tests have been made so far and that results have been very successful.

Milk Producers Request Board For Higher Prices

Toronto, May 1 — (CP) — Toronto district milk producers today asked the Ontario Milk Board for higher prices from city dairies.

R. F. Lick, secretary - manager of the whole Milk Producers League of Ontario, said producers have been granted increases of 33 per cent since 1946 but production costs had increased 57 per cent.

Producers say it costs $5.71 to produce 100 pounds of milk for which they now receive $4.20 from Toronto dairies. They announced earlier they seek an increase of $1.20, which if granted would increase local milk prices an estimated three cents a quart.

STOCK CAR RACING

With the season's opening date approaching, speed and thrills in their purest form, stock auto racing is gradually coming to its own as a summer thriller. Motorists believe here a large following and are attracting large crowds wherever meets are held.

Stock car racing, practically a sports innovation has caught the public fancy and is attracting large crowds wherever meets are conducted especially in Toronto, Detroit and other metropolitan centres.

It met with success here last summer in an abbreviated season at Speedway Parkhead, a track circuited 10 miles east of Belleville, No. 2 Highway. Clark Burrows, owner of the Speedway was successful at a recent meeting of the Canadian Auto Racing Society in securing a large number of Toronto entries. Besides these several local drivers have signified their intention of taking part in the meet which will inaugurate the sport here on May 26th.

The popularity of stock car auto racing is mainly due to the fact that one can become a competitor with a very small outlay of cash. Inasmuch as these is, under regulations, just so many changes that can be performed on a stock car the expenditure in conditioning the car for racing is restricted. Some boys — who have never raced before — are turning out a real cool stock car at wrecker's cost, and after fitting it for good performance will go out and beat the oldest and best of auto racers. The high top speed of the later model cars, in auto racing, in sometimes overshadowed by the courage, cunning, nerve, and driving ability of a fewer top speed older model. This fact was proven by the winning of the Highest Points Award last season by a "boy" driving a 1934 model.

CAREFUL, OLD BEAN.

Lord Athol Layton, the impressive British wrestler, will oppose Big Ben Morgan, bewhiskered behemoth, in the feature bout in the Belleville Arena on Friday night. Layton, master of the English octopus hold and the punishing jade chop, hails from Surrey, England, has a reach of 84½ inches, the longest known reach in the athletic world. Six feet six and a half inches tall, weighing 256 pounds, Layton is undefeated in 218 bouts in Singapore, Java, India, etc., besides several matches on this continent.

The handsome English athlete, with all his marvelous record and unquestionable ring power, will have one of the sternest tests he's encountered to date in North America when he bumps into the damaging Morgan. The 350-pound Morgan is a big, experienced and ruthless wrestler. The outcome will have considerable bearing on future matches for each man.

Later:— Dick Burrowes reminds us that work is going on apace at his Speedland Parkway and the track will be open for practice for local drivers by May 10th. Further info can be obtained from Dick at the Burrowes Car Sales, 120 Front Street.

THE MORNING AFTER — WIFE SPEAKING

GOOD MORNING, my bright international mate,
My outstanding genius in problems of state,
I trust all is clear in that wonderful mind,
Which last night remodeled the whole of mankind.

Your handling of Russia, the Ruhr, Palestine,
And China and Greece; it was masterly, fine;
You're sure to be named "Man of the Year",
Here's four or five aspirins — swallow them dear.

Awake, my fine songster, it's well on toward noon,
All morning I've waited, just hoping you'd croon,
A measure from "Chloe" or "Deep Rolling Sea"
Which last night you sang until half after three.

You awakened the neighbors, you tripped on the mat,
And one of your props was your hostess' hat,
I'm sure she will want you again for tonight,
The life of the party, whenever you're tight.

Arise, my sweet prince, but be careful — don't skid,
Arise and consider the things that you did,
The gangster garden, the splintered grand piano,
It sounded just like an old-fashioned barrage.

Go see your hostess — and carry a check,
I think it you sign it just "Pain in the Neck",
The bank will OK it — it would have to be you
The clown that went berserk that day and the deer".

So drink up that setzer, you chattering drone,
It's said to be good for a splintering bone,
I wish I were Sandow; how far I would throw you,
For the next thirty days please pretend I don't know you,
My female Jackass; my dim — witted duffer,
You say you feel awful! — Well, darn it all, suffer.—Anon.

Bob Feller, Starting Year Off With a Bang, Wants to Win One World Series Game

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated From Sports Writer)

One last ambition—to get another shot at a World Series victory—is gnawing Bob Feller on to what may be one of greatest seasons of his illustrious career.

Feller, baseball's best right-handed pitcher since the days of Walter Johnson and Pete Alexander, is a fixture in the hurlers' hall of fame with his strikeout records, two-no-hitters and 200-plus victories. The Cleveland righthander has realized all his ambitions—except one. Despite two cracks at it, a World Series triumph thus far has eluded him.

This is the year, avers the erstwhile fireballer. Reaching the twilight of his career, the 32-year-old Feller knows he hasn't too much time left.

Pitching with head as well as his arm, Feller is showing flashes of his old-time form in early season. He has made three starts, has gone the route each time and has won all three.

He pitched his best game of the campaign last night, whipping the power-packed Boston Red Sox 7-1 with a six-hitter.

The victory kept the Indians in a first-place tie with Washington, who overcame an 8-3 deficit to outlast the Browns 9-8 in a 13-inning night affair at St. Louis.

Cardinals on Top

St. Louis Cardinals took undisputed possession of first place in the National League, whipping Johnny Sain and the Braves 5-3 under the Boston lights. The Braves managed to hold on to second place when Pittsburgh upset the Dodgers 6-3 in Brooklyn.

The Phillies tied the Dodgers for third shading Cincinnati Reds 6-5 in a Philadelphia night game. New York's awakening Giants made it two in a row with a 5-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs in a Polo Grounds evening encounter.

New York Yankees stayed close on the heels of the American League leaders, tripping the White Sox 8-3 in Chicago. The collarite Philadelphia Athletics rallied for eight runs in the 11th inning to rout the Tigers 9-1 in Detroit and end their 10-game losing streak.

Doby Leads Indians

The largest crowd of the season, 33,462 fans saw Larry Doby and Harry (Suitcase) Simpson lead the Indians, Doby batted in three runs with a single and double, Simpson got two hits and scored twice. Bill Wight lost his third straight game, Lou Boudreau, returned to the city where he gained fame as manager and player, slammed a double in four times at bat for the Red Sox. His wild throw, however, helped the Indians in their scoring.

Home runs by Mickey Mantle and Yogi Berra helped Vic Raschi gain his third victory for the Yankees. Gene Stinson, obtained from Cleveland, made his White Sox debut with a two-run homer in his first time at bat. The Yanks played without Joe DiMaggio who rested with a stiff neck.

Rookie Lou Limmer's three-run double garnered the Athletics' eight-run uprising against loser Dizzy Trout and Gene Bearden. Hank Wyse was the winner.

Gains Second Win

Tommy Poholsky gained his second St. Louis victory with a six-hitter against the Braves. He was aided by Red Rustal and Steve Bilko, who hammered homers against Sain, Bob.

Robin Roberts survived a five-run eighth inning by the Reds to register his third victory for the Phils. He had a two-hitter until then. Homers by Dick Sisler and Granny Hamner aided Willie Ramsdell's doom.

A grand-slam homer by shortstop Alvin Dark in the sixth won for the Giants. Jim Hearn, aided by reliefer Sheldon Jones, staggered through to victory. Paul Minner was the loser. Umpire Frank Dascoli cleared the Cub bench of all its 11 players in the fourth inning. The Cubs had been riding him after he had called a balk on Minner the previous inning.

Ralph Kiner's third homer was one of the 15 hits amassed by the Pirates off four Brooklyn pitchers. Cliff Chambers won his second game thrashed the Dodgers with six hits. Eve Fallon, making his first start, was the Brooklyn loser.

Barrie Flyers Favored to Win Over Winnipeg

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian From Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, May 2—(CP)—Barrie Flyers will enter the Memorial Cup finals here tonight as 7-to-5 series favorites over Winnipeg Monarchs.

Local bookmakers earlier in the week were offering 8-5 on Barrie. Take your choice at 8 to 5 was the betting for the opening contest.

Monarchs went through a light workout last night at the ampitheatre—scene of the first, second, fourth and probably other games. Barrie only sweated was Laurie Mitchell, brilliant right-winger who is suffering a leg injury. The loss of Mitchell probably would mean double duty by captain Elliott Chorley and Jim Earle, both first-string forwards.

Flyers, who arrive here yesterday morning, held a skating and shooting workout in the afternoon, but kept away from scrimmage. Pat Flanagan, which averages about nine pounds lighter a man than Monarchs, appeared sharp.

The few allowed in at the workout appeared of opinion that Barrie is one of the fastest eastern clubs to come west. The Flyers seemed to be in wonderful condition.

Games Are Sell-outs

The first four games—three at Winnipeg and one at Brandon—already are a sell-out. Tickets for the Winnipeg contests went on sale yesterday morning and "Sold out" sign went up about an hour after the wickets opened. Buyers of the fans were in line from late the previous night.

Meanwhile, coach Happy Emms of Barrie still was hollering last night about playing three games in four nights. After tonight's game the teams lay off Thursday but play again here Friday and in Brandon Saturday.

"The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association should realize that we are only boys," he said. "They should space the games so we get at least a day's rest between each contest.

"After each club has played 70 games to reach the final, it really means something to the players. It's the top event of the year for them and they should be given some consideration."

Quebec (Quebec Citadelles, eastern finalists) thought our rink was a loan house, they should see this one."

Mercurys Have Decided Edge In Cup Finals

Owen Sound, Ont., May 2—CP —Fort Frances Canadians and Owen Sound Mercurys meet tonight in a key game of the 1951 Allan Cup finals.

Mercurys currently lead the best-of-seven series 3-1, and a victory tonight would give them a strong grip on the Canadian senior hockey championship.

All games of the series are being played in Owen Sound. This has been sanctioned by W. B. George, first vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, who remained after that he didn't think the series would draw peanuts anywhere else.

A crowd of about 1,500 was out Monday night's game, won 4-3 by Owen Sound, but ticket sales are reported better for tonight and attendance is expected to be more than 2,000.

All three games have been close so far. Mercurys won the opener 4-3 last Thursday and dropped the second to Canadians, the western representatives, 6-4 last Saturday.

The series has been largely a contest between goaltenders. Both Owen Sound's Don Gillen and Fort Frances' Harry Barefoot have been outstanding in each game, first vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, who remained after that he didn't think the series would draw peanuts anywhere else.

Frances X. Shields Named Captain U.S. Tennis Team

The fourth tournament in American Davis Cup tennis forces began to take form Tuesday as Francis X. Shields of New York was named captain of the 1951 Yanks' team.

Shields succeeds Alrich M. Man, Jr., appointed earlier this year as chairman of the Davis Cup committee.

In all probability Shields will lead a four man squad against Australia next month. Whether he will be the team's number one man or not is a question to be settled at Forest Hills late August, when all of the veteran players who have been in the Davis Cup picture declared themselves out of the cup competition.

Shields' career as a player consisted of the 1931, 1937 and 1938 Davis Cup teams. He played in 1931 and 1937 at Wimbledon and in 1938 and was in the first 10 eight times from 1933 to 1946.

Baseball championship tournaments, including Intermediate and Senior, will be held in Western Canada this year.

J. A. (Jimmy) Robinson of Indian Head, secretary-manager of the Regina Baseball Commission for the West, said Tuesday the tournaments will be established, in Saskatchewan, Alberta, Columbia, Manitoba and Alberta.

Provincial champions then will meet in a series of double-header regional clubs and the right to play the best in the Dominion finals. Canada's top team will move into the 17th annual national tournament at Wichita, which starts Aug. 17.

National League President Ford Frick Tuesday warned managers of New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers that fines and suspensions will be assessed if the "unsportsmanlike conduct" continues in games between the two clubs.

Frick has been too much jockeying and other things going on in those games, he said.

Giant pitchers and Brooklyn second baseman Jackie Robinson exchanged heated words in their Sunday's and Monday's games.

At St. Andrews, Scotland, Francis Quimet, former U.S. Open champion and amateur star champion. Tuesday became the first non-Briton ever elected captain of the 200-year-old Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews.

The post has been held by many famous players in the club's 198-year history, among them the King of England since 1930 and the Duke of Windsor in 1935.

A cheque for $1,000 contributed by world heavyweight champion Joe Louis of the United States, was presented Monday by Senator Guglielmo Marconi to Manhattan College basketball star who composed a basketball "Hit" song, New York reports.

Kellogg came to Portsmouth, Va., from Port Monroe, Md., where he is an army sergeant.

The asking price for two Vancouver race tracks has tripped since the slow pace made a few months ago, W. F. Morrissey, of Toronto, National President of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Association, said Tuesday.

Morrissey, acting on behalf of British Columbia interests which went to buy Lansdowne and Richmond Park tracks, said a total of $307,500 had been accepted by the B.C. Turf Racing Club which controls the tracks.

Later, however, the price was boosted to $350,000. This, said Morrissey, is unreasonable.

The Western International Senior Hockey League may fold next season unless a wealthy benefactor can be found.

Two clubs in the league—Seattle Maple Leafs and Tri-Cities Dynamiters—hope the franchise will be foreclosed by Spokane and Smelting Company at nearby Trail.

Soccer Season Opens Here On Saturday

This Saturday will see the opening of the soccer season for 1951 with all the entries in the Belleville District Soccer League engaged. Belleville will be out of town for the first game as they are drawn away against Kingston Field in Kingston. S.D. will be playing their first game at home when they take on Peterborough C'Hilliers and Natives receive a visit from Vimy Signals in Kingston at the Rats shoe town.

The Bay of Quinte schedule will commence on Tuesday, May 8th, with all competing teams being engaged.

On Wednesday evening Tyendinaga were accepted for the Bay of Quinte Eastern Ontario League entry, has called a practice with all players requested to be present at Kingston on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock and 3.30 p.m. at the Fair Grounds and all players are requested to be present.

So far three exhibition games have been arranged for the Bay of Quinte All-Stars. The first will be in Toronto against the Toronto Scottish Senior League on June 24th. Another visit to Toronto will take place on August 24th when Bill Hendshaw's Toronto Celtic team will be the opposition. Toronto Celts will visit this district for the return game on September 1st.

Kiner's Playing Around First Not So Classy

By JACK HAND

Brooklyn, May 2 — (AP) This was Ralph Kiner's first trip around the National League as a first baseman. He was on second as he hit a home run first time up at Ebbets Field.

How did he like the new job. Would he rather be back in the outfield?

"I kind of like it," he said "Maybe you feel like you're in the game more.

"So far I've been lucky. Maybe I wouldn't take it like that if I butchered up a few."

Kiner didn't butcher up anything yesterday at Brooklyn. Neither did he remind anybody of Bill Terry or Gil Hodges around the bags.

There was a time when the experienced seemed a bum rap for a come-run champ. Let Bill Meyer, his manager, tell you about it.

"All he knew about the change was what he read in the paper," said Meyer, "Nobody said a thing for a couple of weeks of spring training. One day we were batting (Richey Sid Meyer) asked him if he'd like to give it a whirl. He was willing.

"Some of the fellows on the coast wrote about him as 'the pose man's Zeke Bonura.' He was lousy at first. Rickey even told me 'Do what you want with him' after he saw him a couple of weeks.

"He wanted to go on and so did I. Ralph is a fellow likes to finish anything he starts.

"Last week you'd have it we play Washington in an exhibition our first game at Pittsburgh. And Ralph drops the first thrown in infield practice. The fans start cheering when he catches one.

"But he's been improving fast. The fans were getting on me. Saying I picked out my first hitter. Then he hit a couple and they stopped.

"The fellow is going to be the best first baseman in the league. Mark that down."

Kiner is a little behind last year's homerun race when he had 47. He hit No. 3 April 26, 1950. This year it took him three days longer.

Valleyfield Wins Over St. Michael's Monarchs by 4-1

By VIC MORRIS, JR.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, May 2—(CP)—Hooton (Tex) Blaik's Valleyfield Braves cleared the first hurdle in their hunt for the Alexander Cup by trouncing Toronto St. Michael's 4-1 in the first game of a best-of-seven series for the Canadian major hockey championship.

The Quebec champions had the most power for St. Mike's, who were unable to keep abreast of the fast-stepping Braves after the first period was battled on even terms.

The turning point came midway through the second period when Roland Ouellette (Rickets) Ouellette pushed a picture goal into the Toronto net and moved Valleyfield in to the lead for the balance of the game. The 34-year-old veteran player, who has served his 18 years of hockey at Valleyfield, brought the estimated 4,000 fans to their feet with his fancy stickhandling that completely fooled goalie Phil Hughes.

Valleyfield's other markers were scored by Andre Corriveau, Jean-Paul Biasilion and Jackie Schmidt. Billy McCracken swiped the lone Toronto goal in the middle session.

The superiority of the Quebeckers was shown in the statistical department. Braves poured 34 shots at Hughes while St. Mike's were limited to 21 tries on goalie Paul Leclerc.

Despite the 62 mark the thermometer hit in the rink, the game was played at a fast clip in the last two periods.

Referees Hap Shouldice and Stan Pratt, both Quebec Senior Hockey League officials, handed eight of the 14 minor penalties to St. Mike's.

The teams left for Toronto immediately after the game for the second contest tonight.

Boudreau Would Work Again For Bill Veeck

Cleveland, May 2 — (AP) — Would Lou Boudreau work again for Bill Veeck, former president of the Cleveland Indians?

"Of course I would," Boudreau told a reporter, a rather surprising statement in view of the fact that Veeck refused to fire him as Cleveland's manager.

Boudreau quoted Veeck as saying:

"I'll be back in baseball one of these days—it may be two weeks or it may be several months—but I'll be back. And when I am, I want you to manage my ball club."

However, Lou told the reporter here: "right now I have no managerial ambitions whatever. It looks as if I can help the (Boston) Red Sox for some time to come" as a player.

MEET IN RETURN BOUT

New York, May 2—(AP)—Gene Hairston and Walter Cartier, a couple of ranking middleweights from New York, Tuesday were signed to meet in a return 10-round main event at Madison Square Garden, May 11.

The bout replaces the lightweight title clash between champion Jimmy Carter and Lauro Salas for which was moved back to May 23 because of a training injury suffered by Williams.

Montreal Royals Move to Top Of Int. League

(By The Associated Press)

Montreal Royals are back in first place in the International League pennant race, thanks to nifty relief work by lefty Tom Lasorda.

Lasorda hurled 4 1-3 innings of hitless ball yesterday as the Royals downed Rochester Red Wings 6-5. Royals now lead Syracuse Chiefs by a game. The Chiefs took a 2-0 setback from Ottawa Giants.

Montreal overcame a 5-4 deficit with a two-run rally in the seventh. Bobby Morgan's double drove home the winning run. Charley Kress and Russ Derry batted homers for the Red Wings.

Andy Tomasic, with help in the eighth from Red Herdy, blanked the Chiefs on four hits. Tomasic helped his own cause with a scoring triple in the seventh. Bill Miller was charged with the loss.

Baltimore Orioles outslugged Toronto Maple Leafs 11-6. The Orioles banked away the decision with four runs in the eighth inning. Al Cihocki highlighted the uprising with a two-run single.

Buffalo Bisons and Springfield Cubs were idle.

BOMBERS SIGN COACH

Winnipeg, May 2—(CP)—Ralph Mellamy, president of Winnipeg Blue Bombers Rugby Club, Tuesday night announced the signing of Lorne Trafton as coach for the 1951 season. The contract is for one year.

Trafton was assistant coach of the Los Angeles Rams under Clarke Shaughnessy during 1946-49. He moved to the front office in 1950.

He succeeds Frank Larson who coached the Bombers for the last two seasons. Larson resigned as Winnipeg club last year to the Grey cup final which they lost 13-5 to Toronto Argonauts.

Sporting News Always Found On Premises

Hamilton, May 2 (CP)—A provincial police inspector testified Tuesday that Sporting News, a horse racing information sheet, was invariably found on premises when there was reason to believe bets were being taken.

Inspector John Tomlinson, head of the O.P.P. anti-gambling squad, gave the testimony at the trial of William H. Shaver, 36, and Arthur G. Taylor, 33, on charges of keeping a common gaming house, supplying and transmitting betting information.

He said he was familiar with Sporting News as a "scratch sheet" in Hamilton, St. Catharines, Brantford and Kitchener.

It listed races, horses, weights of jockeys, their names and length of race, he said. It sold on newsstands for 25 cents.

Inspector Tomlinson said Shaver had admitted being owner and proprietor of Sporting News, a mimeographed sheet published six days a week.

S. J. Jones, chief of the regulating department of the Canadian National Telegraphs in Toronto, testified that telegraph equipment at Sporting News was linked to an International Daily News Service.

The service operates through the Daily Turf and Sporting News, Wellington Street, Toronto, with terminals in Toronto and Chicago, and connections with Montreal and St. Laurent, Que.' he said.

Double talk is right up your bridge alley. The word double in bidding is used for dual purposes. One is for bigger penalties; the other is for asking partner to bid something.

A double that expects to defeat opponents is now called penalty double. A double that asks partner to bid something is now called double for takeout or takeout double.

During the days of auction bridge, penalty double was known as business double, takeout double was known as information double. The two kinds became popular before auction changed to contract.

As the story goes, the same foursome of bigheads played auction together frequently. They got into the habit of opening with no-trump bids unless they had a powerful major suit.

As a result, if defender stuck in a suit bid, partner might not have any or many cards in it. And if defender bid no-trump, most of the strength might be with the opposition.

Finally, one defender yelled, "Partner, I must time, they open with no-trump and I have a good hand, I'm gonna double. Not for business, but to ask you to form me which is your best suit."

From then on, double in immediate defence became a popular force to ask partner to make a takeout. He is asked to bid something. More than likely it would be his best suit.

South opens with a heart when you have this west hand:

♣A Q 7 4

You are prepared to go places in one of the three suits. Which one? The one in which your partner has the most cards. How will you get him to tell you? By double.

Your double in this case is for takeout. It says you have as good as an opening one bid. It asks partner which suit he likes best. He had better tell you if he knows what's good for him.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 2 (AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver has made some changes here, too.

I'm not speaking in terms of real-life crime and corruption. But the crime-investigating senator from Tennessee has made Hollywood alter its thinking about gangster pictures.

Top-rank producer Edmund Grainger told me: "The Kefauver hearings had a tremendous impact on the public. People were able to see first-hand what gangsters really look like and how they operate. Now you can't feed them with anything phony.

"Initially, the hearings hurt the picture business, because people stayed at home and watched their TV sets. But I think the investigations will help us in the long run. People are now more aware of and concerned about gambling and gangsterism."

The-type toughs taboo

Grainger said the hearings have outmoded the old-style movie gangster. The movies used to portray criminals as tough-talking mugs. The Kefauver hearings showed many of them to be smooth characters who act like business men.

Edward G. Robinson, the "Little Caesar" one of the most-successful screen gangsters, tried one of his old-style characterizations in "Key Largo." Unfortunately, he conveyed more humor than menace. James Cagney, the famed "Public Enemy" of the early '30s has done a couple of gangster roles recently, but they are "wearing pretty thin."

"We can't get away with that sort of thing any more," Grainger said.

Silver Lining

The Kefauver hearings proved a break for the producer, who was preparing a new version of the old play, "The Racket."

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, May 2—(AP)—Frank Stranahan, who takes on today for the British Amateur, tabs it as one tournament where you can play good golf, have scores that look horrible and still win. . It's the weather, Frank explains. "In one match last year the wind was blowing so hard that the ball was oscillating on the green. You can have a lot of those three-putt greens and wind up with a 76 when you're playing well. . You go over there expecting terrible weather; you're prepared for it so you don't mind.

Math-ter of None

During the basketball season, Middishpan Don Higgs, Navy's crack-shot statistician, fascinated reporters by his adept use of a slide rule in figuring out shooting percentages. . He even demonstrated for one scribe, Mo Siegel, that it was faster than using the baseball experts' stand-by, the percentage book. . The other day Siegel asked for "one of those things and mail it to me. I'm covering the Senators these days and can't figure the batting averages because the book doesn't go below .126."

Sheets and Shells

U.S. amateur golf champion Sammy Urzetta is cooking up a match with Ugo Grappasonni, the Italian champ, after the Walker Cup matches. The proceeds would go to help citizens of Zagarice, Catemaya, Province, the birthplace of Sammy's parents. . Jersey Jones, who hopes to import the newly-crowned British Empire featherweight champion, Roy Ankarah, points out that Roy is one boxer developed during the war. He started fighting with the British troops in Burma. . If he comes here, somebody may revive an old Scottish expression: "throw out the Ankarah."

NEW AIRPORT RADAR

London. (CP) — New radar equipment is to be used at British airports for directing aircraft moving on the ground during fog. Known as the air surface movement indicator, it will enable airfield traffic controllers to operate in the poorest visibility.

CAMPBELLFORD

Jersey Calf Dead On Highway Taken for Deer

Campbellford—Members of the Brighton Provincial Police detachment received a call on Monday morning that a deer, apparently struck by a motorist had been found dead on the highway. They notified a Department of Lands and Forests official and proceeded to the spot where the deer was reported.

When they arrived, the officers and the game officials were surprised to find not a deer, but a heavy bull calf dead on the roadway. The owner of the animal, which had apparently roamed on to the highway, was notified and the officers left, wondering how anyone could mistake a calf for a deer.

Given Seven Days

Roy Gardenier of Peterborough, who was arrested in Campbellford on Sunday, was sentenced to seven days in the county jail in Cobourg, received a fine of $10 and $2.50 costs, and had his car impounded for three months, when he appeared in Magistrate's Court on Monday morning. He was charged and convicted of having liquor in a place other than his residence. The charge arose out of an investigation by Provincial Constable Donald Erskine of Campbellford, into the erratic weavings of a car on Campbellford Streets on Saturday night.

As a result of strict patrols by the provincial police of highways and county roads in the district, several other charges may be laid against the convicted man. Police in the district have put on a determined drive to stamp out infractions of the Highway Traffic Act, and motorists have been warned to conduct themselves accordingly.

STILL A NOVELTY IN GERMANY

As helicopters are still enough of a novelty in Germany to cause people to stop, look and throw the veterans of their necks out of kilter, this publicity stunt in Frankfurt had no trouble in drawing a big crowd to the International auto show. In a grand finale, a stunt man ascended to the top of a 150-foot fire ladder with refreshments for the pilot—Central Press Canadian.

STIRLING

Joint Hostesses Fete Bride-To-Be

Stirling—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bradshaw, James St., was the scene of a happy event on Monday evening when some 20 gathered to do honor to Miss "Mickey" McKee, prior to her coming marriage.

The rooms were artistically decorated in pink and white with bells and balloons. The joint hostesses were Mrs. William Bentley, Mrs. Bert Bastedo and Miss Margaret McGee.

Community singing and music were enjoyed while a mock wedding provided much merriment. Miss McKee was given a seat of honor and Mrs. Bentley read an appropriate address after which Mrs. B. Bastedo and Miss M. McGee presented the bride-to-be with several pieces of crystal ware.

Miss McKee replied graciously after which refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

PICTON

H. S. District Proposed For All, Part County

Picton—A proposal to set up part or all of Prince Edward County as a high school district is being made, following a meeting of county council and representatives of school boards. Warden James Cleminson named Reeve Carson Scott, Harold Barker and H. R. MacDonald and representatives of Picton Collegiate, Wellington Continuation school and Consecon Continuation school, as a committee to investigate and report at the next meeting of council in June.

Gordon Duffin representing the Ontario Department of Education outlined the plan and stated it is entirely up to county people as to whether it is adopted. Establishment of such districts, he revealed, has resulted in thousands more students attending high school, especially since bus service is inaugurated covering a wider area. He stated that in case of the erection of a new high school, the government pays 75 percent of the cost.

Building Inadequate

Gerald Norman, chairman of Picton Collegiate Boards, pointed out that the present building is inadequate, especially if new courses are to be carried on. He suggested that upper school students at Wellington might be brought to Picton. He felt such a high school area would extend to all students of high schools age in the district an equal opportunity to attend high school, and to give them better facilities, including such subjects or instruction in shop work, home economics and agriculture. The plan also involves equalization of the cost of secondary school education in a high school area, with the province paying a higher share of the cost.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

"Of course [illegible]" echoed, just as though [illegible]n't knotted the noose for [illegible]husband's neck. Though for that matter Miss Maggie mentioned in her will." What meaning thing?"

"Sondra." It was the first time Miss Agatha had spoken to any of them since her sister's death. "Sondra, don't belittle the means of your freedom."

She spoke so quietly that it would have been easy to have missed her meaning. But Sondra Thorne did not miss it. She went deathly white. Her slim hands clenched until the veins stood out blue and ugly.

She jumped up.

Mart Preston caught Sondra at the door, but he was not quick enough to escape the slashed her wicked fingernails. Blood stained his tanned cheek.

Roughly he whirled her around to face the sheriff.

Purdy scowled. "Mrs. Thorne," he said slowly, "that's no way to act. You want me (thinkin' you killed that poor old woman?"

"I don't care what you think!"

"No!" Amusement flickered across the sheriff's sober face. "You wouldn't like our jail, it's filthy and it's got cockroaches." Then without changing his reproachful tone, he shot at her, "Where were you?"

"I—" Sondra stopped. Her eyes widened. "I told you! I was in the living room. With Peter."

The sheriff chewed his lower lip. "What was Jasper?"

"Why don't you ask Jasper?"

"I have," Purdy replied. "I'd still like to know your story."

Sondra sat back, apparently relaxed. Leeana couldn't understand why, for the sheriff's steady gaze held everything but relief in her innocence.

She made a tentative beginning: "Jasper and I argued—"

"Argued," her husband interrupted dryly, "is putting it mildly."

"We argued." Sondra went on, flinging him a dirty look, "about his aunt's will—its validity. I wanted him to telephone Devens —Miss Maggie's lawyer," she added parenthetically. "But Jasper wouldn't. He had some sort of chivalrous idea that the old lady could do as she wanted— the money was hers. So I walked out on him."

Her [illegible] was implication enough, but she cried out, "Jap, you didn't—"

Jasper looked at her out of dead eyes.

"I didn't" he said dully, but there was no conviction in his tone. Nothing—but despair. Leeana was glad the sheriff didn't seem interested in him now, although why she should pity Jasper Thorne—!

From outside came the sound of measured footsteps. Purdy went into the hall; a moment later there were mumbled questions, an answer, and the men came upstairs. Already they walked that way—as though they carried a lifeless burden.

When the sheriff did not return immediately Mart Preston shrugged to his feet. He dabbed experimentally at his cheek; it was still bleeding.

"There's a thing or two bothering me." He turned to Mrs. Carstairs. "Leeana says you are not a hysterical woman, so I said, 'and yet Mrs. Thorne—' his eyes went fleetingly to Sondra —'says you were having hysterics when she went to call you."

Cynthia Carstairs' frozen face went colder than ever. "I was scared. That's all."

Martin mulled. "Oh, come now, Mrs. Carstairs! When Mrs Thorne called you, you didn't know Miss Maggie was dead. Did you?"

"Certainly not!"

"Well, then—" Mart paused; then, "what did you see from your bedroom window?"

The look started up, then sank back, petrified with fright.

"Who did you see?"

"He can't make you tell, Cynthia." Peter Thorne put in swiftly. "He has no right to make you say anything—self-incriminating.

Deputy Preston shifted his attack from the Thorne family cook to Peter. "I am not trying to involve Mrs. Carstairs," he said coldly. "I am merely trying to solve a murder. Or do you object to that, too? Are you afraid of what she will say?"

"Why should I be afraid? I was with Sondra."

"I'm beginning to wonder about that, too," Mart snapped.

Surprisingly enough, it was Jasper who protested.

"You're being a bit ridiculous, Preston," he said. "You're as bad as Purdy."

"Thanks," Mart drawled "Clem will be glad to hear that." He turned again to Peter. "Mrs. Carstairs' room is directly across the court from Jasper's—and yet she looked first to you when she came in here. Was that because she saw you in Jasper's room and not in the living room?"

"In that case," drawled Peter Thorne, "where were you, Jasper?"

An almost imperceptible change came over Jasper Thorne as Leeana watched. His thin shoulders lost some of their habitual slump and his hard eyes became a trifle narrower. What, she asked herself, was going on behind that thick blue veil? And why did Sondra's eyes fall as they met his?

Was it because Jasper knew now that Peter had not been in the living room with her?

Or because Sondra herself had not been there at all?

Leeana glanced at Mart Preston and was surprised that he seemed to be paying no attention at all to the Thornes. He was concentrating on Cynthia Carstairs—and on Arthur Jones, who sat to her right. The old man's face was grief-twisted and his thin, gnarled hands wrestled with each other in his lap.

"Now, Mr. Jones," Mart began, "suppose you tell us whatever you think will help. About tonight," especially."

Arthur Jones's grief was pitiful in its aloneness. Leeana felt her throat tighten as the old gardener's eyes sought hers and then swept on to the impassive faces of Peter, Jasper and Sondra.

"They hated her," he said dully. "And they were afraid of her."

None of the accused spoke.

"Don't be bitter, Mr. Jones," Miss Agatha whispered. "Maggie wouldn't want you to be."

For once Miss Aggie had forgotten to fuss with her curls or to "red up" her face. Her cheeks were like wrinkled linen.

Arthur shook his grizzled head. "Poor Miss Maggie wouldn't want them to get away with it," he said gently. "She wouldn't want them to have her money, it belonged to Mr. Roger."

"Who told you that?" Peter Thorne rasped.

The old man folded his arms as if to shield the source of his information, and he matched the lawyer's stony gaze. Peter's eyes fell first. Only then did Arthur Jones relax.

"Young man," he turned again to Mart Preston, "you find out what happend to that letter and you'll have him dead to rights."

"If you're referring to my letter to Aunt Margaret," said Peter Torne scornfully, "you're dead wrong."

Arthur regarded him with eyes that were calculating in spite of his grief. "You know what I mean," pointedly. "You know—and she knows." He was looking at Sondra.

U. N. Chief of Staff Orders Cease-Fire On Israel Border

20 Syrians Killed While Being Driven Out of Area

Tel Aviv, Israel May 3—(CP)—The United Nations chief of staff, Maj.-Gen. William E. Riley, today ordered an immediate cease-fire in fighting between the Syrians and Israelis which broke out again today along the border northeast of Lake Galilee.

An artillery and mortar duel was going on between the ancient ruins in the Kapernaum frontier area, it was officially announced here.

An Israeli military spokesman claimed today that Israeli troops killed more than 20 Syrians in driving them out of the disputed area yesterday.

"I see this festival as a symbol of Britain's abiding courage and vitality."

From now until September the country will make merry, with exhibitions, sports and fun fairs.

Planners of the festival have had two motives: to celebrate the centenary of the great exhibition of 1851 and to show the world that Britain has faith in herself and the future.

Symbolic uttered through a grey London haze as trumpets blared at Buckingham Palace and the cavalry jingled out, plumes tossing and breastplate gleaming.

Behind them, in colorful carriages—the King and Queen in one; Princess Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh in another. This is the show that Londoners and visitors love.

Pageantry on Show

All the pageantry and color of British tradition were on show at the cathedral—Yeomen in scarlet and gold, Pikemen in silver armor, dignitaries in shining hats and frock coats.

At the service in St. Paul's Most Rev. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, said:

"For this period of festival, which we are now entering, and which these times impose on us . . . we snatch brief moments to refresh ourselves and show others what we have done in the past, what we are doing today, and to be joyful for a season and renew our strength and spirit."

Then, in his slow, clear tones: "Though the nation has made a splendid effort toward recovery, new burdens have fallen upon it and dark clouds still overhang the world's sky."

"But this is no time for despondency. This festival is fastened as a symbol of Britain's abiding courage and vitality.

"Let the minds of our ancestors renewed in us, we can, under God's providence, restore and expand the prosperity of which they laid the foundations. We can draw new strength from their staunch example, and confidence from the modern achievements of our own industry."

Baghdad, May 3 (AP) Scientists have begun their first excavations in an ancient desert city which could claim the fire bomb of modern warfare as its own.

The city deserted for about 1,650 years—is Hatrah in western Iraq, about 100 miles southwest of the Middle East oil city of Mosul.

Hatrah was a circular city with double walls and a moat around it. It was an important trading centre on the ancient caravan route from the Far East to the western world.

Hatrah flourished as a city-state until about 300 A.D. During that period it repulsed two powerful Roman armies.

Dr. Naji Al-Asil, director-general of the Iraq department of Antiquities, says that from their strong defensive positions the fighting men of Hatrah developed the fire-bomb—the jellied gas bomb of their day—of throwing balls of fire at their foe.

Dr. Asil also referred to such methods of warfare as "Hatrah fire," indicating how widespread the flame was of this defensive system.

Dr. Al-Asil says the "Hatrah fire" probably consisted of big balls of some absorbent substance, soaked in naphtha from nearby oil wells. Set afire, these were launched at the foe by catapults.

In this manner, he said, the Romans first destroyed the war chariots of Trajan and others who threatened.

The excavation work began in Hatrah only in March, but remains of the Iraq department have been found already, along with 18 statues and reliefs.

KING AND QUEEN OPEN FESTIVAL AT ST. PAUL'S

His Majesty Sends Message to World

London, May 3 —(Reuters)— The King spoke, the crowds cheered, the church bells pangand the Festival of Britain officially began today.

The symbol of preparation came to a climax when the King and Queen rode through the streets of London to St. Paul's Cathedral in an open carriage, escorted by a colorful detachment of bold cavalry. Throngs had waited all night for a glimpse of royalty.

"This is no time for despondency," said the King in a broadcast from the steps of St. Paul's one of London's proudest monuments.

Brigade Commander Says Canadian Troops Are Ready For Action Almost Immediately

A Port in South Korea, May 3— (Reuters) — Brig. - Gen. John Rockingham, commander of the 25th Canadian Brigade shortly to arrive in Korea, said today his troops will go into action almost immediately.

Rockingham said Lt.-Gen. James Van Fleet, U. S. Eighth Army commander, had asked that the Canadians be ready to go to the front as soon as possible after arriving.

"I promised General Van Fleet we would be ready," he added. "The way everyone has been working and with the co-operation we have been receiving from Eighth Army and American logistical officers, there is no doubt about it."

The Canadians, their commander said, will go into action as an independent unit before the British Commonwealth Division comes into battle. The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry — veterans of nearly five months in Korea — would join the main Canadian force as soon as it got to the forward area.

Serve Year in Korea

The 39-year-old Brigadier said each Canadian soldier will serve a year in Korea and then be replaced if replacements are available.

Three Canadian battalions have been created to provide a steady stream of replacements, he said.

"I have never before seen such enthusiasm among any group of troops as there is among my brigade," the Brigadier, a Second World War veteran said.

"They've been working 14 and 18 hours daily ever since leaving Fort Lewis, in Washington, and they're going to be a fine outfit."

Rockingham added that on a recent visit to the fighting front he was truly impressed with the co-operation among fighting troops of different nationalities. He was certain co-operation would exist among the officers and troops of the Commonwealth division.

The Canadian brigade will use a combination of American and Canadian weapons, American vehicles, the Canadian M-10 light tank and will eat American rations, he stated.

Satisfied with Rations

"We are quite satisfied with American rations — except that we've had to make certain adjustments.

"We have found, for example, that Canadian troops eat more potatoes and less bread than Americans so as we've drawn rations accordingly."

Brig. Rockingham said that when his troops become part of the Commonwealth division they likely would be involved in the methods of supply and in typical of British practice.

Attempts had been made to get RCAF transport planes which had been assigned to the Korean airlift to supply the brigade — because we think the boys would like it that way," he added.

Rent Control Being Maintained For Benefit of Vocal Minority Says President Mortgage Co.

Montreal, May 3 (CP) —H. E. Langford, president of the Dominion Mortgage and Investments Association, said today that rent control "is being maintained for the benefit of a vocal minority."

Addressing the annual meeting of the association, he said the federal government is to be commended for its decision to abandon rent controls, but it is most regrettable that provincial governments are not following this field with little thought of the outcome.

"Actual experience in France, Britain and Canada shows that in fact, the effect of rent controls is to decrease the amount and quality of housing," Mr. Langford said.

There seemed to be an impression that rents were controlled only to hold down owners whose properties were free of control and takes advantage of the situation, but the majority had not. The rise in rents had not been nearly as great as the increase in the price level. The cost-of-living index rose about 73% while the rent index was 137.6.

"Rent control is being maintained for the benefit of a vocal minority. Nearly 60 percent of all housing units in Canada are controlled, taking into consideration the number of rental units built since the end of the war and the rents decontrolled. It is doubtful if more than 25 percent of housing units are now subject to rent control."

Mr. Langford said inequities and injustices in rent laws and rent control are almost too numerous to mention. Landlords had been forced to subsidize tenants. Properties had been permitted to run down because rental income was not sufficient to maintain them. Some owners in switching from controlled to decontrol at a lower price than others merely because their houses were subject to rental control.

"There is fear that decontrol will result in sharp increases in rents. Some rents would certainly go up immediately, and they should; but, through operation of genuine competition, rents of some controlled properties would probably be reduced. Experience in the United States shows that decontrol generally results in lower rents and not nearly as great as the supporters of rent control claim."

GOVT. WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH STRIKE AWARD

House Votes 134-39 Against Reconsideration

Ottawa, May 3 (CP) — The Canadian government does not plan to interfere with the award made by its arbitrator in settling the wage-hour dispute that has led to a nine-day general railway strike last year.

Prime Minister St. Laurent told the commons tonight he would not ask Parliament to intervene. He spoke before members voted 134 to 39 against a CCF move to force the government to reconsider the award.

The motion sponsored by Stanley Knowles (CCF - Winnipeg North Centre), sought to revise the railway strike decision to grant to approximately 9,000 hotel and waiter-transport workers the same settlement terms given 125,000 railway workers generally. The award was made by Mr. Justice R. L. Kellock of the Supreme Court of Canada, the government-appointed arbitrator.

The arbitrator, appointed by virtue of legislation accepted by Parliament at a special session last fall, granted the railway workers a seven-cent-an-hour pay boost, a two-year contract and a 40 hour week to begin this June 1.

The hotel and water-transport workers, members of the same Canadian Railway Office of Order Labor Association and a one-year contract which also ends in September.

Mr. Knowles and other opposition speakers said Prime Minister St. Laurent had left the impression with parliament last September that all those involved in the dispute would be given equal treatment.

In the vote, the CCF motion won support from the Social Credit and Progressive Conservative parties and three Liberals.

Long Term Aid

At the house opening, Reuores Minister Winters announced long-term federal aid for building highways in the Yukon territories. The government will spend an estimated $1,000,000 to help improve the cost of provincial government forest inventories and reforestation of Crown lands.

Mr. St. Laurent said the Canadian government has not yet given up hope that the United States will join Canada in a joint undertaking to develop the Columbia River.

In the Senate, a bill increasing the size of the council which administers the Northwest Territories provoked a hot debate. Senator John T. Haig, opposition leader, said the Northwest Territories should be made part of the three Prairie provinces by altering provincial boundaries northward.

MacArthur 'Assumes' Joint Chiefs Over-Ruled by Truman or Marshall

Washington, May 3. (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur testified today the joint chiefs of staff recommended last Jan. 12 a naval blockade of Communist China and air operations over Manchuria and supply support of Chinese Nationalist troops.

Since he was never allowed to carry this out, MacArthur told the senate armed services and foreign relations committees, they are making an inquiry into his dismissal and into Far Eastern policy.

The General quoted to the Senators the following recommendations which were presented by the joint chiefs to the Secretary of Defence:

"That we are to continue and intensify now an economic blockade of the China coast.

"That we were to prepare now to impose a naval blockade on China and place it into effect as soon as our position in Korea was established so that we may evacuated Korea, and depending upon circumstances.

"Remove now the restrictions on air reconnaissance of China coastal areas back of Manchuria.

"Remove now the restrictions on operations of the Chinese Nationalist forces and give such logistical (supply) support to those forces as will contribute to effective operations against the communists."

MacArthur said that "as far as I know, the joint chiefs of staff have never changed their recommendations. If they have, I have never been informed of it."

Three Ships Of Reserve Fleet Back in Service

Ottawa, May 3—(CP) — The navy said today the program to recommission all its mothball or reserve fleet ships will be completed in April with the return of three ships to active service.

They were the destroyer Cruzader which went back into service at Esquimalt; the destroyer Whitethroat and the Bangor minesweeper Thunder, which did likewise at Halifax.

In addition, HMCS Wallace, formerly a frigate ship for the reserve fleet in Halifax, became operational and sailed on a cruise to Philadelphia.

GIVEN PRIORITY

Hamilton, May 3—(CP)—Hamilton's housing shortage has been given priority by Ontario's newly-formed rent control commission. J. J. Wingfielder, deputy rentals administrator, said yesterday the first Ontario rent control office will be established soon in Hamilton.

First Troopship Bearing Canadians To Korea Arrives

A South Korean Port, May 3 (Reuters) — The first troopship bringing the Canadian 25th Brigade to Korea arrived in this port today.

Brig. J. M. Rockingham, brigade commander, boarded the troopship to welcome the troops.

Rockingham said Lt.-Gen. James Van Fleet, Eighth Army commander, had asked that the Canadians be ready to go to the front as soon as possible.

PARTY NEEDS FAIR PRESS

Niagara Falls, May 3—(CP)—"What the C.C.F. needs and the only thing it needs is a fair press," said Angus MacInnis, member of the Ontario legislature for York East, yesterday during the annual dinner of the Welland county C.C.F. Association.

Tells Committees Manchurian Bases Should Be Bombed

'Full Capacity' Air, Naval Effort Would be Needed

Washington, May 3—(AP) Gen. Douglas MacArthur predicted today a few additional ground troops could wipe out Red fighting forces if backed by the "full capacity" air and naval effort he has urged.

The deposed Pacific commander carried to the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees his complaint against bans on bombing Chinese communist installations in Manchuria.

This was one of the policy differences which led President Truman to dismiss MacArthur from his commands last month.

Closed to Press

MacArthur testified behind closed doors to the Senators but a stenographic report of his testimony—edited first by a military censor—was made public while he still was being questioned.

As he has before, the general protested that the United Nations forces are being prevented from the "great strategic concept of stopping the supplies or troops, of preventing the build-up of the enemy troops and the disorganization of supply lines.

"If you would take off (the prohibitions) and permit them their full capacity, I do not believe it would take a very great additional component of ground troops to wind this thing up," he said.

If this isn't done, MacArthur said, "you would not be able to supply enough ground troops in Korea to be able to safely clear north Korea."

Russian Position Weak

MacArthur had questioned earlier whether there was any great threat of Russian action. He said he does not believe Russia is in position to "launch any predatory attack from the Asiatic continent."

The General said he believes Russian forces in Siberia "are largely defensive."

In this connection, MacArthur observed:

"I believe that the Soviet has so effectively separated the incorrect statements that we are planning to attack them that by having begun to believe it himself."

Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem., Ga.), chairman of the two combined committees, called for an estimate of Communist Russian strength in the Far East.

Part of what MacArthur had to say on that was omitted from the transcript given reporters.

In that connection, Senator Hugh Butler (Rep., Neb.), on leaving the hearing earlier, had told reporters MacArthur also said he doesn't believe Russia could move more troops eastward because the Trans-Siberian railroad already is taxed to its limit.

The transcript recorded Russell as asking MacArthur about the hazard of having removed all U.S. garrison troops from Japan to Korea when the war broke out last June.

"If Russia had sec. fit to move at that time, I assume they could have captured Japan, could they not?" Russell asked.

Unable to Take Japan

"I would doubt it very seriously," Secretary, MacArthur replied.

He added that he does not believe Japan could be taken over except by an amphibious effort by the air.

"As long as we held control of the sea and of the air over that area, I would doubt that the Soviet Union would have been able to overrun Japan in any coup de main."

The questions of what Russia might do and what MacArthur and the Soviet capacity to act with strength there—are important parts of the current controversy revolving about MacArthur.

Reserves Decision On Court Action Against City

Toronto, May 3 (CP) —Judgment was reserved by Mr. Justice A. M. Lebal Wednesday in an action brought against the City of Belleville by the Kilmack Construction Company of Swastika, Ont.

The company is suing the city for $31,804 for damages and loss in profit incurred when a sewer contract was partly taken away without "reasonable notice."

Company officials said work was started in August 1948, and was held up by unexpected delays, floods and quicksand. The job was contracted to be finished in 30 weeks, but only 20 percent of the work had been done by that time.

J. H. Amys, counsel for the plaintiff, said the work was given to another company without "24 hours' notice as the contract demanded."

Fred Parkinson, counsel for the city, said: "It was too bad that rock of such quantity and quickness were found after the contract was made. That was the contractor's misfortune.

because the Trans-Siberian railroad already is taxed to its limit.

The transcript recorded Russell as asking MacArthur about the hazard of having removed all U.S. garrison troops from Japan to Korea when the war broke out last June.

"If Russia had sec. fit to move at that time, I assume they could have captured Japan, could they not?" Russell asked.

Local Talent Stars as Kinsmen Present 'Showboat Days' At BCI

A little blackface, a few pretty girls, dance routines, choruses, vocals, and horseplay. Mix them all up, add generous helpings of action, and you have "Showboat Days," presented last night at the Collegiate by the local Kinsmen Band.

Theme of the show concerns a young man named Jefferson Dillard, who returns to Dixie after five years a hero. He went away with nothing, and comes back as the owner of a show boat. The inevitable love problem crops up when Jeff and Virginia Stuart find opposition to their marriage coming from Virginia's mother, Amelia. She refuses to let her daughter have anything to do with a "river rat" but her husband, Col. Andy Stuart, does his best to promote the wedding.

Virginia, the sweet southern belle, is played by Sharon Lucy, and Bob Lucy plays her lover, Jeff Dillard. A fine portrayal of the battle-axe mother is given by Dorothy Dickey, and Percy Marcus romped his way through the part of the Colonel. Possibly the best singing and dancing put through the whole show were offered by Sylvia Motley and Bill Slater, who played Effie and Sammy, employees on Dillard's boat. Both got a tremendous kick out of their parts, and their Ten-Tweet, Thirt" number was a standout.

The other members of the cast were Mary Plumpton as Aunt Jinny, Ted Mowbray, Cecil Jeffrey, Gardner Duff and Bill Fraser as Blackface comedians, Stu Martin and Harry Rollins, who jostled and joked their ways through the roles of backwoodsmen, and Murray Davis, as Sheriff Simpson.

Soloists Featured

Featured soloists during the evening were Sharon Lucy and Mr. Lucy, Miss Ethel Smith, and Chuck Tilbrook, with his accordion. Miss Smith, in particular, brought the house down, and if time tonight and Friday night there had not been more to the show, the audience would have her singing still. She scored in high fashion with her "Ding Went the Trolley" number, and in company with the Klnette girls.

Other artists who appeared in solo spots were Dorothy Dickey, Don Baker, Jean Doig, Art Crugi, Ray Lennox and Ernie Colebourne. Bacon's monologue, "The Big Broadcast," made a hit with the audience, as he poked-faced his way through a Clem McCarthy-type description of a mixed-up sports event.

Contributing to the effect of the show through most of its length was the practice of having the best part of the cast remain on stage during the most of the numbers. With that many people before the eyes all at once, it is hard to pick the stars from the cast, and it is equally hard to see all the by-play that goes on between the members.

Healthy Amusement

The cast is not professional, by the director's own admission, but amateurism that creates the illusion of one big party. The Barnyard Boys, Cecil Jeffrey and Gardner Duff and Bill Fraser as Blackface comedians, Stu Martin and Harry Rollins, who jostled and joked their ways through the roles of backwoodsmen, and Murray Davis, as Sheriff Simpson.

Again, it was the nonchalance of many of the players that carried the show through over. They made no attempt to put a professional gloss on their actions and the fact that they were all having fun every second they were on stage added immeasurably to the atmosphere created.

The show was staged and produced by George Zarfas, and conducted by Jim Crawford.

Tonight and Friday night. J.B.

Early Discovery Of Fire Prevents Serious Damage

A blaze which might easily have developed into a serious fire was nipped in the bud shortly after midnight last night by police patrolmen when they saw smoke rolling from a garage at the rear of Wyatt's Furniture store Front Street.

Investigation into the cause of the smoke police found the platform of a furniture truck ablaze. They removed the truck out into the open yard by placing the truck in reverse and operating the starter.

Firemen were called and quickly extinguished the blaze which by this time had burned a small hole through the platform of the vehicle.

It was reported that the fire had apparently started among some furniture blankets which had been left on the truck.

Refusing to Pay Taxi Bill Has Expensive Results

That it doesn't pay to imbibe too freely and then refuse to pay a taxi bill, was found out in county magistrate's court this morning by Belleville resident.

On April 30th, Fred G. Neelin hired a taxi to take him from the city to Deseronto. The bill for the taxi ride was $4 but Neelin apparently thought the fare was too much. He paid a dollar and refused to pay the balance.

That is where the law came into the picture. Police Chief Harry Pratt of Deseronto, arrested Neelin and charged him with false pretences, with being drunk and having liquor at a place other than his residence.

Today the accused pleaded guilty on all three counts. On the false pretences charge he was fined $100 and costs or imprisonment on payment of $18.50 costs, plus the balance of $3 for taxi fare. On the two LCA charges he was assessed $13 each—total $47.50.

J. D. Henderson Instantly Killed In Gun Accident

Former dairy inspector in Eastern Ontario and for 53 years a cheesemaker in Hastings and Prince Edward counties, Joseph D. Henderson was instantly killed Tuesday as result of a gun accident.

Staying with his daughter Mrs. Arthur Bergeron at Hilton near Brighton, Mr. Henderson was cleaning a gun in preparation for shooting woodchucks, when the gun discharged. He was alone in the house with his daughter, who was upstairs.

The funeral was held at Cunningham Funeral Home, Brighton, on Tuesday afternoon.

Born 78 years ago in Hastings Mr. Henderson became one of the leading cheese makers in the district. Later with his brother he made cheese at Mountain factory. Later he was maker at several district factories. He was 17 years at York Road factory until he retired 11 years at Black River, Bridge in Prince Edward County, and in 1939 he had 100 per cent first grade cheese.

He served for five years as dairy inspector for Eastern Ontario with headquarters at Centerville.

He is survived by his son Ernest W. Henderson, dairy inspector for Prince Edward district; two daughters, Mrs. Lee Smith, Belleville, and Mrs. Arthur Morgan, Hilton. A brother Wesley Henderson, lives at Point Anne.

Suggested Judicial Committee Of Privy Council Should Become Appeal Court for Commonwealth

London, May 3 (CP) — A suggestion that the judicial committee of the privy council should become a Commonwealth appeal court, including representatives of Dominion governments, was made yesterday by one of the lords.

Viscount Simon, 78, made the proposal in replying to an address by Senator J. W. deB. Farris, K.C., of Vancouver, Senator Farris, speaking at the close of an appeal to the committee, said this was likely the last time he would appear in the Privy Council Chamber.

Future Canadian appeals will be tried in Canadian courts.

Senator Farris expressed regret that "this historic tie" between Canadian lawyers and the committee was being severed.

Lord Simon, replying, said that whether appeals should go to the Privy Council depended largely on Canada. He said he would like to see the judicial committee reconstituted to include Dominion members but he would make the only truly - representative Commonwealth court.

He said these circumstances might make it possible for the judicial committee to go on tour and sit in Ottawa and other capitals.

"It may have been that if these ideas had prevailed in time," Lord Simon added, "we should have created a new kind of supreme, Commonwealth tribunal and there would have been no feeling that by coming to London Canada in some way was travelling outside its natural judicial orbit."

The Canadian House of Commons passed a bill abolishing appeals to the Privy Council Oct. 11, 1940. The Senate approved it less than a month later. The measure made the nine-man Supreme Court of Canada the highest tribunal.

Senator Farris assured the law lords that Canada's abolition of appeals to the Privy Council did not reflect a lack of appreciation of the judicial system. The courts of England had been the cradle of the common law and the traditions which it would make the bar had "brightened and enriched Canadian jurisprudence."

Secondary Schools Cannot Release Students Until June 8

Toronto, May 3 — (CP)—Ontario high school students whose marks are high enough to get by without writing final examinations may not like this:

The Ontario Department of Education has ordered secondary schools in the province not to release any students until June 8 except those who will work on farms. In other years the earliest release date was June 1.

The department added the extra week because it feels that secondary schools haven't been operating at proper capacity during June.

About one-third of the others, in the first four years of secondary school, will be exempt from writing exams. Those required a mark of 65 per cent for the year's work. The remaining students will start writing final papers June 15, a week later than in previous years.

The ruling will cause congestion in most schools, J. R. H. Morgan, superintendent of Toronto secondary schools, said auditoriums may have to be converted into examination halls.

Start Exams June 12

Mr. Morgan's report said, in part: "... We recommend that the dates for opening and closing school apply to all students, and that administrative provisions be made to permit attendance for the full period.

There are about 12,000 secondary students in Toronto. Grade 13 students will start examinations June 12 and continue to the end of the month.

Hewat Factory Damaged by Fire Loss About $4000

Damage estimated at roughly $4,000 resulted at the F. W. Hewat Co. Ltd., 100 Everett Street, early this morning when fire gutted the company office, toilet and small stock room.

Before firemen got the blaze under control it had eaten its way through partitions into a section of the main factory of the furniture manufacturing company.

The blaze was noticed almost simultaneously by three different motorists who happened to see the reflection of the blaze and turned the alarm in directly to the fire station. When firemen arrived on the scene the blaze was rolling out through windows to light up the sky.

Started in Washroom

According to Fire Chief Gerald Vance the blaze apparently started in the washroom of the building and spread into the nearby office. The blaze raced through the office and small hardware store room and had eaten its way through fire-resistant partitions before it was brought under control.

The fire chief declined to place a definite estimate on the total damage caused by the blaze as the amount of damage to the building still had not been determined.. The blaze did not go out through the roof of the building.

MOIRA VALLEY CONSERVATION

The decision of city council this week to continue a watching brief on the activities of the Moira Valley Conservation Authority is one that had to be made if the council was to retain any share in the project. Any action on conservation taken in the county can directly affect residents of the city, and it is only reasonable that citizens should have representation if the MVCA should make some decisions.

The battle of conservation is one that never ends. It is easy for city dwellers to think that conservation deals with the upper part of resources in the country, and that it has nothing to do with them. The real tale is told, however, if and when spring floods descend on a city, or when economic difficulties result in metropolitan areas because flooded farmlands prevent the seeding of crops. Only then does the realization come that conservation is everybody's business.

In addition to flood control measures being taken throughout the city, conservation authorities are working on plans for reforestation, demonstration farm ponds, farm planning, and recreational and educational planning. Locally, the Authority is considering the purchase of land in Hungerford township for wildlife purposes, and the installation of a dam above College Street to control river flooding in the city. It is also concerned with a plan to determine the cost of constructing dams on Stoco Lake, to limit the level of that body of water.

The new Authority has much to accomplish at least two aims. The first would be an increased tourist revenue from the area, if the lake level could be guaranteed by dam control. Property values would be stabilized, and commerce benefited generally, if shoreline and flow of water in the Moira River during the summer months would be maintained. From a purely esthetic point of view, the Moira is a blight to the eye in the summer. It dwindles away to a few meagre stretches of stagnant water where the river bed. Then, in the following spring, it becomes a full-fledged river again, wide and deep.

To the east, authorities in the Napanee area are endeavoring to provide the town with a summer flow of water which would aid it to maintain a source of water. To the west, the Ganaraska River is under study to see if a control dam will protect the town of Port Hope. Thus, again, the problem is not one concerning just the farmers of this or any other county. It is a movement that must be supported on all sides if the resources of Ontario are to be preserved.

It is apparent that conservation has become a big work, and although the city does not have the money at present to appropriate for MVCA, it needs representation merely for the purpose of information.

THE RELEASE OF AN AMERICAN

An indication of what it is like to be imprisoned for 17 months — 14 of them in solitary confinement — and then suddenly be released into a free world again was contained in the words of Robert A. Vogeler, American businessman who was so treated by Hungarian communist officials. He said, "You never realize what freedom means until you lose it."

Vogeler had been sentenced to 15 years in prison on spy charges, but his release was secured when the United States granted certain privileges which had been withdrawn when Vogeler was first incarcerated. Hungarian consulates will be reopened in New York and Cleveland, the ban on American travel in Hungary has been lifted, and some privileges in western Germany have been restored. A final demand, for the return of the historic crown of St. Stefan, symbol of Hungarian monarchy, was not heeded by the United States.

The release of a man who has been subjected to a biased trial and torture and hardships under a communist regime is worth that many concessions and more. While Mr. Vogeler's lips will be sealed on many subjects because he will not wish to incriminate any others, or make their suffering any worse, he can and will be able to impress on free people the curse of communism.

Evidence that freedom is a quality to be cherished more and more when it is denied is shown every week as displaced persons arrive in Canada from European countries. They appreciate the privilege of speaking and worshipping as they like; the right to a fair trial and a freedom from fear; a system of justice that protects, rather than one that persecutes.

The release of Mr. Vogeler should serve as a warning to western nations that Europe, as a hotbed of aggression, is every bit as dangerous as Asia. Even though it has not expressed itself in the militant manner of Korea, European aggression is still a fact. Denial of human rights is a feature of any aggressive policy. It was a part of Mussolini's campaign, and Hitler used it to extremes. Now the communists are masters at it. They must be showed that they will find no better fate than that which came to the leaders of Italy and Germany in the years 1939-1945.

FEMININE DISTRESS

A hole in his sock man can patiently bear,
For no reason to no one it shows.
But should it be noticed he wouldn't much care,
Nor think it the greatest of woes.
But, it's different with women.
They cry in despair
When they get a run in their hose.

When gowned in their best for a supper or ball,
The greatest of care must be shown.
For the edge of a table, a sofa or chair
May ruin: "The last pair they own."
And, though none in the room
hears the sound of the tear,
That's hear the sigh and the moan.

There are various heartaches which mortals must face,
But the women have more than the men.
No man thinks a hole in his sock a disgrace
But all girls are in misery when
They wail, as this dreadful disaster takes place,
"Oh, there goes my stocking again!"

The trout fishing season opened May 1st, but although many local anglers were prepared the weather kept some of them away from the fishing spots. The weather has been cold and backward. However, there is good sport yet in store for the anglers as it is reported that the streams have more trout in them than was expected. It was thought that the low water would result in many of the trout, but such is not the case.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of Canada's outstanding educationists on the university level made some off-the-record comments to a group of newspapermen at a recent luncheon.

"It is far more important," he said, "to inspire questions in the minds of the students than to employ a staff of big brains who stand before the students and give them all the answers before the questions are asked.

"Learning is more important than teaching. Yet the physical size of our colleges, not to mention our secondary schools, is such that we have to resort to a system that puts all the emphasis on teaching. It has become harder each year of the past fifty for students to ask questions, or to do anything but sit and listen and take notes. And, as a teaching profession, it has put a premium on elocution, on talent as public speakers or as entertainers, rather than upon that scholarship, intelligence and wisdom which could answer the questions of those who should be learning.

"Many of the most important among our leaders are simply incapable of standing forth on the platform in front of 500 or 1,000 students and imparting what they have got to give in the manner of a spellbinder."

He newspapermen asked what the question is.

"University education," said the professor, "has already become nothing more than an extension of the popular schooling now offered by collegiate, technical schools and the high schools of commerce. It merely expands the time and emphasis on teaching. It is being crowded up into the schools of graduate study."

"Mesmerism?" he chuckled. "the world is being run by those with brains that have survived their schooling, or escaped it."

CHANCES—GOOD AND BAD

We have all missed chances. Probably there is not a person in the world who does not look back on opportunities he missed to make a lot of money or to get a fine position or to join up with people who might have put him on the pinnacle of fame.

A man coming to the close of life was telling me recently how he had turned down the opportunity to buy the business which would have cost him about $20,000. Today, that land is in the very center of one of the most popular winter resorts. The property is refused to pay $500,000 for is now worth about six millions.

But of course missing chances works both ways. We can often look back and see how much misfortune we were spared by not having Aunt Sallie die or that, by not having associated ourselves with a certain person or group of persons who plunged recklessly along and went over the precipice. One of America's religious leaders missed the Titanic and was impatient beyond words at the delay occasioned by the fog which caused him to do so. But he was not impatient a few days later when the terrible news of the Titanic disaster froze the world in horror.

Have you missed some good chances? Well, we all have, but you can be sure that you have missed some very bad chances also. Perhaps in the long economy one neutralizes the other.

AID FOR ADDICTS

Another broken man trudged off this week, a victim of a habit that will do him no good whatever.

It was the fourth conviction for a 56-year-old drug addict and the court simply had to offer an alternative.

Everyone knows that the sentence is not the cure. No one yet has done anything about it.

This particular case interested me because the defence counsel wondered out loud why no attempt had been made to cure what he called a "Drugs Anonymous."

The idea isn't a new one by any means. Been advocated from time to time ever since Alcoholics Anonymous became an international force. Anyone who has had occasion to look into the spectacular record of AA in beating the liquor habit has naturally asked himself why a similar approach might not beat the narcotic habit.

Many judges across Canada have expressed the need for some program to rescue the addict, not merely to punish him.

In Belleville, at the moment there's a plan afoot to set up a treatment centre which is a sort of test case for the whole of the country, and while this project has both Dominion and provincial governments, it's at least a hopeful sign that some approach will be made to an old and tragic problem.

It's a medical problem now. Addiction is on the increase, particularly among younger men, in spite of the claim of police departments that the stuff was never so hard to get.

It's a problem to be dealt with cautiously, too. Many informed doctors say that, in many cases, is no final solution except to completely eliminate the source of supply.

There's some considerable difference of opinion on the Alcoholics Anonymous approach — a kind of group therapy in which drunks conquer their problem by confronting it together, but it's well to remember that AA, while now generally accepted, was not born without its share of derision.

Some Experts

Recently I've been discussing the Addicts Anonymous idea with some men who might qualify as experts. Among the two of the founders of AA, a doctor, a police court magistrate and a former policeman.

The latter was also an alcoholic and he says it cured him. And for about a year, He's a rare case of a man with two vices (or diseases, if you like) both licked. But the very few alcoholics are also in the minority. Dr. Bob Brinkman usually depend on drugs of the hypnotic-sedative type, such as phenobarbital, seconal, amytal and phenobarbital.

The police court magistrate, who has had a great deal to say about addiction and alcoholism," this middle-aged man told me wryly, "is particularly anxious to help those who sincerely want to quit, as I did. Every week I see dozens of old boozers. They need the fellowship and understanding of men who have been through the mill and know the look at it without hypocrisy."

The police court magistrate, he pointed out that many men become drunks through being exposed to liquor socially. Drug addiction is frequently anti-social, an introvert who would not readily respond to the group or brotherhood idea essential in AA.

"In every case the man who takes narcotics is a tougher nut to crack," he said. "He is a man with, attitudes less well grounded, hence a poor risk for voluntarily adjusting himself, and the effects of drink are much farther reaching than alcohol that the road back is considerably more difficult and complicated."

The police court magistrate (who pointed out that the problem involves many women as well as men) felt that AA, or some such organization might well assist addicts by giving them practical advice and encouragement, but he doubted if they'd respond to the mutual help mentality.

"Might be possible with some," he agreed, "but a good many of the addicts who come before me have mental quirks and warped personalities. The alcoholic is a far simpler and more adjustable type, and that's why AA has succeeded."

Worth a Try

The two members of Alcoholics Anonymous, both men whose lives have been completely changed through that group, are inclined to take the optimistic view. "We believe the principle is sound with the religious enthusiasm of the early church.

"The basic psychological difficulties of the addict and the alcoholic are pretty much the same," he said. "Each has the same personality pattern, the same desire for escape and sensation, the same inability to meet life squarely, and cries for help in life without artificial stimulation or an outlet into illusion."

These men would advocate a plan by AA to invite drug addicts to attend meetings with the eventual idea of forming a purely addict group if the experiment worked out. They think it would be a fine thing if AA could bring their talks and psychiatric lectures to addicts while they are still doing time.

It's the kind of thing that might die a natural death, however, the sheer weight of obstacles in its path. On the other hand, like Alcoholics Anonymous, it might be a God-send to many thousands of persons with ruined, wasted lives.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE INWARD GOD

I have always liked the word enthusiasm. I never quite appreciated its significance until I came across the explanation in one of my books where it said the Greek word from which we get our English word. No wonder people do great things when enthused!

With the inward god dominating the soul, no person, no things are sure to be achieved. The old Roman priest exhortation am is, of course, youth. Then it is that this inward god gets into full stride. It manages to live there throughout the many years that follow.

It has often been said that nothing has ever been accomplished without enthusiasm, or without the god within us. Recorded history and the acts of men and women clearly demonstrate this fact, for it is written in thousands of books. An idea, an inspired purpose—and the inward god. Through this partnership, great inventions, discoveries, wrongs righted, visions given reality, and the world brought into the world for the benefit of all.

How important are the conquests of youth! Youth can do so much with a little faith. In later life faith is not always found, for it hasn't the strength to back it up, nor the vision. Much of our youth and its visions are preserved to us because of our habitual associations with those of youth.

It is this god within us that inspires every kind and good deed we have ever done. It is responsible for all that is best, but the act itself is the proof. An Emerson told us to hitch our wagon to a star, he gave us valuable advice. Emerson was also telling that by so doing when he said that "a man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?" It is that inward god that keeps us buoyed up and filled with hope for our world, whatever it may be.

Within our mind we carry many a happy memory, and an accumulation of knowledge that covers many years of toil and mental selection, but all this would appear futile and uninspiring were it not for the fact that we have also acquired this inward god to touch and bring us to the heights of beauty.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed.

IATROPHOBIA AND HEALTH EDUCATION

Here is an ailment which is almost universal, yet it isn't even mentioned in Webster, nor for that matter in current medical dictionaries. To all the youth-hope some readers will remember what I said about iatrogenic heart trouble a year ago, iatrogenic signifying produced by the doctor—iatrophobia is a word I whipped up myself, out of iatros, physician or treatment, and phobos, morbid dread or fear.

In his classic textbook Psychological Care of Infant and Child John B. Watson, Ph. D., shows that a normal infant has no natural or instinctive fear of furry animals or of cold, clammy, squirmy fish, frogs or snakes. The child learns to fear these various animals from example—that is, the child dread the reaction which he or other child fears this or that animal and thus acquires similar fears.

This is true of the extreme iatrophobia which is a serious complication in many instances. Familiar example of this is the terror the badly trained child shows for vaccination, examination of the throat, various skin tests or immunizing shots. One contracts so noticeably with the matter-of-fact attitude of the well-trained child in such circumstances.

When I told here of the sorrow I felt at the reproachful look from the Welsh Terror gave me as I turned him over to the veterinarian for execution, a reader asked why under the sun I hadn't given Tony a pill an hour or so before—so Tony would not have known or cared what was up. I was headed for Dog Heaven or not. The answer is that was the veterinarian had assured me that injection of strychnine into the heart was the quickest and least painful way.

Another reader put in a rejoinder: Yes, but a pill you know, the medicine you recommend for dentists to prescribe or administer to patients an hour or two before they get into the chair. I'm afraid I'm not fooling these readers' line of thought. I'm sure Tony had no more fear of what was going to happen then he had experienced whenever he had visited the vet's office before. There is no parallel between an animal being led to slaughter and a patient going to the doctor or dentist for treatment. The animal has no foresight or foreboding—just as you or I have some about what painful or fatal operation may happen today or next week.

In regard to the medicine I recommend that dentists prescribe for or administer to patients a few hours before treatment that may be painful, stipulated that I cannot prescribe for or recommend medicines for laymen, though I shall of course name it for any dentist who may ask—provided the request is accompanied with stamped self-addressed envelope. Incidentally a good many correspondents who may wonder if I have not acknowledged or replied to their requests for information or consent to use of my material ought to know better.

I have given the problem of fear of the dentist or dental treatment a good deal of study since I recommended that alternative medicine. It may still be necessary and advisable in many cases, but I am satisfied now that nothing of the kind is necessary in most cases, provided the dentist is skilled in the technique of local anesthesia.

Today a dentist can do almost anything that needs to be done under local anesthesia without pain—if he has the proper equipment—either at the time or afterward. I have had a fair experience with such skilful treatment a few times he or she no longer worries about local treatment. My attention with the dentist becomes an interval of pleasant relaxation. If indeed one does not doze while the dentists works away.

Some other psychology applies to medical and surgical treatment. Physicians and surgeons are skilled in local anesthesia rarely need hurt a patient. Indeed it is likely that in iatrophobia today is a reflection upon the intelligence of the victim or the skill of the doctor.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Recicocle

I am anxious to learn what recicocle is. Can find nothing about it in dictionary, (Mrs. D. G.)

Answer—A bulging of rectal wall in vaginal passage, generally due to a tear of the pelvic floor muscles in childbirth if the condition gives much trouble it may require surgical repair.

Jitters at the Age of Ten?

Ten year old son gets very upset and nervous when he has examinations at school. He studies hard and gets on very well, but still the worries. (Mrs. W. J.)

Answer—Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet Examination Jitters. Maybe it would be better for a boy of that age to do no studying out of school hours, certainly no "home work."

Award Contract For School To McFarland

Trenton—(Special)—It was decided to award the contract for the building of an eight-roomed primary school on the east side of the river to the McFarland Construction Company of Picton at the regular meeting of the Board of Education on Tuesday night. McFarland's tender was for $225,-995 while the other bids ranged as high as $270,000.

The new school will be located north east of the present high school. It will be built on Sellers Street, off West Street.

Final approval of the Board of Education's decision rests with the Department of Municipal Affairs in Toronto, and an answer is expected in a week. The board here is anxious that the construction commences immediately.

Additional school facilities will alleviate the crowded College Street school where four extra classrooms were installed in the basement this year. Even with the new school it is expected that eight classrooms will be set up in the basement of the College Street public school next year.

Speaker Calls For Longer Hours of Work

Toronto, May 3. (CP)—James Stewart, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, yesterday called for longer hours of work and a return to the labor force of retired persons and housewives if Canada is to increase its physical output.

Speaking at the three-day annual conference of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, Mr. Stewart said increase in production will also entail a natural increase in the labor force and the transfer of workers from non-essential industries.

"We stand at the beginning of an era which may mean 10 or 20 years of defence preparations —which may mean many years of all-out war, or which may mean peace," he said. "In any case, we should prepare for the future by extending and sustaining our productive capacity."

Irish Republic Faces Record Budget, Election

Dublin, May 3 — (Reuters) — The Republic of Ireland today faced a record budget, the ending Marshall-plan aid, and a possible general election as the sands seemed running out for Premier John A. Costello's three-year-old coalition government.

Costello is expected to visit President Sean T. O'Kelly Monday to request dissolution of the present dail (parliament).

If he stumps the country now he can say the Republic of Ireland is the second European country to progress enough to be able to give up Marshall dollars.

Finance Minister Patrick McGilligan last night told the dail that by mutual agreement with the United States the Marshall program will stop — after Ireland had received a total of $146,200,-000 aid, $18,000,000 in outright grants.

McGilligan brought down a record £81,783,000 ($228,929,600) budget, with only motorists feeling much hardship.

He boosted gasoline prices by twopence (23 cents) to one shilling and fourpence (18 2/3 cents) a gallon. Estate and stamp duties also rose slightly. Income - tax allowances for children were increased.

Dissolution become probable when government deputies reacted to a filibuster to talk out the session without a vote on agricultural estimates. When the House rose it was generally believed it would not meet again until after an election.

Chief threat to Costello's reigning power will be lank-haired, Brooklyn - born Eamon de Valera, premier for 16 years until ousted in 1948. De Valera's Fianna Fail party is the biggest in the present dail but by skilful nursing of minority parties Costello's coalition has survived.

Attlee Government Approves Charges on Spectacles, False Teeth After Lengthy Debate

London, May 3. (CP)—The House of Commons voted early today to end free false teeth and eyeglasses for Britons, but not before many angry Socialists staged one of the biggest revolts against the Labor government since it came to power in 1945.

The Commons approved by a vote of 283 to 9 a bill to curtail the services. Insistent opponents prolonged the debate until early morning.

Between 30 and 50 rebel Labor M.P.s defied a government "three line whip"—a disciplinary order requiring all party members to vote for the bill—and abstained.

Most Conservatives, who had supported the new charge, also abstained, although a handful went along with the government.

The bill will require Britons to pay half the cost of the eyeglasses and dentures for the next three years.

It was part of the government's April budget which called for the cut in public health costs to provide more money for an expanded arms program.

Furnished the Fuse

This furnished the fuse for the Labor party rift that exploded two weeks ago, when Aneurin Bevan and two other government members quit their posts. Bevan and his adherents contended that such a move violated the concept of free public health service.

The bill set April 1954, as the time limit for charging for dentures and spectacles unless parliament extends the deadline. The time limit was a concession to reluctant Labor M.P.'s inclined toward the Bevan view.

During the debate, the Commons was told that some of Britain's free false teeth have gone astray all over the world.

E. H. Keeling, a Conservative member, related that one unmarried German girl, about to become a mother, hurried to Britain to save her reputation and take advantage of the socialized health service.

He said she gave birth at the expense of the British taxpayer, left the child to be taken care of by British welfare agencies and went home "without a stain on her character" but with a set of Britain's false teeth.

Newcastle - on - Tyne, England, May 3 — (Reuters) — Flt.-Lt. A. W. Bedford yesterday flew 223 miles in a glider plane to set a British record. During his 8 3/4-hour flight he reached a height of 10,000 feet. The previous record was 232 miles.

GET BIG HAUL

Winona, W. Va., May 3 (AP)— Two youths, their faces streaked with paint like Indians on the warpath, robbed the Winona National Bank yesterday of from $40,000 to $45,000. It was the third holdup of the bank in the last six months.

WEDDINGS

MORTON—ARMSTRONG

On Saturday, April 28, at 11 a.m., the Church of St. Thomas, was the setting for the marriage of Vera Louise, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Armstrong, of Napanee, and Stanley Charles, son of Mrs. Morton, and the late Rev. Stanley Edgar Morton, of Belleville.

Rev. William J. Robinson, brother-in-law of the bride, performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by Dr. Samuel Miles, chose a floor gown of aqua Chantilly lace. The decollete bodice topped by a closely fitted bolero, was accentuated with three-quarter sleeves and Peter Pan collar. Her shoulder veil fell from a matching lace cap and she carried a nosegay of white sweetheart roses centred with red roses and forget-me-nots.

Miss Lois Spencer was maid of honor, and wore a coffee lace gown, cut on similar lines to that of the bride. She wore a matching lace cap and mitts and carried a nosegay of deep bronze gladioli and sweetheart roses.

The groomsman was Mr. Ralph Morton, brother of the bridegroom.

After the marriage, a reception was held in the Club room of St. Thomas' Parish House, where a delicious luncheon was served by St. Thomas' Parish Guild.

Assisting in receiving the guests, Mrs. Fred Armstrong, mother of the bride, wore a printed dress of grey silk with navy accessories and a corsage of pink sweetpeas. The mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Stanley Morton, wore a black corded silk suit with grey accessories, and a corsage of red sweetpeas.

The bridal table was attractive with a lovely flowered candle cloth centred with wedding cake and a gleaming silver candelabra with pink and white candles.

Toasts to the bride were given by Rev. William Robinson and Archdeacon Arthur Smith, to which the bridegroom responded.

The happy couple left by motor for Montreal and Quebec City, the bride travelling in a grey wool tailored suit with navy hat, bag and shoes. A navy topcoat completed the ensemble.

Previous to her marriage, the bride was entertained by Mrs. William Solway, Mrs. Bruce Bishop and Mrs. Stanley Wiggins; Mrs. Mac Smith, Mrs. Samuel Miles and Miss Lois Spencer.

Girls, Work Board Gives Charming Tea

Yesterday afternoon the Girls' Work Board of Belleville, which is a local branch of the Toronto Board, and inter-denominational in character, held their spring tea and sale of home cooking in the assembly room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with a fine attendance of friends and members and guests, who were most graciously received by the president, Mrs. R. Morden, and Mrs. D. Cole.

One side of the assembly room was devoted to the exhibit of various projects by the Canadian Girls in Training, their camp at Quin-Mo-Lac showing several views of the same, and a map of North America, and one of India, depicting the stations, by means of photographs of the missionaries, in the several places where missionary work was being done.

The projects included the making of Japanese fans, bookmarks and table place cards, and of little ladies with colorful parasols. A Japanese family, with homes, shrine, and bowing cushions was also on exhibition. For the Canadian Girl in Training, a large doll, complete with blue and white uniform, represented that organization, and for handwork, there were dolls dressed as brides, as well as artificial tissue paper flowers, all exceedingly well done. Some chairs had been nicely enamelled as a church project, and there were also wall plaques and baskets of small fruits.

Across the opposite ends, and enclosing the quadrangle where the small quartet tables were arranged, each with its snowy white cloth centred by a tall, white candle resting from a ruff of blue and white, denoting the colors of the C.G.I.T., were the table of home cooking and the tea table.

The tea table was most attractive with its creamy-colored lunch cloth, centred with a crystal bowl of white, red and mauve sweetpeas, flanked by silver candelabra with white cathedral candles, and silver services. Those who assisted were: Mrs. J. G. Hornsby, Mrs. S. R. Larman, Mrs. D. McNevin and Mrs. F. R. Harback. While those who served included Mrs. D. Kane and the members of the Girls' Work Board, the C.G.I.T. leaders and the C.G.I.T. girls.

The home cooking table was laden with an assortment of luscious cluff cakes, tarts, pies, cup cakes, various kinds of cookies, some coconut covered, others plain and buttered, and shortbread, nut and date loaves, while shining jars of relish, pickles, jelly and home-made candy added their allure, and quickly disappeared into nicely filled boxes, preparatory to going some festive board. Mrs. N. Cathers, Mrs. D. Cook, and Mrs. R. Nelson were in charge here.

The treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. V. Weir and the convener of this dainty and delightful tea was D. Kane to whom appreciation is extended, also to those of the Work Board, and to all who assisted in its successful culmination.

Canape—from the French meaning sofa.

The "sofa" is usually, though not necessarily, small. On the canape may rest meat, chicken, sea food, fish, pastes or any colorful confection of foods, hot or cold. The canapes may be crackers, bread baskets, potato chips, rice or similar bases.

While canapes are usually served as small appetizers cut into squares, rectangles, etc., they may also be made into light main courses, as in today's recipe.

Finnan haddie on toast may be cut into small squares or served uncut in large portions. Finnan haddie is the Scotch way of saying smoked haddock. Its smoky flavor makes this fish suitable as either appetizer or main course. In either case it should be overshot and fragrant with a melted cheese topping.

Smoked Haddock Canape
Serves 4.

1 lb. smoked haddock (finnan haddie)
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter
1 small onion
1 small green pepper
2 tablespoons flour
1 hard boiled egg
Ground pepper
4-4 cup grated process pimento cheese
8 slices of white bread toasted lightly
Paprika

Wash haddock. Cover with milk in a saucepan. Simmer, do not boil, about 15 minutes or until fish is tender.

Drain fish, reserving milk. Remove bones, if any, and skin from fish. Force fish through a food chopper.

Melt the butter in a saucepan. Chop onion and green pepper fine. Saute chopped vegetables in butter 5 minutes. Avoid browning.

Remove pan from flame. Stir in the flour, mixing well. Gradually add 3-4 cup hot milk in which fish was simmered.

Return to a slow flame. Simmer 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from flame.

Chop the hard boiled egg, and add to sauce. Add finnan haddie. Stir well. Add salt, if necessary, and pepper to taste.

Spread the fish mixture on the toast, covering the bread completely. Sprinkle cheese over the fish mixture. Sprinkle with paprika. Put toast on a cookie sheet in a moderate oven for 5 to 10 minutes or until cheese begins to brown.

Offer Graduates Graceful Styles

New York — (CP) — With school closing just around the corner, here is a peek at what New York designers have whipped up for 1951 girl graduates, with a forward-looking eye to summer days and evenings after graduation.

Whether in short length or swirling about the toes, the vote is for a full-skirted dress of snowy pique, organdy or cotton lace. But by way of contrast, there's an occasional choice such as, pale yellow marquisette—yards and yards of it—over matching taffeta.

Sleeves range from very brief to full-length, but there's always a sleeve. If the dress itself is bare-topped or sleeveless, it has a cover-up jacket or — the season's fashion highlight — a matching short-sleeved coat.

Among the short-length dresses is one of cotton pique with oval neckline and cap sleeves. A mid-riff section of organdy is bordered above and below the waist, with small cotton-lace flowers.

A shirtwaist dress of cotton lace has cuffed three-quarter-length sleeves seamed off the shoulder, a neat shawl collar and flared skirt. The tailored belt is of black velvet.

For an evening graduation, the choice might be a strapless white organdy in ballet length with scattered embroidered organdy coat.

Among long dresses, there's white pique with short kimono sleeves and inch-wide belt of the fabric. A fan band of heavy white lace outlines the deep, square neckline and twin pockets on the gored skirt.

In more romantic mood is an embroidered white organdy with snugly fitted bodice and billowing skirt, it's deep, rounded neckline finished with a stand-out circular collar and an inset of tucked organdy.

Bridal Gown of Victorian Era Much the Same as 1951 Styles

That was the conclusion of the women's page staff of the Winnipeg Tribune which ran a layout of pictures showing a typical wedding dress of today alongside others 15, 35 and 75 years ago.

The camera studies showed a definite similarity of lines. When some brides of 50 and 60 years ago were asked about it, they said the main difference between then and now is that in the earlier period there were bustles and voluminous petticoats.

Numerous women questioned said they had held on to their wedding gowns. Some could be found in attics, preserved as treasured family heirlooms and carefully wrapped and stored away in old trunks.

Mrs. Jessie Crerar, the wife of Senator T. A. Crerar, who was married in Solsgirth, Man., 45 years ago, still has her wedding gown of cream duchess satin.

Another old-time bride who held on to her wedding dress is Mrs. T. Herbert Rhodes. When she and Mr. Rhodes celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary a few weeks ago Mrs. Rhodes wore an underskirt made from her bridal gown.

Gowns of 75 Years Ago

Two of the wedding gowns featured in the picture layout dated back to days many of Winnipeg's churches had electric lights. One was worn in 1876 and another by a bride of 1876. It was 1882 before Grace Church became the first in Winnipeg to use electric lighting.

One picture showed Mrs. W. Arthur Johnston on her 1941 wedding day wearing the dress worn by a relative, Emma Maria Baker, when she was married in Woodstock, Ont., in 1878. The lovely ivory taffeta dress looked almost new when it was brought out from its trunk.

The vein of limerick lace, which fell the length of the train, was loaned to the bride by Mrs. R. Y. Kilvert who wore it at her 1908 wedding in Montreal. It was sent to her by an uncle, Sir Charles Hanson, former lord mayor of London.

Mrs. D. A. Ritchie has the dress that was worn by her aunt, a Mrs. Powell, when she was married 75 years ago in Toronto. When Mrs. Ritchie's only daughter was married here in 1941 she wore her great-aunt's gown, a lovely dress of point de France lace over taffeta.

Mrs. Priscilla Davis, wife of Senator John Caswell Davis, who was married in 1916, has held on to her wedding gown of eggshell silk faille throught 35 years of married life. It had a detachable bishop's train.

"From this train I made a christening coat and bonnet in which all my four children and seven grandsons were christened," Mrs. Davis said. "The dress was made by two French dressmakers who had a shop downtown (in Winnipeg). It was a nice dress and has brought me a great deal of happiness—not many cloudy days."

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Feels her husband is failing her.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a married woman living in a small town. My husband does not want me working, but he doesn't give me any money nor pay any bills.

I am sure he is keeping another woman. The law in this town won't do anything about it. What would you do?

A. M.

Dear A.M.:

If your husband refuses to give you any money, then I would say you had a perfect right to go to work and earn what you need. However, it seems to me that before you do anything of the sort, it would be a good plan for you to discuss this problem with some organization experienced in advising on such things.

I am not clear as to what you mean when you say the law in your town will not do anything about your situation, but I am sure there is some place you can go for help in working out your problem. If you aren't able to locate such a place, write me again, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, and I will give you further information.

Her mother wants her to "go steady"—she doesn't want to

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 14, and going steady with a boy of 15. I think I'm too young to go steady, and I would like to go with other boys, but my mother likes this one and won't allow me to go with any others.

He is polite and has nice manners, but I just don't want to go steady. I try to explain to my mother, but she doesn't agree with me. She thinks he is nice, and she says people will talk if I date other boys. He is very jealous, and whenever he sees me talking to any other boy he gets mad and tells him to lay off. Also, he likes to neck a lot, and I don't. Do you think my mother is right, and what should I do?

A. H.

Dear A.H.:

I'm afraid I don't agree with your mother. I think that at 14 you shouldn't be "going steady" at all, but should be going out with anybody you please, so long as they're proper companions for you. As for this petting-par boy, I don't think as much of his manners as you do. I think his manners could stand considerable improvement if he's so jealous and "likes to neck a lot". On that last point, keep right on not liking it. The girl who steers clear of "necking" is the girl who gets the nicest boys in the end.

What does your father think about all this? If you're good friends with him, why don't you talk to him about it and see if you can't get him on your side?

The only other thing I can suggest is for you to deal directly with this boy yourself. Tell him you're not his girl, and that if he can't accept you just as a friend to go out with once in awhile, and be willing for you to go out with other boys, then you are not going to go out with him at all. It won't hurt a bit if you quarrel with him about it a little. If he gets mad, and breaks off with you, so much for the better. Then, just don't make up with him.

By all means, send your friend a birthday card

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Would it be proper for me to send a birthday card to a young man with whom I used to go steady? We do not live near one another, so I thought this would be the only possible way for me to wish him a happy birthday, since we still are friends

D. A. E.

Dear D.A.E.:

Certainly it would be perfectly all right for you to send a birthday card to your friend. But in case you are secretly hoping it might prove a way of going back to the "steady" basis, don't set your heart on it too much so that you'll be disappointed if nothing comes of it.

If you are content just to be friends, there's no reason why you shouldn't let him know you think of him from time to time and particularly on a special occasion like a birthday.

Public School Teachers Given $200 Increase

Stirling—An increase of $200 in salary for re-engagement for 1951 and $2 has been offered the members of the staff of the local public school following a meeting of the school board on Monday night. Chairman R. E. Fox presided and all members of the board were present.

Letter Tabled

H. H. Tompkins, chairman of the Teachers' Committee, tabled a letter signed by all members of the staff requesting the board to adopt the regular contract form and an increase of $300 in salary. A lengthy discussion followed in which some criticism from parents as to the progress being made by their children was aired, and the question of the adoption of a salary schedule debated.

Mr. Tompkins reported that since the inspector's report had not been received, the committee had no report on the work of the individual teachers, although he had had a personal interview with the inspector.

Salary Schedule Adopted

A salary schedule was adopted as follows, assistant teachers, minimum $1,800, with yearly increasement of $100 until maximum of $2,100 is reached, principal minimum $2,200 with yearly increasement of $100 until maximum of $2,600 is reached.

Reporting for the Property Committee, Mr. C. I. Hallon stated work on the new school had progressed and occupancy of the new rooms took place the latter part of last week.

Suitable Walk Discussed

The matter of a suitable walk to permit the children to enter the school grounds from Emma Street thence into the building by the northern entrance discussed and the property committee was authorized to have a gravel walk provided. The demolition of the old school building will prevent admission by the main entrance.

Accounts Presented

R. A. Patterson, chairman of Finance, presented several accounts for payment. The matter of public liability insurance on accident insurance on public school pupils was discussed and the Finance Committee was instructed to make further inquiries and report at the next board meeting.

REACH AGREEMENT

Ottawa, May 3 (CP)—Justice Minister Garson said Wednesday night the federal government has reached agreement with a majority of the 10 provinces on a constitutional proposal leading to a system of old age pensions at 65.

He said he did not wish to name the provinces that have already reached agreement with the federal government because it would point up those yet to sanction the phrasing of a proposed constitutional amendment. "And we expect agreement from all provinces shortly," he added.

Price of Milk Remains Stable For Time Being

Toronto, May 3 — (CP) — Toronto consumers who fear the price of milk may rise as high as 24 cents a quart got some encouragement Wednesday from Mayor Hiram McCallum.

The municipal representative on the Ontario Milk Control Board, Mayor McCallum said the board intends to make all concerned — producers and distributors — show reason why the increases should be put into effect. He added that the board is exploring all possible means of effecting economies and didn't think that Toronto would have 24-cent milk.

The board has two applications for increases on its hands. The first is from dairies who want prices raised to 21 cents from the present ceiling of 20½ for delivered milk. The farmers supplying the Toronto market asked Tuesday for a hike from $4.30 a hundredweight to $5.71.

The board wants more information from both groups and the price will remain stable for a while at least.

FORCED TO RAISE RATES

Lindsay, May 3 (CP) —Board of Directors at Lindsay's Ross Memorial Hospital said Wednesday that they have been forced to raise the rates.

The new rates will go into effect this month. From $3.50 a day in the public wards to $4.75 and private rooms have been raised from $6.50 to $8.00 a day. Last year the hospital had a deficit of over $30,000.

Took too Long To Return Boat

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—Lionel V. Lloyd of Kingston, took too long to make up his mind to return a motorboat he had bought for $1,000.

The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled Wednesday that, because he waited "two or three days" before taking the boat back to S. C. Sedgwick of Gananoque, he should not get his money back.

Evidence was that Lloyd accepted the boat, kept it two or three days, then stopped payment on his cheque and returned the boat to Sedgwick.

The Court of Appeal reversed a decision by Judge W. S. Lane that Lloyd was entitled to a refund.

There's never been an enamel finish like Kem-Glo! It's like magic! Just once over most surfaces with smooth-flowing Kem-Glo and you've protected your walls, cupboards and other surfaces with a porcelain-like lustre finish that is smooth and scrubbable — really scrubbable—with ordinary soap and water.

There's no mixing or mussing; you just stir and start painting. You'll love the smooth results you get with this "easy-on" finish, using brush or Roller Koater. Yet it is so tough that boiling water will not harm it; it is practically scuff-proof; and you can wipe off grease and stains with a cloth — just as you do on your modern refrigerator.

Made by the makers of famous KEM-TONE

POLICE COURT

Given Suspended Sentence for Assault

Pleading guilty to common assault, N. Green of Stirling, in county magistrate's court today was given suspended sentence for one year and assessed costs of $31.10.

Green was charged with assaulting Frank Whiteman, also of Stirling. Both men are employed at the same business establishment at Stirling, the assault following a discussion over the use of a certain piece of equipment at the garage.

Francis Donahue, city, was sentenced to six months in the reformatory on a fourth offence drunk charge. When asked if he had anything to say for himself, Donahue requested the term be five and one month instead of one six. This, he felt, would give him an opportunity later this year to secure employment in the fruit harvest in Western Ontario.

"This man does not warrant consideration, he has had every opportunity," stated Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan. The magistrate agreed and fixed the six-month penalty.

A Deseronto resident, J. Mowbray, was given seven days on a drunk driving charge and had his licence suspended for three months. There was no accident involved, police stated.

Smaller Climb Predicted In March Index

Ottawa, May 3. (CP)—An official survey of living costs in March will be made public tomorrow and if Trade Minister Howe's prognostication come true, it will show only a fraction of the record climb in February.

The official cost-of-living index, compiled by the Bureau of Statistics, stands at 179.7 points, the highest in history boosted by February's 4.5-points climb, the highest monthly point climb ever.

But Mr. Howe told the Commons in a cost-of-living debate April 9 that this record climb in February likely won't be repeated in March. A preliminary survey by his department indicated to him that the living-cost barometer would hold even or show an increase of not more than one-half per cent.

It starts the ball then, that the index may climb no more than .9 points, the smallest climb in the last half-year. One possible clue as to how far the index may go up or down is the fact that the survey field will not include rent, which makes up 12 per cent of the index. Rent is surveyed on a quarterly basis. The last survey, published in the February index, showed a climb of 1.3 points to a high of 127.6 from 126.4. Both the index and its sub-groups are based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

Another possible clue is the rate of change in wholesale prices. The bureau's March index for 30 industrial materials showed a relatively-small increase of 2.5 points to a high of 303.9 from 303.4.

But the main emphasis still lies in food. Food accounts for 31 per cent of the index. Most heavy index jumps have been accompanied by equally-heavy climbs in the food sub-group.

In February, the food subgroup rose 9.5 points to 223.9 from 224.4. In a period of 12 months, it has risen about 20 points.

SENTENCED TO HANG

Nanaimo, B.C., May 3—Martin Sezny, last night was sentenced to be hanged for the slaying in February of Louis Oscar, at west coast Vancouver Island settlement.

Sezny, an Indian, was convicted of murder after an assize jury deliberated 4½ hours. The jury recommended mercy.

Oscar, also an Indian, was shot Feb. 6 at the settlement of Battle Bay.

Mr. Justice A. M. Manson sentenced Sezny to be hanged Aug. 17. It marked the first time in more than 25 years that the death penalty has been handed out in a Nanaimo court.

Koreans Play Major Role In Allied Defence

Somewhere in Korea, May 3 — (AP) —The Republic of Korea's first division played a major role in the successful allied defence against the communist offensive that struck in full force the night of April 22.

For days there had been indications of a communist build-up. The division, commanded by Brig.-Gen. Kang Song Bong, sent out long-range patrols.

"They kept in close contact with friendly guerrilla groups. The communists thought they were our main line of resistance and when they came in force we were waiting for them," Gen Kang said in an interview Wednesday.

The communists hit the 1st ROK division outpost line at 10 p.m., April 22. In a few spots small groups of North Koreans and Chinese infiltrated the defence line.

When the communist offensive started the 1st was holding a 15-mile front.

Kang estimated 75,000 North Koreans and, Chinese communist troops, representing nine divisions, faced his men. The communists struck Kangs front with three assault divisions. When these had been badly battered they were replaced in the line by three fresh divisions.

Kang said that during the first three days of fighting his men rendered those nine communist divisions completely ineffective.

Alberta Left In Sea of Mud By Heavy Rains

Edmonton, May 3 (CP) —Four days of continuous rain — the heaviest spring fall in years — has left Alberta a virtual sea of mud. Four inches of rain has been recorded in some areas.

Several rivers have already overflowed their banks and rail and road traffic has been disrupted at many points. The Dominion weather office reported last night that still more rain is on the way.

The Northern Albert Railways announced that 17 miles of track have been inundated and a 44-mile CNR run on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border has been cancelled because nine miles of track are under water. Trains pass over the line twice a week.

Road traffic has also been stopped in many areas. The Alberta Motor Association reported today that most district side roads throughout the province are impassable.

Forest Fire Races Unchecked Along N. S. South Shore

Halifax, May 3 — (CP) — A mushrooming forest fire raced unchecked today along Nova Scotia's south shore, threatening three communities and valuable properties.

The fire, which started yesterday and burned uncontrolled throughout the night, is sweeping along Blandford highway, near Hubbards, about 40 miles south of here.

No lives are in danger. It is the first forest fire in the province this year.

Communities threatened by the crackling inferno—which is believed to have started by a flash fire—are Deep Cove, North West Cove and The Ledge. Many expensive country homes are in the danger zone.

Fire officials and Rangers, weary after battling the fire throughout the night figure they can control the blaze. Additional fire equipment has been sent to the area.

An area of roughly five square miles has been destroyed. So far, no official estimate of damage has been given.

NO WASH, NO WIPE TONIGHT!
NEW DREFT DOES BOTH AND DISHES SHINE

ALL YOU DO IS RINSE even pots and pans glisten!

YOU DON'T WASH... instead of washing dishes just let them soak in warm Dreft suds for 2 minutes. Dreft floats grease and food particles away. Your hands barely touch the dishwater. All you have to do is rinse the dishes, giving a swish of the cloth where needed, and presto! They're done!

YOU DON'T WIPE... New Self-Washing Dreft leaves no dishwater film. It washes dishes and glasses so clean, they shine—even without wiping.

YOU DON'T SCOUR... Even pots and pans soak clean. Dreft's amazing "float-away" action gets under grease... lifts it off. Then grease rinses away... without scouring.

BEAUTY TIP! New Dreft is so mild, and your hands are in water so little, it leaves hands beautifully calm and soft!

Boston Braves are Burning Up National Loop With Dream Pitching From Mound Staff

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The first-place Boston Braves are burning up the National League with the kind of pitching that managers dream about. The big four of the Braves' mound staff —Warren Spahn, Johnny Sain, Vern Bickford and Matt Surhoff—have turned in four shutouts in seven days.

Adding to this splendid performance, the big four has turned in twice route-going performances in 15 starts. No wonder manager Bill Southworth is all smiles.

Yesterday it was Spahn's turn. The crafty southpaw, who led all National League pitchers with 21 victories last year, hurled the Braves back into first place with a six hit 5-0 victory over St. Louis Cardinals.

Pittsburgh's surprising Pirates made it two in a row over Brooklyn when Murry Dickson and the Dodgers down with five hits to win 4-3. The little righthander, who never was a big winner, couldn't beat the Dodgers last season. Don Newcombe, making his first start in more than a week, dropped his first decision. Ted Beard's pinch double in the eighth drove home the what proved to be the winning run.

Reds Beat Phillies

A two-bagger by Connie Ryan and a single by Grady Hatton featured a two-run ninth inning uprising that gave Cincinnati Reds a 4-3 triumph over the Phils in Philadelphia. Ewell Blackwell racked up his third win.

A couple of rookies collaborated to lead the Giants to a 5-3 victory over Chicago Cubs at the Polo Grounds. George Spencer, 24-year-old freshman right-hander, pitched a six-hitter. Catcher Ray Noble, substituting for the injured Wes Westrum, rifled in two runs with the bases loaded to open the game for a six-run seventh inning.

Cleveland Indians remained at the top of the American League, defeating Washington 5-2. Bob Lemon shaded Boston Red Sox 4-3 and the Senators whipped the Browns in a St. Louis night affair, 8-1. The hitting of rookie Harry (Suitcase) Simpson and the pitching of Bob Lemon and Lou Brissie highlighted the Indians' second straight decision over the Red Sox. Simpson, filling in for the ailing Luke Easter at first base, slapped out four hits in as many times at bat.

Forced to Retire

Lemon pitched shutout ball for five innings before he was forced to retire because of a pulled muscle in his back.

Sandy Consuegra limited the Browns to five hits for his third victory without a defeat.

Scoring five unearned runs on a couple of Chicago errors, New York Yankees came from behind to defeat the White Sox 6-4 for a sweep of the two-game series. An error by Chico Carrasquel, after two out in the fifth, opened the floodgates for three runs. Another miscue by Orestes Minoso, the new third-baseman, paved the way for the two winning runs in the ninth.

Singles by pinch-hitter Pat Mullin and Johnny Groth accounted for a pair of runs in the bottom half of the 10th to give Detroit a 3-4 victory over the Athletics.

Hudson Pitches His Second Win For Maple Leafs

(By The Associated Press)

You've probably never heard of Hal Hudson. Few people have. But all this may be changed by next year.

Hudson, who'll be 23 tomorrow, is a young lefthander who has been pitching minor-league baseball since 1944. Each season he has advanced, and today he's writing with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League. Manager Joe Becker likes the look of the kid, who has had two straight victories—one in relief and one as a starter.

Hudson, a 175 pounder, stopped Montreal Royals 6-1 on five hits yesterday. He struck out seven and walked four. To top it, he belted in a run with a single.

Bobby Rhawn, with two singles and a triple, paced Toronto's 11-hit assault. Bob Alexander, batter out in the second inning, was the loser.

The defeat knocked Montreal out of first place, Syracuse took over the top-spot by defeating Springfield Cubs 5-2. Jack Robinson scattered seven hits to chalk up his third straight victory.

A four-run first inning sparked Buffalo Bisons to a 7-3 win over Ottawa. Rookie southpaw Jake Schmidt struck out nine as he pitched Baltimore to a 3-2 victory over Rochester. Schmidt himself drove in what proved to be the winning run in the ninth.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Batting: Harry Simpson, Indians —Rookie outfielder subbing for the injured Luke Easter at first base cracked four hits in four times at bat to lead the tribe to a 4-3 victory over the Red Sox.

Pitching: Warren Spahn, Braves —Pitched a six-hit shutout, the fourth Boston shutout in seven days, as the Braves blanked St. Louis Cards 4-0 to move into first place.

Betting Public Loses 19 Cents Of Every Dollar

(By The Canadian Press)

The Canadian racing season got its earliest start in history Wednesday when 10,000 prospective betters crowded into Dufferin race track, Fred Cryer's half-mile oval in Toronto's west end.

The only certainty about the 146 days of racing between now and Nov. 5 is that the government will wind up ahead—something that will happen to only a small part of the betting public.

Eighty-one cents of every dollar bet at mutuels goes back into the betting pool. The other 19 cents, a reduction of about 3½ cents from last year, is divided between taxes and the track. Taxes range from 10 to 14 per cent with the rest going to the track.

Right winger Doug Verity of Brighton Tigers of the English National Hockey League has been signed contrary to the fact your friends have been informed.

Verity, a former member of Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen is a native of Paris, Ont., and as a junior played with Galt.

Frank Sargent, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association representative at the Lakehead, said Wednesday there is a possibility that the winner of the Intermediate Memorial Cup finals will be played at the Fort William Gardens.

The best-of-seven junior hockey final between Flyers and Winnipeg Mopsrks opened Wednesday night at Winnipeg.

Ford Frick, President of the National Baseball League, said Wednesday night the "whole question of television" will be taken up at the league's midsummer meeting in Detroit at the time of the all-star game in July. At the present, rights to baseball TV is vested in each home club.

Roger Bannister, British distance star who ran a blistering 4:08.3 in the Penn relays last Saturday, accepted an invitation to defend his Benjamin Franklin mile title next year prior to leaving today for London.

Banister stepped a :56.7 last quarter en route to his new meet record.

Tommy Lawton, famous England and Notts County centre-forward, turned down a New York offer Wednesday to coach American soccer teams this summer.

Lawton had a "tempting" cable offer from the manager of the German - Hungarian team in Brooklyn who said an acceptance would give a big boost to soccer in the United States.

Wally Hergesheimer of Cleveland Barons, has been chosen the American hockey league's rookie of the year.

With the league's nine coaches voting for three candidates on a 5-3-1 points basis, Hergesheimer received 34 points out of a possible 45.

He was also chosen as right-winger on the league's second all-star team, which earned him $200.

Hergesheimer scored 84 points during the regular season in 70 games. His 42 goals set a record of tallies for a first-year player

Organized Ball May Come Under Eye of Govt.

Washington, May 3—(AP)—Organized baseball soon may come under the eye of Congressional investigators in the U.S. House of Representatives.

This became known today in advance of a scheduled meeting of the house judiciary sub-committee on monopoly power. The session was called to map new avenues for the committee's two-year-old inquiry into monopolistic tendencies.

Chairman Emanuel Celler (Dem., N.Y.) was reported in favor a proposal to give baseball a quick, once-over on its compliance with the federal anti-trust laws.

The baseball investigation, in the event it is voted, is expected to centre on organized baseball's long-discussed "reserve" clause. This is a contract provision giving club owners virtually-absolute rights over the services of their players.

It has been criticized as a denial of the right of free bargaining in the commonly-accepted sense.

Only recently a $150,000 court suit was started by Jim Pendergast, a member of the Syracuse club of the International league, to test this provision of baseball contracts.

Organized baseball's tight-fisted player controls were spotlighted shortly after the war as never put to legal test—by the furious controversy surrounding jumping to the Mexican league.

In this case, a number of major-league players signed high-paying contracts to play baseball in Mexico, quitting U.S. teams. They were suspended from organized U.S. baseball for life.

The resulting litigation was eventually settled out of court by American club owners without a test of their powers, and players who sought it were granted reinstatement.

Monarchs Even Series Defeating Valleyfield 4-1

By JIM BASTABLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—In the words of a seven-way-dis hockey star who made himself a reputation beating goaltenders:

Get Phil Hughes' number and you get St. Michael's."

Hector (Toe) Blake wasn't fooling.

His Valleyfield Braves were handed a 4-1 licking by Tuesday St. Michael's Monarchs last night which tied up their best-of-seven series for the Alexander Cup at one game apiece. Valleyfield won the first game 6-1.

It was Hughes, a 195-pounder from Port Arthur, who once again put the damper on things.

Hughes who has robbed opponents right and left all season had not much work on things.

But when he was called upon, he came up with some dazzling saves. He stopped only 21 shots in all, at least six of them were labelled.

The third game of the series will be played here Saturday. Venue of the fourth, slated for Monday, switches on the winner of the third game. If Monarchs win it will be played at Montreal. If Braves win it will be played here.

Always on Top

Except for a few defensive lapses, Monarchs had things pretty well in hand. They drove into a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period, made it 3-1 in the second and then got the only goal in the third.

Ken Watson led the Toronto scorers with two goals. Centre Umbriaco and Bill McCracken defenceman, Jack Schmidt, a hard-working left-winger, scored the only Valleyfield goal.

The game was a small crowd of 1,941 fans, the smallest Quebec champions played before this season.

Referees Stan Pratt and Hap Shoulders, both of Ottawa, handed out a total of 17 penalties—including two 10-minute miscon-

Joe Louis Wins Popular Decision Over Agramonte

Admission in their own right, Lord Alfred Layton, British blublood and Chief Sunl War Cloud, will appear on the wrestling card here Friday night. Lord Layton made quite an impression here last week when he subdued Lee (The Lear) Henning while the Indian brave resplendent in feathered headdress also created quite an impression.

Detroit, May 2 — (AP) — If old Joe Louis can't keep the home lights with his best punches, what will happen when he tackles someone like Lee Savold?

Louis said last night he was satisfied with his right hand punch. Maybe he was but many of the 7,004 fans at Olympia Stadium weren't.

They thought the former heavyweight champion might knock out Omelio Agramonte of Cuba in the way that made Joe a great heavyweight champion for twelve years.

But Joe couldn't finish off the lanky Cuban in the 10 - round fight although he floored him once. Joe won a unanimous decision.

And now it's on to Lee Savold, British and European heavyweight champion, although International Boxing Club promoters haven't settled on the June date or place for the fight.

If Joe can beat Savold, who figures to be tougher than Agramonte, the Brown Bomber hopes to tangle with world heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles again.

Floors Agramonte in Second

In the second round Louis — trim - looking but still,minus the black-bushy right fist ruled the heavyweight world till last September — floored Agramonte. It was the first time in five comeback fights that Joe had knocked a fighter to the canvas.

In the ninth round he battered and dazed Agramonte who weighed only 193½ to Louis' 206 1/4. But again he couldn't kayo Omelio, who's not a big name in the boxing world.

Agramonte lasted 10 rounds against Joe back in February, but this time Louis trained harder and experimented with a tip-toe prance in an effort to regain some punching speed.

Louis got 40 per cent of last night's net receipts and Agramonte 12½. The gross gate was $21,668.80. Louis also got a $10,000 television cut and Agramonte $1,000.

Agramonte thought Louis hit harder last night than in February. The Cuban won the seventh round on two officials' scorecards and the tenth on another card.

Grantland Rice Fellowship Fund Is Established

New York, May 3 —(AP) — Establishment of a $50,000 Grantland Rice Fellowship Fund to honor the sports columnists 50 years of "distinguished service" in newspaper work, was announced yesterday by the New York Community Trust.

The gift, from a source who asked for anonymity, expressed the desire that the trust make an annual award of the Grantland Rice Fellowship in journalism, preferably at the graduate school in Columbia. The first grant will be made next September.

Rice, a native of Murfreesboro, Tenn., began his journalist career on the Nashville News in 1901. He now resides in New York.

Fort Frances Wins Over Owen Sound To Even Series

Owen Sound, Ont., May 3—(CP) —Fort Frances has evened the best-of-seven Allan Cup final series, but coach Bud Jarvis still is unhappy.

Although his team defeated Owen Sound Mercurys 4-2 last night for the second straight victory, Jarvis said he wasn't satisfied with the refereeing "even if the officials do come from the lakehead."

Fifth game of the series is Saturday night. All games are being played at Owen Sound.

Jarvis was sputtering in the dressing room following his team's victory.

Declaring "the refereeing was lousy," he said Fort Frances played a better game than the bonnetowners but could do even better.

In the losers' dressing room, coach Jack Markle of Owen Sound had a brief "no comment' on the game itself.

Bob Fero, John Irving, Willie Toninato and Sambo Fedoruk scored for the winners. Centre Tommy Burlington and linemate Jack Ingoldsby received top Owen Sound's two markers, with Burlington pulling the trigger to Ingoldsby's assists.

Fort Frances, who hold the distinction of inflicting the only losses the Mercurys have suffered on their home ice during the season, outclassed the Owen Sounders during the first two chapters.

Fero and Burlington both scored in the opening stanza. Then Owen Sound went ahead on Burlington's second goal but Fort Frances rapped in two from Irving and Fedoruk to make it 3-3 as the middle period neared.

Despite a frantic last-minute effort by Owen Sound, the Fort Frances margin was lengthened by Toninato who bounced a long shot from left wing.

Barrie Flyers One Step Closer To Memorial Cup

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, May 3—(CP)—Barrie Flyers are one step closer to giving the central Ontario town its first dominion junior hockey championship.

Happy Emms hustling club last night walloped Winnipeg Monarchs 5-1 in the opening game of their best-of-seven Memorial Cup final.

"Three more to go," was the Flyers' chant as they trooped to their dressing room after the one-sided contest. The next game is here Friday night and the third at Brandon Saturday.

Monarchs figured they got a bad game out of their systems.

The Barrie club marched to a 1-0 lead in the first period on Jackie White's goal and never looked back. They added four unanswered goals in the second by Jerry Toppazzini, Jim Morrison, Leo Labine and Danny O'Connor.

Goalkeeper Lorne Howe's shutout bid was ruined late in the third period when Monarch defenceman John Riley beat him.

The speedy Flyers only held a 25-19 edge in shots but appeared to have a much wider margin in territorial play. Despite drawing 15 of the 25 penalties handed out by referees Mel Snowdon of the Regals to a standstill throughout most of the contest. Heavy ice, the temperature outside was 70 above—hampered many of their nicely-started passing plays.

Monarchs' best period was the last, when they came to life and checked both ways. Their defence which had been clearing badly in the first two periods, also seemed to tighten and give goalie Don Collins better protection.

CJBQ VOICE OF THE BAY OF QUINTE

(CJBQ — 1230 KC.)

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A double for takeout should give you no trouble. Forget all the odd notions you have been gathering from various sources. Look at the bare facts and a takeout double will be easy for you.

When a player starts with a 2♠ opening bid, it is a double that asks for a takeout bid by his partner.

When would you feel justified in asking partner to bid? When your hand is strong enough to protect him. So, a double for takeout is made only with a hand strong enough to warrant it.

How strong is strong enough to protect partner when you ask him to bid? It must be as strong as an opening bid. Thus, a double for takeout announces a hand that is as good as an opening.

If you can see the reasoning in this, you will have no worry as to when you should make a takeout double. Now see if you have a hand that would have made an opening bid.

Some readers will tell you a takeout double guarantees no trumps and a half honor tricks with such and such distribution, or so many points with this and that distribution.

Some will tell you a takeout double guarantees strong support for any major suit takeout by partner, or a good substitute if partner's takeout is not satisfactory.

So, what? If you have an opening bid hand, you have all that. You will have enough honor tricks. You will have support for a bid in a major or a bit of your own that you could have made. South starts with one heart when you have this west hand:

♠K 5
♣A J. 8 4 3

Double for takeout. If partner bids a spade, you can still bid one of your minors. If partner bids a minor you like it. All you said was: "I could have opened, but that buzzard beat me to it."

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 3 (AP)—The trouble with writing science fiction movies, observes Richard Landau, is that science too often catches up with fiction.

Landau, a writer of musicals, was pressed into service for the latest of Hollywood cycles — science fiction films.

So he hiked out to a university to bone up on science. Then he went to work on what must be the ultimate in science fiction yarns—a prehistoric atomic film. It is called "Lost Continent."

The gimmick is this: The United States army sends out a test rocket with atomic power. The gadget is supposed to return to the proving grounds, but this one fails. A plane is sent out to fetch it.

The party pursues the course to a radioactive island in the Pacific where the plane crashed. The army officers ascend to a plateau where they find a civilization of 100,000,000 years ago.

All this was strictly in the dream division when Landau penned the script many months ago. So what happens? Government announcements and the Las Vegas experiments indicated that atomic rockets are in the development state.

And then an expedition of the navy and the University of California announced discovery of a lost continent in the Pacific between Hawaii and Wake Island.

"I just can't keep ahead of them," frets Landau over his typewriter.

Cappsie Review

"The Brave Bulls" is good in some respects, not good in others. On the credit side are the fine Mexican settings, exciting bull-fight scenes and a sensitive portrayal of the troubled matador by Mel Ferrer. But the theme gets off the track too many times and is never sure of where it's going. The result is a disjointed story that reaches certain heights but quickly drops back to trivialities. The climax is also a disappointment after such a dramatic bulldup.

Parson-Accountant Leads Busy Life

Toronto, (CP)—By day Denys Ranklior works as an accountant.

By night—and on Sundays—he becomes Rev. Denys Ranklior, rector of St. Martin's-in-the-Hill Reformed Episcopal Church.

But even two jobs aren't enough for the young Cambridge graduate.

When he makes his pastoral call he asks to see the children's report cards. If a student has failed down in one or two subjects Mr. Ranklior becomes an unpaid tutor, going to the home and coaching the child in his weak subject.

"Education consists of physical, mental and spiritual training," says the rector, "and to arrive at this we use the home, school and church."

Being both preacher and accountant has its problems. Often he is called upon to hold special services, such as funerals, on week-days.

"You have to be able to prove to your employer that you are of value to him, even though you must take time off during working hours," said Mr. Ranklior. "And you have to be good to do that—and work an average of 10 hours a day, seven days a week."

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

Despite Mart's keen, watchful eyes, from Arthur Jones to the time Sondra ... and talking to her face as though her beauty enthralled him, Leesna hoped it wasn't so. Mart Preston wasn't the type to fall prey to Sondra's cunning.

"Well!" Sondra snapped at last. "Am I to be grilled?"

Mart just looked right through her seeking the truth behind Arthur's accusation. Sondra's eyes grew narrow, more cat-like than ever, as if she were sly unsheathing her claws.

"He can't do anything to you, Sondra," Peter Thorne answered her question. "You do not have to stand for this priest's bungling ... not as long as Cousin Leesna was the last person to see Aunt Margaret alive."

Leesna gasped. It was obvious by an effort to turn Mart Preston's prying away from Sondra.

"Peter!" she cried, shrugging off Miss Agatha's restraining hand on her arm. "Peter Thorne how dare you! Miss Maggie was sending me for the sheriff because she was afraid of you! Because she thought you were going to kill her—about the—the will!"

"Absurd! Why should I care what she did with her money?"

"You cared last night—plenty," Leesna snapped. The trap was closing around her, but anger drove from her the grief that had made her helpless. "You cared enough to kill her!"

Leesna had not hoped to bluff Peter into admitting murder, he was far too suave for that, but she was not prepared for the guarded look that settled over his darkly handsome face. Nor did she expect the lukewarm but expressive voice to become a cold, accusing monotone as he said:

"If the worst comes, I can clear myself. Remember that—all of you."

After that he settled back on the old red leather morris chair, content to let suspicion run off him like water off a duck's back, his utter nonchalance daring them to single out the person — the murderer? Leesna found herself thinking — to whom his words had been addressed.

But why should Peter warn the murderer? Why should he mark himself for murder?

Leesna struggled with the tiny shudder that began somewhere along her spine and marched consistently up and down, down and up, destroying the little of her confidence that remained. Did Peter think Mart Preston would be fooled by anything quite so juvenile?

But if it wasn't juvenile—what then? What if Peter Thorne had come to kill Miss Maggie and, having succeeded, intended now to turn his talents toward getting rid of Jasper and Miss Agatha so he would inherit all that remained of the Thorne fortune? What if, last night when Miss Maggie informed him of the change in her will, he had known that it was now or never?

Leesna looked at her father's cousin. Surely that stuck, vicious expression was not lie behind those gray-blue eyes, no matter how powerful and shrewd they were. Surely there was in Peter Thorne some of the family loyalty that had chained Jasper to Thorne Hill all these years.

Chained . . . The thought reference was an unfortunate one. It switched Leesna's suspicion to Jasper, who seemed to be lost in a fear that must be very genuine to have willed him so completely.

Did he, too, feel the trap closing? Had Peter been talking to him—would that account for Mrs. Carstairs' hysteria and her obvious fright now?

Leesna Thorne brought her attention back with an effort to what young Deputy Sheriff Mart Preston was saying:

Syrians Charge Israeli Troops Launch Attacks

U.N. Observers Witness Attack While Touring Area

Damascus, May 4—(Reuters)—A Syrian communique today alleged a big new Israeli attack in the demilitarized zone northwest of the Lake of Galilee.

It said that 500 Israeli soldiers launched a "heavy attack" at 4:45 a.m., local time, on Arab tribesmen, covered by heavy artillery and mortar fire.

The Arabs repulsed the attack, and the battle was still raging at 8:30 a.m., the communique said.

The communique described Israeli casualties as "very heavy" and said three Arabs were slightly wounded.

(A report from Tel Aviv, Israel, said Syrian troops renewed their attacks on the Israelis. An Israeli spokesman said the two Syrian attacks were thrown back by the Arabs.

Will See Minister

(Meanwhile, the United Nations is trying to put a cease-fire order into effect in the troubled area. Col. Bernard A. Fiddler, U.N. observer, was expected to see the Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Sharrett in Tel Aviv later today. (Although the Arab spokesman that Israeli planes bombed Syrian positions during the last few days were flatly denied today by an Israeli military spokesman. No Israeli planes have been in action recently, he said.

(At least four Israeli soldiers are known to have been killed and six others wounded in the last three days. Israelis said they also found the bodies of 20 Syrian soldiers inside Israeli territory yesterday.)

The Syrian government alleged earlier that more than 1,000 Israeli troops launched two heavy attacks yesterday in the demilitarized zone.

One Arab was killed and six injured, the announcement said. Israeli casualties were not known but were believed heavy.

Arab inhabitants were said to have repulsed both attacks despite heavy artillery and mortar fire.

The communique said United Nations observers reported that second Israeli attack as they were touring the area "in their vehicles painted cars. The Israelis fired on them and they withdrew into Syrian territory, the communique said.

Open Fire on Tractors

In theymiddle sector, Huel area, it said, eight Israeli tractors resumed draining the Arab and Arab land owners opened fire. Israeli stationed at Mahadia, Tl Hamra and Ghannama, Arab villages, machine-gunned them. They also fired on advance Syrian Army posts in Syrian territory.

The communique denied Israeli charges that Syrians formed had entered the demilitarized zone or had fired on Israeli troops. It said U. N. observers were "fully aware of this truth."

Car Hits Tree At 60 M. P. H., Two Injured

Dundas, May 4—(CP)— Two young men are in the Hamilton General Hospital with serious facial and internal injuries here early today while being chased by provincial police.

In hospital are Frank Needon and Allison Summerville, no fixed address.

Police said two men assaulted a gas-station attendant on the Queen Elizabeth highway early today, they then jumped into their car, alleged to have been stolen earlier from Guelph, and drove away without paying for the gas.

An alarm was immediately broadcast and provincial police chased the vehicle. Hamilton police joined the chase, which ended abruptly in Dundas when the car, estimated doing 60-miles an-hour, smashed into the tree.

60 New Cars Go up in Smoke At Vancouver

Vancouver, May 4—(CP)— A warehouse containing 60 new automobiles was swept by fire early today.

Firemen said few—if any—of the cars escaped damage or destruction when the fire, brief but spectacular, broke out in the McLeod Rae Motors warehouse.

The building was located on the fringe of the crowded False Creek industrial area, near the downtown district.

The cars, about half of them small English models, were valued an approximate retail value of $150,000.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 4 (CP) Synoptic-Maximum temperatures throughout Ontario on Thursday were as much as 20 degrees cooler than on the previous day. This was due to the advance of cold air from Hudson bay which was accompanied by clouds and some showers along the Hudson coast.

Sunshine will be more abundant today and on Saturday, and maximum temperatures are expected to increase only a few degrees.

Although Saturday's weather is generally fine, some places are not so fortunate. Thunderstorms occurred during the night on the eastern United States seaboard, and a tornado was reported in Michigan yesterday afternoon. Some debris is falling in northern White River region, but skies there are expected to clear during the morning.

DUD PIAT SHELL EXPLODES, KILLS THREE CHILDREN

Three Others Seriously Injured by Blast

Ste. Brigide D'Iberville, Que., May 4 (CP)—A "dud" piat shell, fired at a Farnham, Que., training range during the Second World War, exploded last night, killing three children and wounding three others.

Army authorities launched an investigation into the tragedy that resulted in the death of Jean-Noel Lamarche, 10, his fourteen-year-old brother, Martial, and Edgar Remillard, 13.

Taken to nearby St. John's, Que., hospital with facial and chest wounds were two other Remillard boys, Gilles, 9, and Jean Paul, 10, and Edmond Lamarche, 7.

An army spokesman said the children found two live piat shells on a training range that has not been used since the end of the war.

The boys took the shells home and were hammering at one of them in their backyard when it exploded, killing three on the spot. The other shell was found intact.

Piat (projector infantry antitank) is a type of weapon used in anti-tank warfare. A stubby shell more than a foot long, it is fired by a launcher which is capable of penetrating the superstructures of tanks and exploding inside.

Army officials said shells fired during practice sometimes entered the ground without exploding and some were found each spring when the thaw washed away layers of the earth surface.

The three children picked up the shells on a range that was out of bounds for civilians and soldiers alike. Signs around the field warn people against trespassing because of danger.

The camp is between Farnham and Ste. Brigide, from 50 miles southeast of Montreal.

Two Families Made Homeless Near Levack

The first fire destroyed the home of Mrs. Ida Peter Sauve. Mrs. Sauve and her three children escaped without injury but were unable to save any of their belongings. Sauve was at work in the nearby Falconbridge nickel mines. The house was owned by the mining company.

The second fire, Mr. Walter Dean and her two children were made homeless. Dean is serving with the Canadian Army in Korea. Nothing was saved.

Beautiful but Persistent Blonde Rends Iron Curtain, Reclaims Hubby

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

New York, May 4 (AP) — It took a beautiful blonde to rip a hole in the iron curtain—a hole big enough to extricate her husband from the clutches of the international bogey men.

Her name is Mrs. Vogeler.

Now that she's safely back home in the United States with her husband, Robert A. Vogeler, and their two sons, let's take a closer look at this small, blonde dynamo.

By throwing a case of international politics in the lap of President Truman and State Secretary Acheson, this fragile-looking housewife won the help of her husband out of a Hungarian prison cell.

When she heard that her husband had "confessed" to charges of espionage during the travesty of a trial in Budapest in February, 1950, pretty, blonde Mrs. Vogeler merely retorted briskly: "Ridiculous! He's been drugged."

Then she proceeded to show the world what a fighting-mad woman can do.

From the time her husband, vice-president of the International General Electric Company, was kidnapped by Hungarian communists Nov. 10, 1949, until he walked out of prison, a free man, 17 months later, Mrs. Vogeler didn't stop fighting.

Although warned by friends and diplomats that her own safety and that of her sons was in jeopardy, she launched a personal war on two sides of the Atlantic.

She flew to London to plead with Britain's Foreign Minister on his visits there last spring. She talked with Acheson. She harried all the minor diplomats in sight. She worked out a plan for economic reprisals against Hungary to force the release of her husband.

She bombarded politicians, put up a ceaseless barrage of strictly-feminine hysterics —and last Saturday her husband was handed out of the communist prison, after 17 months of despair.

When she learned that her husband's release at last was imminent, Mrs. Vogeler permitted herself one frivolous moment.

"I've unpacked some beautiful nylon nighties."

MADE IN U.S.A.

This United States Army "tommy-gun" was found in the hands of a dead Chinese soldier in Korea after Canadian troops knocked out a machine-gun nest. The trio who knocked it out were, left to right: Cpl. Jim Watson, Kimberley, B.C.; Pte. Charles Baxter, Saint John, N.B.; and Lieut. Michael Levy of Vancouver. — (CP from National Defence.)

Federal Govt. May Propose Canada go Ahead With Seaway Project Without U. S. Action

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—Canada is not going to wait beyond this year for United States congressional action on the St. Lawrence Seaway authoritative informants said today.

There is some possibility, these sources indicated, that the government may propose at the current session of parliament that Canada go ahead with the $800,000,000 project on its own.

The feeling in cabinet, they said, is another congressional failure this year to ratify the Canada-U.S. treaty for joint construction will result in Canada "giving up" on the prospects for two countries getting together on the navigation power undertaking.

If that happens —and the outlook for congressional ratification at this session is regarded here as very dim—cabinet would immediately face the question of making a decision on going ahead alone.

That situation, it was expected here, could develop in the next month. This year, the St. Lawrence project has been under consideration in Washington by the public works committee of the House of Representatives, which now has completed its evidence and is going to make a flying tour of the project before taking a vote.

If the vote is favorable—and belief is that it will be close—the matter still has to be dealt with by the house and then the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The prospects as seen here, are that either it will be knocked out by the House Committee or will drag out through the remainder of the congressional session.

It was emphasized here that Canada is still anxious to undertake the project in co-operation with the U.S., in line with its 1941 treaty. So is the Truman administration.

But Canada has decided that it can go ahead alone with the seaway, and, the spokesman said, is convinced it can pay for itself by electric power and navigation tolls over a period of years.

Allied Airmen Weigh Problems Of Hitting Manchurian Bases If Red Air Blows Develop

Tokyo, May 4—(AP)— Allied airmen will get the green light to bomb Manchurian bases if the Chinese redo threw the weight of their air force against United Nations ground troops in Korea.

The 14 U.N. countries fighting in Korea are reported to be in agreement on the need to hit back hard if the Chinese fly out of their Manchurian sanctuary in force.

The extent of the strikes would depend on specific U.N. instructions were general or specific.

General instructions might limit the attack to red airfields. Specific orders could include rail yards, communications centres, war plants and roads.

Allied airmen would strike first perhaps at the airfields in Manchuria and north Korea.

United States B-29s blast those in Korea every few days. The reds just as doggedly put them back in shape.

The general public knows little of the red air potential.

The pilots, presumably, are Chinese. But American fliers haven't let them get too much air combat experience.

The reds have used fighter planes almost exclusively. Russian-made yaks—propeller-driven planes—didn't last long against faster U.N. fighters, such as the F-51 Mustang.

The reds came up next with Russian-type MIG-15 jets. American jets outfought the MIGs in a ratio of about four to one.

There are well-grounded reports that the reds have some bombers. They would need such long-range planes to sweep below the 38th Parallel and return to Manchuria in an all-out air assault.

Floods Damage Summer Camping, Fishing Area

Sudbury, May 4 (CP) —Damage estimated at $250,000 has been done by spring floods at Lake Penage, popular summer resort and fishing area, about 20 miles west of here, it is claimed by the owners of private and tourist camps.

Owners held a protest meeting here Thursday night, at which they drew up a letter of protest to be sent to surveyor-general Leo Ostaio, Lands Minister Scott, the Sudbury district forester and Mines Minister Gemmel, who now presents Sudbury in the legislature.

COMMONS TOLD COST OF LIVING STILL CLIMBING

Increase of 2.1 Points In March to 181.8

Ottawa, May 4 (CP)—Canada's cost of living is still climbing.

Trade Minister Howe told the Commons yesterday that the official index reached a record 181.8 at April 2, an increase of 2.1 points from the previous high of 179.7 a month earlier.

His announcement was immediately used by oppositionp arties to bolster arguments that some of the tax increases proposed in the 1951-52 budget should be replaced.

They unsuccessfully moved to repeal increases in the sales and excise taxes. An estimated source of revenue they proposed higher corporation taxes and a tax on capital gains.

When the repeal moves failed, the Commons voted 89 to 39 for a resolution to a bill which will give the law to the sales and excise tax changes announced in the April 10 budget.

The resolution contained all of the commodity tax changes, including two under heavy fire—the new 15-per-cent excise tax on gloves, washing machines and refrigerators, and the 25-per-cent increase in the general sales tax, lifted it to 10 per cent from eight per cent.

Treating Cancer With Calf Spleen Getting Results

London, Ont., May 4 — (CP) — A Western Ontario physician said Thursday he is treating cancer victims with a relatively simple and inexpensive extract of calf spleen and calf blood with encouraging results. Dr. George F. Watson of Kitchener treated cancers of the breast, uterus, mouth, skin, tonsil, stomach and rectum. He said the cancers improved and in some, the malignant growths disappeared.

Dr. Watson added, however, that the extract will have to be tried on a great scale before physicians and the results watched for years.

In his treatment, the spleen extract is combined with sterile water in varying concentrations and injected into the patient's veins.

In earlier published reports of experiments he said the extract apparently checks a death wave that would destroy the cancerous cells, leaving only healthy tissues.

WILL NOT ADMIT WRITER

Frankfurt, Germany, May 4 — (AP)—The Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry said it would not admit a newspaper Associated correspondent to Prague until the case against the imprisoned AP bureau chief, Oldrich Sis, is settled.

Press officials of the ministry said they could not accredit a replacement at this time "because of the uncertainty what is going to happen to Oatis."

Oatis, 37, was arrested in Prague April 2 and accused of activities hostile to the communist government.

New Atomic Flashlight to Locate Brain Tumors Announced in Paper

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

New York May 4(AP)—An alleged final spot for locating brain tumors was announced yesterday in Science, official journal of the American Association.

The atomic flash works like an ordinary flashlight except that it sent two ends and shot beams simultaneously out of each one. The beams cross lines in different directions— electrons with a positive electrical charge.

Ordinary electrons have a negative charge. This is the first practical use for positrons since their discovery some 15 years ago.

Positrons are emitted by some kinds of radioactive bombs. Such stores are made in the atomic reactors that also produce bombs.

When a positron is emitted it hits only a few millionths of a second. Then it meets a negative electron, the two disappear, and this place appear two gamma the cancer.

Ridgway Confident Of Eventual Defeat For Chinese Army

Huge Sacrifice in Lives Price for Staying in Korea

Tokyo, May 4 (AP) —Lt.-Gen. Matthew Ridgway returned today from the Korean front confident Chinese armies will "continue to pay the blood price they have been paying" as long as they stay in Korea.

By U.S. Eighth Army estimate, the price is close to 80,000 red casualties since their now-bogged-down spring offensive started April 22. The Eighth Army revised its estimate on Thursday's communist losses to 1,815.

On a two-day trip, the United Nations Supreme commander saw a front dominated by allied planes and freely-roaming U.N. tanks.

Ridgway shared with his frontline troops their "complete confidence" and their assurance in their ability to handle anything that's thrown at them."

Two Big Groupings

Intelligence officers reported two big groupings. One was north of Seoul. The other—apparently heavier—was in the area in the Chunchon-Hwachon area. This is north of the central Korean plain and the site of the reds' biggest success in their costly spring offensive before it bogged down.

Airmen hammered at this build up as they flew more than 1,000 sorties Thursday for the fifth successive day. They reported 800 lifted-or-more bomb blows directed at transport and supply buildings.

Jet fighter-bombers chased one railroad train into a tunnel near the red capital, Pyongyang, then dazed it in two by blasting shut both ends of the tube.

Large Bag

Pilots reported their bag included 2 more locomotives, 10 railroad cars, 10 motor vehicles, two tanks, nine gun positions, 1,200 buildings, 10 fuel dumps, and 3 bridges.

U.N. forces got new reinforcement with the arrival of highspirited Canadians at the southeastern port of Pusan. They were the vanguard of the Canadian 25th infantry brigade. Brig. John Rockingham said they're "willing and anxious to do the job."

Wife Surprises Hubby With Unexpected News

Oklahoma City, May 4 (AP) —Wesley Sanford worked like a beaver home last Saturday to get a garden planted on his 2½-acre tract.

Sanford rushed home from work last night to see if any of the seeds had come up yet.

His wife greeted him with:

"Guess what I've done? I've just finished plowing and raking the garden plot so you can go out and plant the seeds."

G1 IN KOREA

Lt.-Col. Ernest Dolphin (Dick) Danby of New Westminster, B.C., has been appointed senior staff officer at headquarters of the Commonwealth division being established in Korea. Col. Danby will be general staff officer grade one — the so-called G1 — on the staff of commander officer British Maj.-Gen. A. J. H. Cassells. Canada's 25th Brigade will make up one-third of the division's manpower. — (CP from National Defence.)

Russian Soldiers Kill Corporal In U. S. Army

Vienna, May 4— (AP) — Cpl. Paul Greenia, an American military policeman, was killed early today in a burst of fire from tommy-guns wielded by two Russian soldiers in the heart of Vienna.

The shooting occurred while Greenia and another American corporal were making their routine round in the international sector of the Austrian capital.

The Americans challenged the two uniformed men and discovered they were Russian soldiers. As they were challenged, the Russians turned and started firing their tommy-guns.

A passing Austrian was wounded in the arm and bullets splattered taxis parked outside a night club.

CBS Considers Purchase of ABC For $28,000 000

New York, May 4 (CP) —The New York Times today said the Columbia Broadcasting System is reported considering purchase of the American Broadcasting Corporation at a price of $28,000,000.

Officials of both companies declined comment.

The story said a major upheaval in the radio industry appears imminent, and cited this other developments:

National Broadcasting Company announced an over-all reduction in its afternoon and evening rates, effective July 1. The Times said CBS also has cut its rates, declaring that the reductions stem from loss of radio listeners to television.

Folks Here And Gone

'Good Old Days Gone Forever' Moans George, King of Hobos

It cost a quarter and a half dozen two-cent cigarettes, but maybe the story is worth it.

In any event, George, last name King, address unknown, had hung his battered old fedora, dropped off here today from his box-car pullman, and gave out with the information that the life of the "gentlemen of the road" just isn't what it used to be.

No sir! "Them good old days is gone forever." Nowadays, not only is the lady of the house surprised if a slightly unused gent asks for a "handout" but dang it, if she doesn't want the bloke to do a spot of work in payment thereof.

George, in case you don't know, is the self-styled King of the Hobos and apparently is one of the last of the royal line. Pretenders, who still believe in human nature are legion generally of his more fortunate fellows:

Travels Coast to Coast

George, so he said, between puffs of a reportorial cigarette, has journeyed from Halifax to Vancouver. Belleville, he said, as he crouched over a battered tin can in which some brew was in the throes of concoction, was one of the best spots.

"Folks here are good, even the cops," he grinned through missing teeth. His five-days growth of beard subbled a determined chin. His eyes, set deep in his haunches and basked in the brilliant sunshine of Belleville.

"Folks are good," he said, "As for me, I don't believe in manual labor. I figure the man was created to work. Look at this" he added, as he held up the sparkling waters of the Moira River, the green of the grass near the Corbin Lock of the Dominion plant, and the general bright springlike picture that was apparent.

"Personally," George went on, "I am not a working man. This" and he indicated the neck of a wine bottle that protruded from my pocket, "is just the thing to get feet sure give me a lot of trouble, especially going through the mountains."

"The main thing to do," and he lowered the reportorial chest with a gnarled dirt-stained finger "if you want to be a gentleman of leisure, and that's the only life I am known from coast to coast and I have little or no trouble getting along with a minimum of effort," George didn't use the word "minimum". We don't do that one in to make the story sound good to the city editor. Anyway, that is what he meant.

"Another thing," said George, reaching for another newspaper cigarette, "is not to worry." "You" he said, "are a married man and have kids. What a married man doesn't, Me, I've been hitched four or five times, but my, what shall I say! leisure, (we filled in) that's it, did not meet with the ladies' approval, and they moved out.

No Worries

"Well," mused the grimy old cuss, "when they moved out, my troubles went with 'em. So here I am, 69, fancy free, not a care in the world. It's spring and I've no insurance policies to pay, the little woman is not waiting at home to give me the devil (George used another, unprintable word), and I'm happy. A butcher up the street gave me a chunk of stale sausage. I got myself some bread and with this De Motherd wward the devil I'm going to dine in state."

This reporter turned down the invitation to sit in the "royal" table and turned away. He travelled a few yards when George hailed him.

"Say bud," he grinned, showing all four front teeth, "yuh wouldn't have two bits you're not using.

It was perhaps a miracle, but the reportorial pocket did contain such a coin. Did, but not now.

Over $1,000 Paid out In Wolf Bounties

More money has been paid out to date this year in bounty for wolves than in the whole of last year. Attending to Ross Bailey, Hastings County treasurer, over $1,000 has been paid.

Ross Palmateer of Tweed is the leading trapper having brought in as many as six scalps. Ross Minnie, Actinolite, and Albert Sauley of Deloro are two others, whose names figure prominently in the record.

The wolves, whose hides are worth $25, have been found in the Tweed area mainly. Of this total, $25 is paid by the county and $10 by the Department of Lands and Forest. Some townships pay an additional bounty over and above this amount making a wolf hide very profitable.

Local Minister Elected to Church Executive

Rev. J. S. A. Spearman, of the local Wesleyan Methodist Church, has been elected vice-president of the Wesleyan Church in Canada. The elections were held in the city yesterday at the 45th annual conference of the church.

Rev. R. L. LeRoy, of Ottawa, was elected president, Rev. H. Kielty, of Winchester, is secretary, and Rev. J. H. Weaver, of Cornwall, treasurer. Mr. Weaver also took over the chairmanship of the conference's publishing house. Rev. Kielty is secretary of the ministerial examination board. Two posts were taken by Rev. W. A. Smith, Waltham, secretary of conference Sunday Schools, and Rev. F. C. Bain, of Cornwall, editor of the conference periodical, "The Glad Tidings".

First session of the conference on Tuesday saw Mr. Weaver preach the sermon. He charged the ministry with an increased purpose to evangelism. "Let us make our purpose and holy calling unfear we return to the holy seal and vision of our church fathers," Rev. Mr. Kielty said. He continued that the ministry must determine to lift men up to the standards of God's righteousness".

Business Sessions

Business sessions of the conference on Wednesday morning were highlighted by the first in a series of morning addresses on "The Peril of the Ministry". The address was made by Rev. Dr. J. R. Swaughton, of Toronto, B.V., general secretary for the department of Home Missions. Rev. Mr. LeRoy, in substituting for Dr. Swaughton, delivered the address.

In Thursday's sessions, Dr. Stephen W. Paine, of Houghton, N.Y., addressed the conference.

Mr. Spearman along with Rev. LeRoy, has been appointed as delegate to the quadrennial conference of the church in Fairmount, Indiana, in June. Also appointed were lay delegates, Mr. Wood, of Hull, and E. E. Wilson, of Brockville.

The memorial service was held this morning by the conference assembly to honor the memory of two Wesleyan ministers who died during the past year, Rev. S. W. Blanchard, of Toronto, and Rev. W. J. Major, of Campbell's Bay, Quebec.

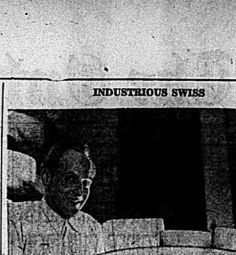
INDUSTRIOUS SWISS



Walter Joss, one of the few Swiss cheesemakers in Canada, has been turning out five moulds a day since purchasing a cheese factory near Campbellford, Ont., last November. He has one helper at the moment, but is bringing out his younger brother, another Swiss and a German from Europe to assist. His plans to make various European soft cheeses, semi-hard and brick varieties and perhaps yogurt for the Canadian market. — (CP Photo.)

Swiss Cheese Maker Processes Special Varieties at Campbellford

Campbellford, Ont. —(CP) — Swiss-born Walter Joss knows what puts the holes in Swiss cheese. And he's not telling.

Instead he's making that knowledge pay, off in the variety of cheese, he now is turning out at the factory, north of this town, he bought six months ago.

Before long Mr. Joss hopes to increase his two-man crew to five. Soon he expects to be handling and processing 20,000 pounds of milk a day.

The 31-year-old craftsman comes from a cheese-making family near Lucerne, Switzerland. And his wide experience in the cheese making field has caused him to discount warnings of "experts" that Swiss cheese cannot be made from Canadian milk.

At the moment he's turning out five Swiss Cheese moulds daily, including Sundays.

Makes Other Types

At the same time he also is experimenting with productions of various European types of cheese — Italian (Gorgonzola), Dutch (Eddam), Danish (Blue) and French (Roquefort). These he calls the soft cheeses. The semi-hards, Dutch Goudas and the brick varieties already are being produced in limited quantities.

Cheesemaking in Switzerland is a highly-specialized craft. Mr. Joss said it requires five years of apprenticeship, three more with a master cheesemaker and a stiff course at the National Dairy School before a man can receive a certificate.

Joseph Leinig, another Swiss cheesemaker, at the moment is assisting Mr. Joss. Three more are expected to arrive shortly. Mr. Joss' younger brother, another Swiss and a German.

Incidentally, the Joss family may try producing Yogurt one of these days.

Mrs. Joss says it's a food which they make for their own use every day and of which they are fond. If all goes well it may be included in their production program.

'Lost Sheep' of Old Hymn Will Be Commemorated

Fergus, Ont., May 4 — (CP) — The "lost sheep" of the old hymn "The Ninety and Nine" will be commemorated Sunday at a special church service in this community in which he once lived.

He was George Clephane, who died in Fergus May 8, 1851, at the age of 32. The hymn was written by his sister, Elezner Clephane, shortly after word of his death reached his family in Scotland. It was later set to music by Ira D. Sankey.

George Clephane, son of the sheriff of Fifeshire, Scotland, came to Canada in 1843. Historians say he became alcoholic. He was a kindly man, remembered for his honesty, gentlemanly ways and great generosity.

The service will be conducted in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church by Rev. John R. Craig.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 4 (CP) —Prices continued advancing slowly as the session progressed on the stock market today.

In industrials, papers, steels, utilities, agriculturres, foods, banks and refining oils showed a majority of gains. Liquors, constructions, manufacturing companies, textiles and retail stores were about evenly mixed. Most price changes were in small fractions.

Base metals were fairly mixed but the tendency was to advance. Consolidated Smelters stood out with a $1.50 jump and Falconbridge, Labrador, International Nickel and Quemont added fractions.

Western oils were little higher. Golds were irregular with little activity. Seplov producers were slightly lower while secondary golds posted a handful of moderate gains.

Heavy Gale Mars Part of Trip For Canadians

Pusan, Korea, May 4 — (AP)— Whistling, high-spirited Canadian soldiers, vanguard of the Canadian 25th Infantry Brigade, docked today on the United States Navy transport Marine Adder.

They said their two - week, 6,000 - mile voyage from Seattle was uneventful except for a heavy 244-hour gale near the end.

They were met by a U. S. Army band, South Korean officials and their commander, Brig. John M. Rockingham of Vancouver, B.C., and an advance party arrived yesterday after having flown the Pacific.

Rockingham said he had "never seen troops as willing and anxious to do jobs as these fellows". He said they would leave for the front soon, after more training.

The rest of the brigade is due in a few days.

Largest single unit aboard the ship was the 2nd Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, its commanding officer, Lt.-Col. James Dextraze, was the first to land.

"I'm glad to be here," he told Rockingham and the Korean officials.

First other ranks off the ship were Cpl. George Barnard Dodge of Vancouver and Spr. Edwin Colpitts of Saint John, N. B.

Among unit commanders aboard were Maj. D. C. Rochester, Toronto; Maj. R. C. Laughton, Ottawa, and Maj. J. L. V. Pathelin, Yorkton, Sask., and Montreal.

Forty per cent of the brigade are veterans of the Second World War. The new arrivals said they are anxious to join their comrades, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, already veterans of the Korean fighting.

Royal Family Visits Festival

London, May 4 —(CP) —The King today threw open to the world the century's greatest display of Britain's achievements—the 1951 Festival Exhibition.

The Royal Family arrived in a typical grey London mist at the shining modern pavilions, the gardens, fountains and towers on the south bank of the River Thames.

The King and Queen drove from Buckingham Palace to the Festival Exhibition. They advanced through dense, cheering crowds to the site, not far ahead of the retreating figures of the last workmen.

Carpenters had worked all night to put the finishing touches to the 7-acre festival area.

The ceremony had none of yesterday's processional pomp and splendor, when the King officially opened the festival as a whole after a dedication service in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Last night the United Kingdom celebrated the start of the festival with revelry. Two thousand bonfires were lit and of simultaneously throughout the Kingdom at a broadcast signal—the sound of a massed chorus of 5,000 voices outside St. Paul's Cathedral.

London made a full night of it. Its celebration extended throughout the town and especially along the fairy big light in London—the brilliantly-lit banks of the don was turned on.

Londoners moved happily through the town, looking at the lights and celebrating. London newspapers said it was the happiest night since the end of the war.

Blast Shatters Windows Of Ballroom

Windsor, Ont., May 4 (CP) — An explosion last night shattered windows of the Show Boat Ballroom, a three-storey dance hall, and brought down huge sections of plaster from the ceiling. Its cause was unknown.

Fire officials were notified of the incident by an unidentified railway worker. They found all doors and windows of the ballroom locked but every pane of glass blown out.

Inside, a heavy wooden bench had been blown to pieces at the spot where the explosion occurred. Part of the bench had been driven into a brick wall 10 feet away.

A check of the premises dispelled any theory that leaking gas was responsible. No gas service was installed in the building.

Record Field Of 23 Horses Start in Derby

Louisville, May 4 — (AP)—A record field of 23 horses was entered today for the Kentucky Derby tomorrow, promising one of the greatest racing scrambles in the United States' most famous horse race.

If all go, the 77th running of the Derby would be the richest, with a pot of $129,100 and $101,050 to the winner.

It seemed the combination of the Calumet Stable's Battle Morn with jockey Eddie Arcaro might get the nod for favorite over the C. V. Whitney entry of Mameluke and Counterpoint.

Battle Morn was listed in the early line at 4 to 1, with the Whitney pair at 5 to 1. This was a tie's switch, which reversed the odds prevailing yesterday.

It is probable at least 22 horses will be at the starting gate tomorrow since the Brown Hotel Stable of J. Graham Brown has said only one of its two horses will start. Trainer Joe Puckett entered Snuzzle and The Glink but said Snuzzle would go on a fast track, and The Glink if the track is off.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Perhaps it is a little late to commend the Children's Aid Society for the work it did in Belleville during the past year. On the other hand, however, it is never too late to express appreciation to any service organization for its accomplishments and among the worthy ones in the city, the C.A.S. ranks high.

For 363 days of the year, the Children's Aid Society works quietly, unobtrusively. On the 364th, it has an annual banquet to report to the people, and on the 365th, appeals to the people for money. Those two activities are the only ones that the public hears about. For the rest of the time, the C.A.S. is content to sit back and do its work. It asks neither for praise nor congratulation, but only the privilege of doing a job.

The scope of the society's work in the year ending March 31, 1951, is revealed in the annual report. More than 300 children were in the care of the society during the year and it is safe to say that they were looked after with solicitude, kindness and understanding. Society workers made more than 2,500 visits on behalf of children, another indication that the work of the C.A.S. is not merely surface venture, but a full effort to see that children are treated decently in their formative years. Daily visits averaged seven throughout the year in cases where children's care was involved.

The society also does work in the unmarried parents' field and in protection work. In the latter, conditions in the home are under the scrutiny of the C.A.S., and are corrected if it is felt that they do not contribute to the proper rearing of a child. Perhaps it is indicative of the times that the society reported this year that it had never had so many requests from parents to be relieved of their children as it had during the past year. Many of the difficulties are said to be financial, because economic difficulties have brought the father and mother of children to a parting of the ways. Many of them are made because of financial inability to maintain a proper standard of living for the child.

It is well to mention that the society could not function without the co-operation of law enforcement agencies, the medical profession, municipal and other officials, and city service clubs. Without their help, the C.A.S. would be severely crippled, and its work would suffer in direct ratio.

For its accomplishments during the past year, the Children's Aid Society rates a salute from both city and county residents.

NATIONALIZATION OF OIL

The final step in the dispute between Britain and Iran over the disposition of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company appears to have been made, with the signing of the bills for nationalization by the Shah of the latter country. Even so, it now appears that Iran does not know what she will do with the company in the end analysis.

The country denies that nationalization of the giant company will mean confiscation of Anglo-Iranian will expropriated. Yet a committee, appointed by both houses of Parliament, is to take control of all the assets, liabilities, production, and actual fields of work. The banks move likewise to be put in cross-purposes. Meanwhile, once the bills were passed by Parliament, had no other choice than to sign them. He possesses no veto, and thus cannot stop any such legislation from becoming part of the law of the land.

While the Shah was signing, representatives from both Britain and the United States were pleading with him to make representation to the premier, Mohammed Mossadegh, to take an immediate course. The point on which Iran is understood to object to Anglo-Iranian operations is that the British government, through its own nationalization procedures, owns 52 per cent of the stock in the company. Iranian officials feel that such a situation is not healthy for either their country's commerce now or in the future.

It may be that the Iranian parliament moved too hastily, but that she will find that a more amicable settlement with British interests will yield more dividends. Regardless of that, Britain now finds herself in a paradoxical situation. The Labor government's policy of nationalization, dear to the party's heart, has backfired on them, and Britain is now faced with a nationalization of a company that she has already nationalized herself. The problem is not yet completely solved.

THE OLD DAYS ARE GONE

One of our old contemporaries notes that the day when a man heeded the call to arms by picking up his sword and lance and venturing into the fields to battle is gone. It certainly is, when one considers that the defence budget for the United States this year amounts to more than $60 billions.

Each year, the monies needed for defence purposes in right-thinking nations are increased by continued aggression in the world's trouble spots. Each year, the load gets heavier. It will continue to do so until the aggressors are convinced that they cannot dominate the world.

WHAT REALLY COUNTS

A recent newspaper story told of a robbery in a New England town. The burglar had carried off a few knives and forks, a typewriter and a wallet containing a little cash. The family was aroused, but at the same time relieved. For in an unlocked china closet just a few feet from where he had picked up the knives and forks, the burglar had overlooked a collection of antique silver plates and dishes worth several thousand dollars.

When it comes to religion, some people work just like that burglar. They join a church, because it gives them standing in their community. They attend the services, and enjoy meeting their friends and neighbors there. They listen to the music, and sometimes make suggestions to the committee. They contribute regularly to the collection plate, and discuss the budget at the annual meeting. They go to church suppers, the men's fellowship, the women's guild. But they never pay much attention to God.

When Jesus was asked about the most important rules of life, the second thing He said was to love thy neighbor as thyself.

But the first thing Jesus said was this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength."

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Hopefully you get into one of the two or three line-ups at the hotel reception desk. The clerks are distant, if not quite chill. Feverishly you watch those ahead of you being given the flshy eye by the slow and deliberate gentleman behind the counter. There is a kind of hush.

When your turn comes you write your name far more timidly than you do even on a cheque.

"I have a reservation," you say, a little hoarse. "I wired first class ago . . ."

The clerk studies your application.

He takes two paces sideways, behind a partition, where he pretends to look at some record or other.

"No reservation," he reproves you, meeting your eyes with a steely and practised stare. So, instead of getting mad, you merely flash a little, remembering bygone days in hotels.

Canadian Sailors Make Good Use Of Leisure Time

Ottawa, May 4 (CP)—What do Canadian sailors do in their spare time aboard destroyers prowling the waters off Korea?

The navy today quoted Protestant Chaplain Horatio Todd of Halifax and Ottawa, back home after seven months with the three destroyers, as saying they do these things:

They show a high degree of interest in the causes of the Korean war and what they mean. The padres spend hours, Chaplain Todd said, in telling them why Canadians are serving in Korea and what Korea means in terms of the struggle against communism. The padres stress spiritual values.

A lot of them study to improve their chances for advancement in the navy.

They read for pleasure. Every book passes from hand to hand, from ship to ship.

They wait eagerly for mail. Deliveries are good whenever there is a ship coming out to the patrol area from Canada.

They read their press. Newspaper clippings sent out from Canada inform them how events are read with critical scrutiny.

They discuss the war in Korea, Japan where, Chaplain Todd said, they are highly respected among the men of other United Nations navies. Their chief forms of relaxation are film-seeing and meetings with friends from other ships. They have made friends with sailors from many other countries.

Chaplain Todd has been United Church minister in Kingston, Ont., Bramble, Ont., and Otta Ha before assuming new duties in Atlantic command, having been succeeded in Korea by Chaplain B. A. Peglar of Toronto and Victoria.

BEGIN BARGAINING

Bonn, Germany, May 3—(Reuters) — British and United German economic experts yesterday began what is expected to be several weeks of hard bargaining over fixing new quotas for Anglo-German trade. West German exports of scrap iron, in which she is believed to be well behind in promised deliveries to Britain, probably will play an important role in the negotiations.

Finale of Tests At Eniwetok Early Next Week

Honolulu, May 4 — (AP) — The finale of the Eniwetok tests, designed to get information for planning civilian defense against the atomic bomb, is expected next week.

As indicated by announcements by the Atomic Energy Commission itself, one chief aim will be to find the kind of factory and civilian shelters needed to withstand an atomic blast.

The main purpose of previous experiments was to determine the bomb's value as a military weapon.

Now "Operation Greenhouse" will try to learn what materials and structural designs may afford protection against atomic warfare.

The A.E.C. has promised a full report of the new tests to the Civil Defence Administration. The commission also told the American Institute of Architects that the tests will help provide data for the development of design criteria."

Analysis of A.E.C. announcements on Operation Greenhouse and of reports on the 1948 test develop that a fairly-sound conclusion:

One new blast will be that of a fixed-in-place bomb, as was the original A-bomb test at Alamogordo, N.M., July 16, 1945.

As in the 1948 test, the impending test is a controlled-field laboratory operation in which control and precision are desired.

It seems evident there will be no plane drop of the bomb.

With the apparent purpose of testing materials and structural design, it seems obvious that there will be no under-water blast.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

KEEP VENTURING

There should be no age limits placed upon ambition, alertness, creativeness, or in fact anything that may mark the mental and spiritual progress of any human being. Like old Ulysses we should all keep venturing—to the very end.

Excercise is essential to the body to keep it in health and all the organs function in good order. It is just as important that the mind of a man or woman be kept alive and active—always in a venturing spirit. Looking and speculating upon new things and stimulating discoveries.

Read the biography of one's favorite writers, for example, is a wholesome venture, for new delights upon the work of the author and his life are always turning up from some quarter or another. Many years ago I began getting together the essays of a few favorite writers. To writers, knowing this called me up one day and said he had a very rare and unusual book by this author—but it was poetry, his only attempt at this type of literature, and in addition, it was his first book, but the one he wanted most to forget!

It's the satisfaction and pure pleasure we get out of doing things that make them important and worth while. The venture in collecting of any kind thrilling is the search, the venturing into fields and byways and the surprises that crop up all along the way. We constantly learn of things about which we never knew before.

Edit. Let us may venture for so long as we choose. No limits. It's the one way to remain young in only years. To write, or saying, "Nothing ventured nothing gained." Obviously true, but on the other hand, even though many of our ventures come to no profitable end, the very fact that we have ventured should be to our credit.

People who stand still, or just watch from the sidelines of life, only grow old. To venture, not only to get fun out of it, has a constructive angle to it. Keep venturing and you'll never grow dull!

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

THE OLD TIMERS CALLED IT SALT RHEUM

Salt rheum and letter are quaint names for eczema.

About the time we Yankees (residents of North America) began "streamlining" everything and smartening our language with "like he was," the trick specialists hit upon the idea of calling eczema "dermatitis" and so impressed their credulous customers as much as the clinic racketeers do by calling the rheumatic "arthritis." If you have rheumatism you're a pixer; call it "arthritis" and you automatically move up a notch above the common herd.

Aside from the exclusive sound of the word, "dermatitis doesn't mean a thing more than a red inflammation or irritation—a five dollar word for it. I am not at all facetious about it. Indeed there are a good many Yankee herbal who gladly send a "special list" $25 for a diagnosis of "dermatitis but would complain bitterly about the high cost of medical care if an honest doctor charged $5 for treating their eczema.

The word eczema is derived from Greek (I hope) word meaning to boil out, which refers to the weeping or watery exudation that characterizes this skin trouble.

Why the old timers used the name salt rheum, I can only surmise. I have been unable to find a satisfactory explanation for it in medical literature. The word rheum, by the way, formerly meant any watery or catarrhal discharge, especially from the membranes underlying the respiratory passages. So we must admit that salt rheum is not without meaning.

Not only eczema but various other skin troubles, such as recurring hives, acne and allergic reactions are suspiciously frequent among salt shakers—persons who habitually shake salt on their food at table, even before they taste the food.

There is some antagonism between salt and calcium. Calcium deficiency is probably the most prevalent nutritional deficiency in America, due largely to the inadequate consumption of milk. You just can't maintain. v-i-t-a-l-i-t-y unless you take at least 1½ pints (three glasses) of milk or the equivalent in milk products, every day.

The salt required by the body (from a scant half teaspoonful to a level teaspoonful daily) is naturally present in such foods as milk, meat, eggs and fish.

It is unwise and may be dangerous to attempt to subsist on a "salt-free" or salt poor-diet, unless you are under the personal care of your physician. But it is perfectly safe and often of great benefit to health to restrict the salt intake by correcting the salt shaker habit and by avoiding dishes excessively salted in cooking and such superfluities as salted nuts, salted crackers, salted cheese, salted chips—or potatoed salt.

If through bad habit you have acquired an unnatural hankering for salt you may find that the craving moderates when you boop your daily intake of calcium, in that in time you may recover normal taste for food. Send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope for Booklet The Calcium Shortage.

It is well to remember that in making these adjustments of metabolism for the good of your skin you are also taking better care of your arteries and your heart.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Varicose Veins

Had injection treatment for varicose veins, by Dr. ——— I am very pleased with the results. I wish every one with this trouble could know how easy it is to have this treatment and how reasonable. (Mrs. R. N. G.)

Answer—On written request accompanied with stamped self-addressed envelope any reader may have the pamphlet Varicose Veins and Varicose Ulcer. Please do not use clipping.

Pronaled Feet

After discharge from the army my feet turned inward so badly I could hardly walk. (Didn't learn the word pronated till I got your booklet). Doctor prescribed lifts. They gave some relief. Checked with home doctor and he said the lifts were correct. But I remained in the underright pattern. I followed the instructions in your booklet and my feet are so much better I can now take a long walk every Sunday and enjoy it. (L. W. K.)

Answer—For copy of booklet Care of the Feet send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope. In many cases it is necessary to consider the underlying general weakness—nutritional deficiency —which is primarily responsible for the weakness of foot structures.

Forested Areas Southern Ontario In Dry Condition

Toronto, May 4 — (CP) Forested areas throughout southern Ontario and a considerable portion of northern Ontario were reported to be in dry condition today.

The Land and Forests Department has put its district offices and ranger headquarters on the alert to keep rigid control on the issuance of fire permits and to intensify aerial patrols where fire-free conditions permit.

Fire control officers said that weather forecasts indicated low humidity, high temperatures and no general precipitation continuing from today through the week-end.

Meanwhile a total of 26 forest fires were reported being handled, all under control with the exception of two which were reported late last night, one in the Gogoma district and another in the North Bay area. Action has been taken on both these blazes.

The largest of this season's fires in Blezard township near Sudbury was reported under control today with a preliminary estimate of 200 acres having been burned over. A total of 102 extra firefighters have been aiding department forest rangers in combatting the fires.

Fires burning and the districts in which they are located are: — Gogoma 7; Timiskaming 1; Sudbury 8; North Bay 7; Quinte 6; Parry Sound 3.

So far this season there has been a total of 39 forest fires reported in the province, most of them minor.

Trenton Man Crushed to Death By Truck Wheels

Trenton (Special) —A Trenton man was crushed to death under the wheels of a construction truck here this morning.

William T. Lawson, of 135 Byron Street, died at the RCAF hospital shortly after he was crushed by the dual wheels of a McFarland construction truck working at Middleton Park. The truck reportedly backed over Lawson, while a crew was laying asphalt. It was driven by David Cole, of Picton.

Lawson had moved to Trenton two years ago from Brighton. His exact age is unavailable, but is believed to be 50 or 52.

He was taken to the RCAF hospital by ambulance, but died of injuries. The truck is believed to have rolled over the middle of his body. A woman resident was attracted to the scene when she heard someone moaning, and found Lawson on the road.

The construction company has been awarded a contract to repair the roads in the park, which is located northwest of the station, between it and the town.

Coroner Dr. E. A. McQuade, of Trenton, and Ontario provincial police investigated the fatality.

STORE PREPARED

Toronto, May 4 — (CP)— One large store in downtown Toronto has made preparations for the possibility of an air raid, Air Vice Marshal T. A. Lawrence, civil defence co-ordinator for this area, said the store has remodelled its basement for safety during an attack. It has been stocked with food, water, clothing and other necessities sufficient to last three days.

50P.C. Surcharge Will be Levied Due to Strikes

Wellington, May 4 — (Reuters) — Shipping companies operating out of New Zealand will impose a 50-per-cent surcharge on freights as a result of dock strikes which have tied up cargoes during the last 11 weeks.

The Montreal - Australia - New Sealand shipping line announced today that the increase will apply on North American cargoes as well as those to other parts of the world. It goes into effect Monday.

Prime Minister Sidney Holland said he received assurances that the surcharge is only temporary. It also applies on cargoes to New Zealand.

Earlier today, the New Zealand Importers' Association forecast a rise in the cost of living in Britain as a result of the surcharge.

It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that New Zealand will become entirely isolated if there is no settlement of the perpetual watersiders' troubles," a spokesman for the Association said. "Shipping companies cannot be expected to commit their ships to a service from which it is impossible to schedule their return."

Efforts to form local unions of stevedores received a setback today when dock workers in Lyttleton, biggest port on the south island, voted overwhelmingly against replacing the de-registered Watersides' Union.

Changing of Immigrant To Citizen Outlined to Members Of Women's Canadian Club

Miss Constance Hayward, liaison officer of the Department of Immigration last evening brought to the Women's Canadian Club in St. Thomas Parish House, a most enlightening and interesting talk on a topic of paramount importance, that of the assistance involved in the change from immigrant to Canadian citizen.

Miss Hayward, who was introduced to her audience by the president of the club, Mrs. W. J. Doyle, expressed her pleasure in being permitted to address the Women's Canadian Club, and also for the gracious reception she had been accorded.

"In the change from immigrant to Canadian citizen," said Miss Hayward, "the government's service and the citizens co-operate, which is most essential in the working out of democratic principles, and since the end of the last war there has been 400,000 immigrants to the Commonwealth of Nations. These included displaced persons found in Germany, in slave labor camps, many of whom were able to return to Eastern European countries."

The United Nations set up a process to settle over 1,000,000 of these in Canada and Australia, and by 1946, 900,000 had been settled, 20,000 of these in Canada. There has been a constant movement from Great Britain. The Netherlands owing to the lack of farm lands in these countries.

Two Principles Involved

The process of becoming a Canadian citizen involves two principles, legal and integration. In the legal process the immigrant has five years in which to make up his mind to becoming nationalized. Upon arrival he is required to make a declaration of his intentions. The immigrant must not be forced to become a citizen. Upon his appearance before a judge, he must show a reasonable knowledge of either French or English. To assist the immigrant in this, classes for language training are provided voluntarily. Great interest is shown in these classes, as in Winnipeg, when it was 18 degrees below, the attendance was 100 percent.

Books are also provided by the Department of Governmental Immigration to the schools for special classes, which facilitate the learning of the language, this enables the immigrant to express himself to his neighbors, and thus eliminates many misunderstandings.

Adjustments Needed

Many adjustments are necessary and the most superficial comes first which is provided by immigration which is produced by the feeling, by the immigrant, of being 'wanted', of having a place in the community as an individual; and not there on 'sufferance'. This integration is had chiefly by means of the Home and School Association, first through reaching the child, and then from the child to the parents.

This process of integration is a two-sided process, and must have a two-way acceptance. The Ethnic group system permits the immigrant to maintain his individuality as an Ukranian or Hungarian, but yet allows him full citizenship in the country of his choice. The binding of his loyalty to Canada or Australia or anyone of the Commonwealth, as a whole, is the cohesive factor in which the immigrant assumes a responsibility to the people, to the institutions and to the democratic way of life.

Machinery Involved

The machinery of the procedure consists in, voting—must be told how it is done, stressing the point that "Democracy is the best system yet evolved for the benefit of man" and he must have a definite conviction of the reason 'why' the system of government is as it is. He must be taught cooperation, and that everyone has a right, and all have to respect that right.

Summing up, Miss Hayward said, "Citizenship is an understanding of the basic principles of democracy, and the urgent need of man to perfect himself in the sight of God, for all nationalities, with a conception and willingness to practise the duty he has learned."

Mrs. Doyle tendered appreciative thanks to Miss Hayward for her most interesting and illuminating address, which was most heartily acceded to by the fine attendance of members.

Berry Fluff Fine For Mother's Day

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sounds wonderful, this "strawberry fluff" dessert for Mother's Day—just as long as mother isn't the figure-watching type.

Because this recipe, released by the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, is weighed with calories. But it's good.

Ingredients: 20 marshmallows (six ounces); one cup hot milk; three-quarters cup crushed frozen strawberries; few grains salt; one cup whipping cream.

Add the marshmallows to the hot milk and stir until dissolved. Cool and add the three-quarters cup of well crushed strawberries. Chill and allow to partially set. Add a few grains of salt to the cup of whipping cream and whip until stiff. Fold the whipped cream into the chilled strawberry mixture. Pour into a refrigerator tray and freeze.

Saving in Meat

Be sure to remember that when properly cooked the meat that is the less tender cuts of meat are just as satisfying and just as nourishing as the more tender cuts—and less expensive.

Rump of pot roast, or fresh brisket are the best buys when concocting a boiled dinner.

Lamb shanks braised and combined with vegetables make another variation of the boiled dinner. When buying lamb be sure the meat is moist but firm; the bone creamy and slightly pink in color.

Pork also can serve as the main ingredient in the boiled dinner. Fresh, pickled or smoked hocks, picnic shoulders or collar rolls are the best cuts. The flesh of fresh pork should be firm, fine-grained and light greyish pink in color. The fat should be clear and white.

Fish Consumption up

As meat prices rise more families are turning to fish as a main dish. In its latest bulletin the Canadian Association of Consumers reports that every Canadian ate an average of 14 pounds of fish in 1950, an increase of 1½ pounds over the 1949 average.

While fish prices haven't climbed as much as meat prices in the last year, the association doesn't think that is the only reason Canadians are eating more fish.

"Improved methods of transportation and the rapid handling of handling the fish right from the boat to the consumer have made it possible for the fishing industry to offer a better quality of fish throughout most areas of the country," says the C.A.C.

Cooking Tips

Home economists from the Consumer Section of the Fisheries Department also offer the following suggestions for fish cookery:

1. A piece of orange peel or a few cloves burned in another pan or on top of the stove during the cooking of fish will prevent odors.

2. Dishes which have been used in preparing fish should be rinsed in water to which vinegar has been added (two tablespoons to one pint of water) before washing in hot soapy water.

3. Fish odor may be removed from the hands by rubbing with salt, then rinsing in clean warm water.

Mrs. F. R. Harback Gives Inspirational Talk to Jubilee E. A.

On Tuesday evening Bridge St. Jubilee Evening Auxiliary met in the Church parlors for their regular meeting, with delightful supper being served by Mrs. Nelson's group.

Routine reports showed that all committees are working and about half the allocation reached.

Miss Lois Hayward, missionary, gave a short talk on "Japan" illustrated by beautiful cuties.

Mrs. Jones was in charge of the program and took for her theme "Peace Through Helping Other Nations and Other People."

Great Abundance

Mrs. Louk spoke of the abundance at a time when two thirds of the world's population is undernourished.

Mrs. Nellie Anderson read many passages from scripture in which the command is "feed the hungry."

After a lovely solo by Mrs. Burgoyne, Mrs. Harback gave an inspirational talk on "Because We Must Give to the Church." She said, "we are arrayed against communism but we are unable to think of it as a fight against it but as a struggle for Christ."

Open Doors

Frank Laubach tells us that doors are open everywhere. On the island of New Guinea 10,000 asked to be taught to read and write and to be baptized.

"To me, 'communists are lying' gets us nowhere we should say 'we have something better' then act as if we have."

There are supposedly 30 million Christians in the world and these could save the world if they would.

True Discipleship

True discipleship requires service "what doth the Lord require of you?"

"Our Christianity shows in the way we meet them at other tables and other nations.

"We are in the most materialistic age of all time and wealth can destroy or make a nation, your family or you. All you have and are must be given to serve others."

JOLTED OUT OF BATH

Southend, England, May 3 (AP) — Arthur Whybrow, 39, was charged yesterday with attempting to murder his wife. Police said he rigged up a 230-volt line to the bathtub and switched on the current when she got in. Mrs. Whybrow was jolted out of her bath unhurt.

Colombo Plan Theme Of Discussion

The Colombo Plan was the topic for study and discussion at the regular meeting of the Women's Guild of Tabernacle Church, held on Tuesday evening, at the home of Mrs. A. Wells, Geddes Street.

In January, 1950, this plan was proposed at a conference held in Colombo, Ceylon. A committee met in London in September, 1950, and report issued. It concentrates on agricultural development of south and southeast Asia, where dwell one-fourth of the world's population. It is a Commonwealth plan to raise the living standard of these people in a six-year period.

Desperate Plight

Among points stressed and discussed were, the desperate situation of these people at present; 85 per cent of them depend on land, and productivity is low; as this area plays a big part in world trade, the implications are grave-by changing this area to communism. Under the leadership of Nehru, there may be safety, but what is the guarantee for the future, as any one nation on the receiving line is suspicious of another nation should this plan be channelled through the United Nations to avoid tying one to a political pressure. As India is a wealthy nation, why risk Canadian money in Asia? Such an expensive defence program of our own, with Canada's contribution to a proposal to expend 25 million dollars, Canada's share, if this plan takes place.

Lively Discussion

Information was presented by Mrs. E. A. Risto and Mrs. S. D. Scripture and many members participated in lively discussion.

An inspiring worship service was led by Mrs. S. D. Ashley, developing from the account in St. Mark, chapter ten, of the rich young man with a question, who was attracted to Jesus, aware that he himself was missing something, while the Man, Jesus, was so "full of Life", and had such a reserve of strength and peace of mind.

The president, Mrs. Roy Gilbert, thanked the hostess and at the close, refreshments and a social half-hour were enjoyed.

Columnist Brought Joy To Thousands as 'Farmer Smith'

By HERB HILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ha[illegible] (CP) — A little brown [illegible] woman who be[illegible]ber, counsellor and friend to thousands of children has relinquished her pen name of "Farmer Smith" to go into retirement as Laura Carten.

Miss Carten, who for 35 years wrote the Farmer Smith column in the Halifax Chronicle-Herald, wept unashamedly when she was given a farewell party by her "children," who had grown up since she started her column in 1916.

"It has been a joy to know you, big and little," she said. "To know you through your letters, to watch your steady progress in story, poetry and drawing contests."

Miss Carten began her club "to entertain and amuse children, to give them a corner (in the paper) they could call their own." It began with a short simple talk for children and a bedtime story. During 35 years it expanded across the [illegible] the club grew, Miss Carten formed a memory club for older members. Membership spread throughout the Maritimes, New England and Central Canada.

"In 1919," says Ex-Farmer Smith, "came our first really big achievement, Rainbow Ward was opened in the Halifax Childrens' Hospital, completely furnished by members of my Rainbow Club.

"It was a memorable occasion. The sunny ward with its 10 little white beds, framed nursery pictures, phonograph with its dozen children's records, hanging baskets filled with blossoming plants, kindergarten tables and chairs, a mammoth birthday cake spanned by a rainbow arch in candy."

Anniversary Parties

Three years ago a new ward was opened and on every anniversary, a party is held throughout the children's hospital.

A former Rainbow, now a florist, fills the wards and corridors with flowers. A club member plays the piano for the children and another brings her song birds.

Farmer Smith set aside one day every week to write her column especially for 10-year-olds and under. Saturday was reserved for older members. For many years Saturday talks were literary. One season was devoted to British prose, another British poetry and similarly to Americana and Canadiana. During the last winter Saturday was devoted to sketches of world-famous women.

The club's greatest achievement, Rainbow Haven, a summer camp for Halifax's neediest children, started in 1919. It began by sending one boy away for a month and since then it has meant holidays in the country for more than 6,700 children.

For one winter, Rainbows supplied hot cocoa and biscuits to school children in a distressed mining town and a fishing village. The same was done for one of the poorer schools here.

When clothing and food campaigns were needed for Europe's war-torn nations, the Rainbow Club contributed hundreds of large parcels and raised more than $2,000 for the Queen's Canadian fund.

In closing her last column, Farmer Smith emphasized the beauty of charity, the club's main aim.

"He who joy would win
"Must share it—happiness was born a twin."

4TH THURLOW

4th Thurlow—Miss Audrey Ritz nurse-in-training at the Belleville General Hospital is enjoying a three week holiday, spending a few days last week with Mrs. George Denike, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Denike and at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hubble, 3rd Sidney.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Howes were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bunnett, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker and Mr. Cecil Walker took dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Tummon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Balcanquel and Dale of Gilead were Sunday supper guests of Mrs. Fred Garrison and family.

Mr. Robert Miller of Belleville was a recent visitor of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Sills and Mr. and Mrs. Grant Cole.

New Officers Elected by W. I.

The Allan's Mills' Women's Institute members held their annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Gordanier, on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance.

Mrs. J. McKeown opened the meeting in the usual manner and the roll call was answered by paying of fees.

COMMONS TOLD

Bill to be passed are resolution providing for increase in personal income and corporation and for minor changes in

Butter Cause of Rise

Mr. Howe, setting a precedent in announcing the cost-of-living figures in the Commons, said a rise in the price of butter was largely responsible for pushing up the index.

The index increase followed a record February jump of 6½ points and it meant that barometer — which uses the 1935-39 price level as its base of 100 — had moved up 9.3 points since the start of the year.

The announcement brought a question from George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, as to whether the government now intends to use emergency powers to deal with the cost-of-living problem. Mr. Howe said defense buying has not contributed to the rise in consumer costs. He gave no indication tha. price controls are in prospect.

Debate Renewed

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, predicted that when the full effect of the April 10 budget tax increases take hold — in six weeks or two months — the cost-of-living picture will be "much poorer."

There were these other developments in the Commons:

1. Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced the government has decided to allow the shipment of live hogs to United States markets.

2. Mr. Howe said he hopes to be able to announce initial 1951 crop prices for wheat, oats and barley within a few weeks.

3. Prime Minister St. Laurent indicated he hopes the report of the Royal Commission on Arts, Letters and Sciences, due to be tabled this month, will give the government a clue on how it can assist universities.

In the Senate, debate was renewed on a motion calling for Senate reform. Senator Iva Fallis (PC—Ontario) said things would be better and criticism of the Senate reduced if it had more women and if it had more members in the opposition. Senator Fallis and Senator Cairine Wilson (L—Ontario) are the only two women appointed to the Upper House.

Other Factors

The Commons was told by Mr. Howe that ordinarily changes in the cost-of-living index are announced by the Bureau of Statistics. However, he had decided to make the announcement in the chamber since it was there he had said in a speech April 9 that the index would hold about even or at most show an increase on not more than one-half of one per cent in the month.

Almost half of the 2.1 point increase, the Bureau said, was accounted for by the fact that butter prices moved to high levels in March and early April.

Butter prices then dropped sharply, and Mr. Howe told the House that if the mid-April price for butter had been in effect at April 2, his forecast of the size of the increase would have been correct. The forecast had been based on advance rapid decrease in butter prices than actually occurred.

Besides a climb in the food index to 238.4 from 233.9, other factors entering into the record figure were clothing, home furnishings and prices in the miscellaneous group, apart from butter, most foods rose slightly. Decreases were registered by eggs, pork and fresh vegetables.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON OF THE WEEK

David, the Democrat

By ROY L. SMITH

The [illegible] David, beloved [illegible] and honored as the [illegible] of democracy, is best [illegible] by his critics because [illegible] ugly affair with the wife of [illegible] and by the fact that he must be admitted that it constitutes a blot on his escutcheon which is memorable among [illegible] as a "royal line". David came to his throne by a process of election [illegible] by the people. This week's Sunday School lesson tells the story.

In the first place he came to power over the two tribes by vision of the strength of his personality. He did not put his way to the throne with a sword, nor did he break other men in order to rise. Rather, he won thrust upward by the respect and confidence of his fellow countrymen. Seven and a half years afterward, as a result of carefully planned persuasion, he was elected by the elders, the heads of families—to the leadership of the nation.

The People Get to Him

The kingdom over which he ruled was a relatively small affair, but David was a man of affairs. His wise administration extended the boundaries of the nation, developed its internal resources, dispensed justice among the plain people, and encouraged the spirit of a genuine piety.

Something of his appreciation of the plain man appears in one incident which was more or less characteristic of his life. In the midst of one of his crisis hours he was overtaken by a terrible homesickness and said, "Oh, if I could only have a drink of water from the old spring." Two faithful citizens risked their lives to bring him a gourd of the water. When he realized the price they had paid he was unable to drink it but poured it out upon the ground as a magnificent tribute to their loyalty.

Again and again the plainest of his citizens were welcomed at his court and allowed to present their case directly to their king. He undertook to pass his scepter on to his son, but not until it was confirmed by the people.

Supremely Religious

In sharp contrast to the reigning monarchs on the thrones which surrounded him, David lived at all times under a vivid sense of the reality and presence of God.

The times in which he lived were rough and stern. The spirit in which he lived was strict and upright. The aims he sought were unselfish and righteous.

There was much of the spirit of pure democracy about him, for which all the world is indebted to him.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for May 6: "The United Kingdom." II Samuel 5-8, 1 Chronicles 11-17:18.

He has been called "a man after God's own heart," and the cynics have pointed to his sins to declaim. But it was his determined ascent from lust to magnificence which established him in the favor of the Almighty. Not the least of his virtues was his fine spirit of democracy.

Electing King

We need to be reminded occasionally that the English barons who exacted from stubborn King John the Magna Charta, the English Bill of Rights, and the American founding fathers who wrote the constitution of the United States, were faithful readers of the Bible and drew no small part of their political philosophy from Holy Writ.

Throughout the Old Testament particularly there is a marked emphasis on democracy, in spite of the fact that the ancient times never saw a democratic form of government. True to the traditions of Moses whose code made no provision for an economic aristocracy or a "royal line", David came to his throne by a process of election [illegible] by the people. This week's Sunday School lesson tells the story.

SAWCHUK GETS CALDER TROPHY

Judging by the number of votes cast for Terry Sawchuk, goalkeeper of the Detroit Red Wings, there was little doubt as to who was the best rookie in the National Hockey League during the 1950-51 regular season. Sawchuk, who has now made the grand slam of being picked as the outstanding rookie in every professional league he has played in, was the first choice of 15 of the 18 hockey writers and broadcasters who did the selecting. He was the second pick of three and polled a total of 91 points out of a possible 96.

In winning the Calder Memorial Trophy for 1950-51 as "the player selected as the most proficient in his first year of competition in the National Hockey League," Sawchuk receives a cheque for $1,000 from the National Hockey League. A panel of 18 hockey writers and broadcasters — three from each NHL city — did the voting, and points were awarded on the basis of three for a first choice, two for a second and one for a third.

* * *

Runner-up to Sawchuk was another goalie, Al Rollins of Toronto. Rollins polled 26 points. He was number one choice of two selectors, second choice of nine and the third pick of two. Danny Lewicki, Toronto Maple Leafs' left winger, finished in third place with nine points. He had two second-place votes and five third-place selections.

* * *

Other players to receive consideration were Red Sinclair, New York Rangers' left winger, who polled eight points; Tom Johnson, Montreal Canadiens' defenceman, who polled five; Gerry McNeil, Canadiens' goalie, who had three; Boom Boom Geoffrion, Montreal right winger, and Max Quackenbush, Boston defenceman, two points apiece; and Bud MacPherson, Montreal defenceman, and Lorne Ferguson, Boston left winger, one point each.

Sawchuk is the second goalkeeper in as many years to carry off this award. Jack Gelineau of Boston was the top rookie last season. Other goalies to be named the outstanding freshman in their first season in the NHL were Frank McCool of Toronto in 1944-45, Frank Brimsek of Boston in 1938-39 and Mike Karakas of Chicago in 1935-36.

Terry Sawchuk has had a fabulous career in professional hockey. He has won almost every honor possible since he turned pro with Omaha Knights of the United States Hockey League in 1947. He was named top rookie of that loop in 1947-48. The next season he advanced to the Indianapolis club of the American Hockey League and once again was selected as the outstanding first-year player in that circuit. He played the 1949-50 season with Indianapolis, too, and was picked as the AHL's All-Star goalkeeper.

He continued his terrid pace in the National Hockey League and was picked as the NHL All-Star goalkeeper in his first season in the loop. Terry has picked up $2,500 extra this season from the National Hockey League. When Detroit won the NHL Championship he pocketed $1,000 for that. He added another $500 as his share of the semi-final round of the Stanley Cup playoffs. He earned $1,000 for a first-place berth on the All-Star team and, of course, his $1,000 for winning the Calder Memorial Trophy.

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST

It will be somewhat of a beauty-versus-the-beast wrestling feature in the Memorial Arena tonight, when Lord Athol Layton, the handsome and impressive British wrestler, will oppose Big Ben Morgan, the 305-pound, bearded Tennessee blacksmith.

Big Ben Morgan, being one of the biggest, roughest and strongest of the heavyweight matmen, will be a stern test, even for the talented Layton. The result of this match will have considerable bearing on future matches for the winner. A win over Big Ben would definitely boost Layton's stock, while a victory for Morgan over an opponent of Layton's rating would greatly enhance the tough Tennessee tussler's standing.

In the semi-final, Chief Suni War Cloud, the colorful and capable Indian wrestler of the Wasak tribe, will oppose Tommy O'Toole, of Washington, Flying Pat Flanagan, of Toronto, will wrestle Sonny Kurgis, of Columbus, Ohio, in the first event.

REDS TAKE TO KNIFE AND FORK

The Redmen Hockey Club semi-finalists in the senior "B" district group last season will wind up the season on Monday, May 7th in a blaze of festive glory, when the lads will gather at the Vanity Fair, Front Street, where some 65 will sit down to a banquet. Later some outstanding entertainment will be offered, and quite likely awards made to players. It is hoped something regarding plans for next season will be forthcoming at the function.

AHOY LACROSSE FANS!

Attempts will be made to give lacrosse a shot in the arm in this city next Monday night when a number of the gutted stick enthusiasts have called a meeting at the YMCA at eight o'clock. The confab will be more or less of a "feeler" to find out, if possible, if lacrosse can be resurrected in this city. Time was when Belleville had a fairly good team but the game died a lingering death and has been defunct in these parts for some years.

JOINS SPORTS STAFF

Maurice Reid, Trenton, has joined the editorial staff of this newspaper and will help the sports department in its coverage of baseball, softball, hockey, bowling etc. An outstanding athlete in his own right, Maurice is a star bowler and softball pitcher. He flings from the southpaw side and by way of scholarship his advent in Sports Journalism, went out and rolled a neat triple of 900. He has not become associated with any softball team here as yet, although it is likely Howe and Hagerman will acquire his services.

IT'S ONE WAY!

The man at the bar finished his second glass of beer to ask the manager of the place, "How many kegs of beer do you sell here in a week?"

"Thirty-five," the manager answered with pride.

"Well, I've just thought of a way you can sell 70."

The manager was startled. "How?"

"It's simple. Fill up the glasses."

BROOKS LEADING JOCKEY

New York, May 4 (AP)—Steve Brooks, who is expected to ride fanfare in tomorrow's Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, now leads in the race for the 1951 National jockey championship.

Latest figures from the Thoroughbred Racing Association shows Brooks has ridden 91 winners from Jan. 1 through April 25. Johnny Longden is second with 77. Jockeys Joe Culmone and Willie Shoemaker, who tied for the 1950 title, were not listed in the first 10.

Ken Caurch of Windsor, Ont., ranked third with 66 winners.

I-Told-You-So Chorus Tuning Up on Konstanty, Ace Reliefer, Running far Behind Schedule

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Big Jim Konstanty is running behind his 1950 schedule and the "I told you so" choir is tuning up. They said all around the training camps that Konstanty, the Phils's relief ace couldn't possibly repeat last year's success. So far they're right. Because he failed last night, the St. Louis Cards ride in first place today.

Konstanty didn't lose a game until May 30 last season. Already he has lost two. But it's much too early to judge.

Failure of Eddie Sawyer's pitchers, with the exception of Robin Roberts, has thrust a heavier burden on Konstanty. It seems impossible, but so far he's working more than last year, when he made 74 appearances.

Jim stopped a Redbird rally last night that knocked out Jocko Thompson and tied the score at 4-4 in the seventh. But in the eighth, four hits, a walk and an error by Del Ennis accounted for three Cardinal runs and brought in Milo Candini to relieve the pitcher. A fourth run crossed before the side was out. The final count was 8-4.

Hit Behind Ear

But Konstanty's troubles were only part of the Phils' woes. Catcher Andy Seminick was hit behind the left ear by Max Lanier's pitch in the fourth inning. Carried from the field and taken to a hospital, Seminick soon regained consciousness. They'll have to wait for the X-rays to find out how long he'll be out.

Pittsburgh Pirates continued their sweep through the east by ruining New York Giants' baby three-game win streak, 7-4. After Spider Jorgenson's pinch homer in the 10th, scoring four runs on only two hits.

Brooklyn solved an old charmer, Herm Wehmeier, who beat them four times last year. With Preacher Roe throwing a six-hitter, the Dodgers shut out Cincinnati Reds 8-0. Carl Furillo and Billy Cox homered for manager Chuck Dressen's new batting order.

Pafko Paces Cubs

Andy Pafko's homer with the bases loaded paced Chicago's 9-3 win over Boston Braves. That opened the door for St. Louis to slip past Boston into first place. Hank Sauer also homered as the Braves latest pitching hotshot, Max Surkont, suffered his first loss. Sam Calhoun, with a homer and single, drove in all three Boston runs.

But the big explosion of the day was in St. Louis, where New York Yankees drove in in the ninth inning to flatten the Brownies 17-3. The 11 runs were an American League record for a ninth inning and the 24 total bases in the inning tied a record.

Gil McDougald, playing second base for injured Gerry Coleman, hit a grand-slam homer and a two-run triple in the ninth-inning riot, tying a modern major-league record with six runs batted in for one inning. Allie Reynolds had little trouble going the route in his first start.

Chuck Stobbs got Boston Red Sox their first win of the western swing with the help of Walt Dropo. Steve O'Neill took Dropo off the bench and he responded with a double and single to knock in four runs of the 6-1 edge over Detroit's Ted Gray.

Washington continued to mop up in the west, whacking Chicago 7-1 to take over the undisputed lead from idle Cleveland. The Indians and Philadelphia A's were not scheduled. Connie Marrero, Washington's crafty little Cuban ace, scattered nine hits for his third straight victory.

The schedule of Solunar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from John Alden Knight's Solunar Tables for the year so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration. All times given are Daylight Saving. The period is from May 5th to May 19th.

Tom Gard's Note Book

It is supposed to be everyone's duty to take part in community and municipal affairs. Realizing that my participation in such things was ill, I decided to attend an open meeting called by the local Junior Chamber of Commerce for their annual spring clean-up, paint-up, fix-up campaign. Things turned out as I might have expected! How generous I seem to my subject on which I can really get wound up. As you may have guessed, I talked myself right into a job helping to organize the program. Oh well, it's one job I'll like as time spent trying to help people improve the appearance of their home and their property is time well spent.

Does Your Gate Say Welcome

One task I must do this spring is finish the entrance to our garden behind the house. The barbecue was completed last year and some of the border planting but nothing was done to divide the service area from the garden area. I decided on a white random-width picket fence and have been collecting old packing box boards, cleaning them up and applying the first coat of paint. The archway will offer support for some climbing roses I'm going to plant as soon as I can get them. My dahlias, too, must be divided and planted soon.

Storm Door to Screen Door

I'm certainly glad this was found last fall to convert that screen door into a storm door. It has saved fuel and made the back hallway much warmer. The trick was to find some material and angle irons at the four corners took the extra weight of the glass. Now the door stays put and just the screen and window section is changed each fall.

An idea that has been filed away for the spring is to paint the floor in the other day. A young couple I was visiting had taken a cheap office table, cut the legs off, made a shelf of the drawer cavity and fitted it up as a coffee table. Painted black and trimmed with gold it was the right smart and blended well with their other furniture.

Slipper Chairs

All of the cleaning up is not being done outside these days. I found my wife making slipper chairs in the bedroom out of three old kitchen chairs she picked up at an auction several days ago. All the talent is not confined to one side of the household!

No Bans Will Be Put on Players Going to Canada

Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League said Thursday at Philadelphia that absolutely no bans will be imposed on players who jump to the Canadian leagues.

But the spat of two football admitted that he wouldn't think very kindly of any "jumpers" who get their fill of Canada and decide to come back to the National League.

They didn't say outright he wouldn't take a boy back into the fold but he warned guardedly: "We'll do our best to protect football. Anything detrimental to the game must be curtailed. And I'll say this, contract breaking is detrimental to the game."

Several club owners are reported even more incensed over the exodus above the heads of some of the United States' finest grid talent — a situation paralleling the famous baseball "jumping case in baseball.

Expanding the United States Hockey League to a seven-team circuit next season was considered by directors of the league here Thursday at Kansas City. President Ron Cook said Wichita, Kas., was the new site being considered for membership. No action will be taken, however, until the next meeting in Omaha June 15.

There'll be mint juleps aplenty at Saturday's Kentucky Derby in Louisville, the Bartenders Union (A.F.L.) announced Thursday a threatened strike at Churchill Downs had been averted with the signing of a new contract.

The United States Trotting Association predicted Thursday that harness racing is due for its biggest season in 1951. Don E. Miller, executive vice-president, based the prediction on the fact requests for racing certificates for trotters and pacers were running about 15 per cent ahead of last year's record.

Jack Gardner, British and European heavyweight champion, agreed again Thursday to fight Argentina's Cesar Brion, this time the 10-round bout will be held outdoors in London's White City Stadium, June 5. The young British twip pulled out of a scheduled bout with Brion because of an injured left hand.

Holland won both singles matches Thursday from Monaco to take a 2-0 lead in their first-round series of European zone Davis Cup play.

The double at Dufferin Park Thursday, second day of this season's racing, paid $203 for $2. Fred Ic, a 9-1 long shot won the first race and Grace A, a 3-to-1 tak, took the second.

Solid Betting Favorite Absent From the Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 4—(AP)—In the absence of a solid betting favorite among the horses lined up for tomorrow's Kentucky Derby, the "Battle of the Brains" was swaying considerable smart money today.

The big battle features two of the smartest trainers in the business, if Derby performances count. It pits Ben Jones, the Mr. Brains of fabulous Calumet Farm against Max Hirsch, the Mr. Master Mind of the just-as-fabulous King Ranch.

It's a somewhat strange departure from custom that neither of these professors of the paddock has a horse that figures to be on the shortest end of the odds. But the post-time figures probably will reflect plenty of respect for each.

Jones, six-time trainer of Derby champions, was complaining as usual that a few days ago that he don't have a derby horse this year." Then Fanfare won the Derby trial Tuesday and stirred up talk that Mr. Brains has produced again.

Hirsch trained horses have won five Derbies — more than any other trainer. In addition he has saddled two horses that finished second, one that came in third, and one that wound up fifth. Citation and Coaltown formed his greatest one-two punch, finishing first and second, respectively, in 1948 He got Whirlaway ready for the big event when he had stood since 1941.

Whirlaway ran the mile and one-eighth in 2:01 flat which, on the other hand, has been at the business of training Derby horses longer than any other handler. His first starter was in 1915, and he has had 11 since. Three of them have been winners and two others have been in the money and third.

The only other winner among the other trainers is John Gaver, Jr., handler of Greentree Farm's Big Stretch and Hall of Fame. He won with Shut Out in 1943. Other Gaver horses have finished second, third, sixth, eighth and 13th.

Ottawa Giants Believe in Doing Things Hard Way

(By The Associated Press)

The Ottawa Giants believe in doing things the hard way in the International League.

They had a game won last night, 3-0, with two out and two strikes on the batter. Then it happened. George Moskovich drove a hot grounder off pitcher Chuck Eisenmann's ankle for one run. Then two more off reliefer Al Corwin sent the boys into extra innings.

For three hours and 54 minutes into the chill early-morning air they battled the Buffalo Bisons until they finally won, 5-4, in the 15th. Each side scored in the 10th but Ottawa finally took it on Bobby Hoffman's single, a sacrifice and John Metkovich's single.

Syracuse continues to lead the parade, knocking over Springfield, 7-4, by routing Andy Varga in a five-run first inning. Southpaw Bill Houtz allowed only one hit in 7 2/3 relief innings after Jack Griffore was knocked out. Charley Teague homered for Springfield.

Karl Drews pitched and batted Baltimore past Rochester, 3-2. The ex-Indy leaguer threw a six-hitter and singled home Bill Glynn with the winning run in the eighth. Nippy Jones hit a Rochester homer.

A six-run fifth inning helped Toronto down Montreal, 8-5, with Don Robertson getting the win over Harry Podbielan. George Shuba hit a homer for Montreal. Bobby Rhawn and Less Fleming led the Leafs.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 4—(AP)—"Twenty-five years ago," moaned one of the oldtimers around the international boxing club office, "you could find heavyweights in any country. We had Uzcudun, Heeney, Phil Scott, Von Porat, Schmeling, Spalla, Carnera, Pierce, Charles. Now all we got is a few guys with talent who won't keep in shape and a lot who'll work hard, who are always in condition, but who can't fight'. . . The day after he made that statement, they signed old Joe Louis and now young Lee Savold for the first big outdoor heavyweight fight of 1951. . . There's no connection between the remark and the signing, but somehow they seem to fit. . . After you eliminate the won't-fight and can't fight heavyweights, you haven't much left but champ Ezzard Charles and old gentlemen like Joe and Lee. . . It's rather painful to see Louis, almost 37, ministry in 1936.

trying to regain his youthful fighting form. . . Savold, 35 in the books, is recognized as champion in Britain, but his list of victims is unimpressive and, as someone said, "he hasn't gone 15 rounds since he was a bartender."

RETIRED MINISTER KILLED

Gormley, Ont., May 4 — (CP) — Rev. A. T. Gooding, 65, retired minister, and rural postman, was killed Thursday when a CNR freight train rammed his car at a level crossing. Witnesses said he apparently didn't hear the train whistle.

He entered the ministry of the United Missionary Church, a Mennonite group, in 1908. He was ordained in 1912 and married the former Flossie Duncan of Dundalk, Ont., the same year. He served in churches on Manitoulin Island and in the Ontario communities of Stayner, Palmerston, Shrigley, Port Elgin, Markham and Vineland. He retired from the ministry in 1936.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Saturday, May 5

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Assorted ways, some good, some trying. Don't settle for anything less than success, and that can be had with proper course and effort. Get busy, folks, wake up! There is success ahead.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Some part of day as Aries has, but nothing to better aspects after 3 p.m. Be on guard, the simplest cue may lead may be the biggest advantage today. Moves should further your sincere endeavor.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Don't quit the job early, and get in the right direction, you can step up the day as a success by 5 p.m. Investments, real estate, contracting, advertising, mercantile make gains.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Don't be in the slack, hold tight rein on everything today. Stars advocate extra caution, especially in money, business matters. Avoid taking loans unless you really need and know the details.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Suspicious for most matters but needless risk or chance to take is evident. Mixed aspects all day. Ill humor or manners will cause loss of achievement, cause loss of friends we will need.

August 24 to September 23 — (Virgo)—Avoid worry, taking too much for granted. Don't be swayed wholly by others, neither direct to extremes. Remember, success is not by nature continuous Be gentle with opposite sex.

September 24 to October 23 — (Libra)—Shun at once uncertain matters, business deals that won't stand investigation. Decisions pertaining to home family, loved ones should be discussed with all parties concerned, and calmly.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio)—Probably less generous day than you figure. Don't be careless with money, promises, anything. Deliver to your best ability—always. Be easier on health, get sleep, relaxing recreation.

November 23 to December 22 — (Sagittarius) — Personal affairs, discussions with friends, associates, superiors need delicacy. Day most favorable for the genial, soundly progressive individual.

December 23 to January 21 — (Capricorn)—When urgent duties are duly cared for, take time for recreation, a favorite hobby, a good book. Get diversion from routine. Spend some time with loved one children, friends.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)—Your planet not accepted for personal gain but day can be helpful in business, professional matters. Seek objectives with confidence. News likely to encourage.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Extra care for finances, meetings, contracts. Be on guard handling confidentials, information, especially for government, civic matters. The unusual can be most benefic.

YOU BORN TODAY were blessed by God with versatility and general capability to make a fine success of life and be able to assist others along your way, latently a genial host (hostess), joyous companion, (can be scintillating if you develop yourself much) and writers.

Ridgway Says Reds Paying Bloody Price

RIDGWAY
U.S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, May (AP) — Lt.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway said today the reds in Korea will "continue to pay the bloody price they've been paying."

The new allied supreme commander made the statement at U.S. Eighth Army headquarters in a two-day inspection tour of the Korean front.

He said that front-line troops have "complete confidence, complete self-confidence in their ability to handle anything that's thrown at them."

"In fact, the only uncertainty I find anywhere in my mind is how long those fellows (the enemy) are going to continue to put up with the empty communist promises to throw out of Korea and destroy the U.N. army.

"So far the only things they've succeeded in destroying are a few of thousands more of their men, and as far as I can see they're going to continue to do that—continue to pay the bloody price they've been paying.

"Maybe some day these people who are being used as cannon fodder will wake up and listen to reason."

EMPEROR CELEBRATES

11-Year Embargo Against Shipment Of Hogs Ended

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—An 11-year embargo against the shipment of Canadian live hogs to the United States ended Thursday. And with it ended hope, too, that Canada will be selling bacon to Britain this year.

Thegiscation to end the ban was announced in the Commons by Agriculture Minister Gardiner. Permits for such shipments will be issued by the government free-ly.

Sale of live hogs to the United States was banned in 1940 to channel all available bacon into the United Kingdom market.

This year the government decided against taking up a U.K. offer to buy Canadian top-quality bacon at 29 cents a pound—Britain's 1950 price. In previous years, it subsidized food shipments to Britain.

However, the government did announce it would continue to buy bacon from the domestic market at 23½ cents a pound—if any was available at that price—and arrangements could be made later whereby Britain might buy some of this bacon, if she wanted it at cost.

Now with the U.S. market thrown open it is unlikely Britain will get any bacon from Canada.

No Heavy Flow Expected

Toronto — Lifting of the embargo on shipment of Canadian hogs to the United States is unlikely to result in any heavy flow across the border, William F. Watson, Ontario livestock commissioner, said Thursday night.

During the last week, he said, there was a difference of six cents between the 24 cents being offered in Toronto for dressed hogs and the prices quoted in Buffalo, N.Y. A similar gap existed between prices being paid for live hogs.

Stock-Selling Schemes Concern Of Federal Govt.

Ottawa, May 4—(CP) — The United States Securities Exchange Commission is trying to close on a group of Americans, who they believe, are backing fraudulent stock-selling schemes, officials close to the government disclosed yesterday.

Members of the commission conferred here Wednesday with representatives of the Canadian Justice and External Affairs Departments. The visit follows complaints from residents of the United States particularly at border points that they are being "fleeced" by stock salesmen operating from Canada.

Officials here stated that the U.S. officials were told that Canada would do everything in its power to help track down and prosecute any "defrauders" operating from this side of the border, but the problem was to obtain concrete evidence of defrauding.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

"He ... didn't hope to win by ... out red herrings. You ... make me or Sheriff Clem Purdy forget anything said out of sheer malice, Peter, for instance, said a while ago that Mrs. Carslaw's mustn't say anything self-incriminating. Now he tells Sondra she doesn't have to say a word so long as Leesna is No. 1 suspect. But Leesna is the only one of you who would have profited had Miss Maggie lived. She's the only one who would have been safe to kill her. The rest of you, excepting maybe Jones and Mrs. Carslaw, are in for first place in my book. You might as well know that."

Jasper Thorne's head came up slowly, as though the weight of his thoughts was almost too much.

"You're accusing one of us," he said, "Which one?"

Mart Preston said simply, "I don't know."

"You think it's me." Jasper wet his lips nervously. "You think I killed her because I wasn't in my room, don't you? But I didn't. I didn't, I tell you!"

He put emphasis on it without raising his voice, without ever ridding his mouth of its down-at-the-corners defeatism. Despite Preston, Leesna thought, looked interested and determined not to show it.

"So you weren't in your room" he said casually. "Where were you?"

Jasper shook his head.

"I've never told Sondra, too, I suppose," dryly.

"I didn't say that."

"No," snapped Mart, "and neither did Peter. Sondra said they were together."

"Oh, come now, Preston!" Peter Thorne spread his hands wide in a gesture that could have meant anything. "Are you doubting the lady's word?"

Mart ignored him turning again to Arthur Jones. "Let's get back to that letter," he suggested. "What about it?"

"The sheer malice" Mart had mentioned was in the old man's eyes as they rested momentarily on Peter Thorne.

"Miss Maggie showed me that letter, Mist' Preston. 'Bout two weeks ago. It was when Mis' Thorne—" his eyes went to Sondra's haughty face—"was in Chicago. Least she said Chicago," he added in scornful parentheses. "She said, Miss Maggie did, that that was the end. Mis' Thorne had to go."

Sondra was on her feet, eyes blazing. "What do you mean, you lying old—"

"I ain't lyin', and you know it, Mis' Thorne," Her terrible anger did not even ruffle his assurance. "You know very well what that letter said—that Mist' Paige had seen you in New York, Not Chicago."

By the time Sheriff Clem Purdy returned to the living room to take over the questioning, Mart Preston had wrung from them the truth behind the old gardener's charge.

Sondra Thorne admitted, that she had gone to New York to see if her old agent couldn't get her a part on Broadway. Which would she admitted, have finished her with Thorne Hill—forever.

"I was—I am—sick and tired of this place!" she had flung at them defiantly, "I couldn't stand it, the way Miss Maggie thought all the Thorne's were little gold gods on little gold pedestals and no one—not even I!—must contaminate them. I had to get away!"

"That's why you stole my mother's lavaliers, isn't it?"

—Agatha Thorne leaned forward waiting. Like a cat at a mouse hole, Leesna thought. She hates Sondra, too, just as Miss Maggie did. She's enjoying this.

"I earned every penny of it!"

"Then you don't deny stealing it!" Miss Aggie pounced again.

"I did not steal it! I—I—" Sondra's assurance cracked, then rallied swiftly. "Five years in this house and you think I didn't have $2,500 coming to me? Yes, that's what I got for it—not $3000." Her laugh was harsh. "So Miss Maggie actually would have left me $500. Generous of her, wasn't it."

If Jasper Thorne had changed color like a chameleon Leesna wouldn't have been more surprised than she was when he said quietly, "don't be bitter darling," and patted Sondra's hands, clenched in her lap. "You know how Aunt Maggie was."

"And how!"

"We'll go away, Sondra." Jasper was begging her. "We'll never even think of Thorne Hill again, if you want it that way."

Sondra stared at him as though he weren't there and some of his new-found confidence faded.

He continued, "if you want to go back to New York—"

"No, Jasper,—Not—not now."

It was Peter Thorne who threw cold water on the spark of hope that leaped into his brother's eyes "Would that," he inquired nastily "be because Jap is a rich man now? Or because Lewis told you your Broadway chances are absolutely nil—as your acting talent always was?"

Sheriff Clem Purdy's eager eyes went around the room, leaving with each person in the Thorne household the terrible feeling that his innermost thoughts had been stripped bare.

"Now, then we'll get on with things quickly, because it's getting late," he said after Mart Preston had finished bringing him up to the moment. "Coroner Kinchumby says it wouldn't have taken a strong person to have committed this crime because Miss Thorne was seriously ill with a heart condition anyhow. She had only a few months to live at best—which is mighty interesting in view of that new will which she was going to take to her lawyer. It would seem," he added pointedly, "that the people who stood to lose the most should be the most suspected. And yet you'd have me believe that this girl Leesna Thorne is the killer. Does that make sense.

A horrible gnawing silence followed. Leesna dared not look up to meet the hate and suspicion that was pounding at her.

"To me it does, Purdy." Peter Thorne spoke slowly, as if he were feeling his way along a dark dangerous precipice. "Cousin Leesna did not know that until that document was signed in the presence of witnesses who properly affixed their signatures. It was not worth the paper it was written on. It was merely wishes that in court could be called the work of a demented old woman, she killed her and was leaving—"

HASTY PEES COMPANIES TO BE MOBILIZED

$40-Month Pension No Means Test Expected in 1952

Expect Federal Costs Will be $350,000,000

Ottawa, May 5 — (CP) — A $350,000,000 federal program to provide $40-a-month pensions to Canadians 70 and over regardless of means likely will be inaugurated early next year.

Prime Minister St. Laurent told the Commons yesterday that no time will be lost in getting the program into operation.

He made the statement after informing members that all 10 provinces have agreed to a constitutional amendment which will clear the way for the federal government to enter the pensions field, now under provincial jurisdiction.

The cost of the pensions to all 70 and over will be financed out of taxation but the government has not indicated how the contributions will be collected. A parliamentary committee on old-age pensions reported last year the pensions might be financed through a two-per-cent levy on incomes.

Once the new program is in operation, the federal government plans to share on a 50-50 basis with the provinces the cost of pensions to the needy between 65 and 69.

At present, pensions of $40 a month—some of the provinces pay a bit more—go to those 70 and over who can prove their need for such a payment. The federal government pays 75 per cent of the cost and the provinces the remainder.

Mr. St. Laurent said the federal government does not plan to hold up the pensions program until the provinces agree on a constitutional amendment that would allow it to collect an indirect sales tax or three per cent.

B.N.A. Amendment

In his announcement on old-age pensions, Mr. St. Laurent said he likely will ask the Commons Monday to pass an address to the United States Congress requesting an amendment to the British North America Act. Similar address likely will be passed by the Senate Tuesday.

The address would amend the Canadian constitution — the B.N.A. Act — to give parliament full federal jurisdiction. But the United States amendment still would be asked to pass constitutional amendments on matters within the jurisdiction of the states of the federal and provincial governments.

Once the U.S. ratifies the amendment it usually does without question—the Canadian parliament will pass legislation providing for the new pensions program. Hon. Paul Martin estimated it will be possible to have the new program in operation by early next year, barring unforeseen developments.

The new program is expected to increase the number of Canadians receiving old-age pensions from 700,000 to 850,000. Payments out of the federal treasury, including contributions from the taxpayers expected to jump from about $110,000,000 to $350,000,000 a year.

Aly's Father Won't Meddle In Rita Affair

Nice, France, May 5. (AP). The Aga Khan said today he will not meddle in the affairs of his son, Prince Aly, and daughter-in-law, Rita Hayworth. He said he hopes their child, Yasmin, will be raised in the Moslem religion.

"There is no question of my intervening in the Aly-Rita affair. Both will do as they please," he said.

"I hope that Rita will not raise any difficulties about raising Yasmin in the Moslem religion. That is the only thing that counts for the moment," he said.

Rita has announced her intention of either getting a formal separation or a divorce from Aly. She now is in the United States.

Canada Prepares To Start Seaway Without U.S. Help

Ottawa, May 5. (CP)—Canada, after waiting 13 months for the United States to act with her on the St. Lawrence Seaway is getting ready to go ahead with the vast power-navigation project on her own.

Authoritative informants said Friday the government will not seek beyond the May 31 session congressional ratification of a Canada-U.S. agreement on the plan, which has been bogged down in Congress since 1941.

If the project should go ahead on a one-way basis, it would mean Canada would lay out about $700,000,000 during five or six years to complete a navigation channel allowing ocean-going ships to go right to the head of the Great Lakes, and to set up a hydro-electric development to yield about 2,200,000 horsepower.

A special project branch of the Transport department was established in 1949 to deal especially with the seaway.

Estimates by the branch, now about a year old, show a total allocated over-all cost of $805,000,000 for the project. This would be for a joint job or by Canada alone. From this would be deducted $132,000,000 which Canada already has spent on the Welland Canal.

Syrian Army Resumes Attack

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 5—(CP)—Syrian army forces supported by artillery and mortars today resumed the attack inside Israeli territory in the demilitarized zone an Israeli army spokesman announced.

The spokesman said the Syrians assaulted the area around Tel Al Mutella in continued disregard for yesterday's United Nations-sponsored truce appeal to both sides.

He said Israeli forces repulsed the attack with an 80-minute artillery battle and inflicted heavy casualties. Israeli forces also were reported to have knocked out one artillery fire.

A report from the frontier quoted an Israeli spokesman as saying Syrian troops were consolidating their positions inside the demilitarized zone.

(The report said the Syrian assault was the 18th in the last three days. It said scores of Syrian dead littered the battle area.

(In a report from Damascus, Reuters News Agency quoted a Syrian spokesman as saying 27 Israelis and more than 20 injured in frontier fighting during the last 24 hours.)

FIGHT CONTINUES OVER MACARTHUR IN U. S. SENATE

Truman Attacked On Asian Policies

By JACK BELL

Washington, May 5 —(AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur continues today his bristling offensive against Truman administration plans to fight what he calls an "appeasement" war in Asia.

Chief targets of the tireless 71-year-old deposed Pacific commander were President Truman and Defence Secretary George C. Marshall.

State Secretary Dean Acheson, who has been accused as an "appeaser" by some of MacArthur's supporters, was not included. The General yesterday absolved Acheson of any connection with his ouster by Truman.

And Senator William Fulbright (Dem.-Ark.) observed in Senate armed services and foreign relations' committee hearings—were communist-tinged. Testimony today—that Acheson argued against the presidential decision.

The former Pacific commander made it plain that he will give no quarter to Truman and Marshall in his fight for authority for his successor, Lt.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, to push the war harder against the Chinese communists.

MacArthur said he was fired on "one individual's judgment," obviously the President's — despite a Pentagon statement that the joint chiefs of staff all shared his opinion, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, concurred in the action.

But this hot political issue was only one of many raised in an eight-hour testimony stint yesterday that left committee members limp but apparently did not tire the general.

Car Hits Train, Driver Dead In Auto Flames

Peterborough, May 5 (CP) — An old model car plowed into a Canadian National Railways freight train he had overtaken in darkness near here today and its driver was killed.

Robert James Blackwood, 26, of Lakefield, Ontario was burned beyond recognition when the car burst into flames after being dragged 600 feet by the freight. Police gave identification of the victim through a ring and wrist watch.

Police said they learned of the accident, which occurred two miles east of Ommeme, about 15 miles from here. Skid marks indicated Blackwood made a last-minute effort to swing the automobile out of the path of the freight and hit it broadside.

The train was en route from Lindsay to Belleville.

Blackwood was returning home from Toronto, where he had driven on a friend last night. His wife Dorothy, was to have made the trip with him but decided not to at the last minute.

Difference Between Platoon, Brigade Outlined in Thumbnail Description

Ottawa, May 5 (CP) — This is to guide those who don't know the difference between a platoon and a brigade and who may be a bit confused now that Canada is going to have the equivalent of a full division under arms.

Some Ottawa-style descriptions of smaller army segments:

Division—About 18,000 men divided into three infantry brigades plus supporting units of artillery engineers, signals, medical, maintenance, and other arms. It is commanded by a major-general.

Brigade group — When it appears that a brigade may have to fight on its own, units which normally would be under divisional command are added to the brigade as it can operate alone. The enlarged brigade is called a brigade group.

(Canada now has two brigade groups and is going to recruit a third. The fact they are all brigade groups means they are not to be banded together into a division. They are to be kept separate for separate jobs, the regular force airborne brigade group the mobile striking force for home defence, the (special force) 25th brigade group for Korea, the new

Order of The Day Called On Commonwealth Troops 'For Leadership and Guts'

In a cable just passed through censorship, Bill Ross, Canadian Press correspondent with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in Korea, tells of an order of the day issued to the British Commonwealth Division last Monday. It was just before the big Chinese drive, later repulsed, to capture Seoul. Censorship does not permit Boss to name the unit.

West Central Sector, Korea, May 5 — (CP) — An order of the day calling on the 28th British Commonwealth Brigade to fight with "guts" now that "the menace of the urgent hour is upon us" was issued Monday by Brigadier George Taylor, commanding officer.

(In later cables, Boss told of United Nations mountain troops spiralling at Chinese efforts in a lull in the enemy's spring offensive to strengthen positions Thursday through Friday. These were north of the Han river in a series of 700-foot hills east of Seoul.)

Stepped Attack

Brig. Taylor — whose Canadians, Australians and Britons saved the Eight Army's whole left wing by stopping the Chinese advance cold in the central sector north of Kapyong — issued his order on commanders' decided to destroy the enemy of ground of our own choosing. In our strong positions we can hold on for weeks.

"Don't forget concealment and surprise and work like beavers to strengthen positions. Let not our soldiers you have full measure of our anti-like opponents. The menace of the urgent hour is upon us. I am confident that we will not fail. Now is the time for leadership and hard men.

From the first base provided by the U. N. mountain troops, other friendly forces Friday kicked off in an attempt to find Chinese whose "spring offensive" seems to have petered out in this sector.

The mountain troops have been manning a strong defence line, hopeful that the enemy will hurl his men at their perimeter, relaxed after holding the United Nations front here since Tuesday. They used every daylight hour to strengthen their line which hugs a ridge of hills.

The mile-long ridge is in a circular arc from north of the Han to the south, varying from 250 to 300 feet.

Well Prepared

They were ready for enemy attack at any time in any strength.

Brig. Taylor's British armour weapon in the battalion's armory, plus a healthy number of others, including tanks and mortars and artillery for others.

Extra artillery was allotted, too. The force was ready and determined to hold for weeks if necessary, if not cut off.

Friday the commanding officer made rest the number one order of the day. He did regretful only that a strong spring sun had given way to a persistent drizzle and thickly-overcast skies.

Strong U. S. Patrols Probe No Man's Land for Enemy

Tokyo, May 5—(AP)—United Nations tank-infantry patrols clanked into the Korean no-man's land on the hunt for withdrawing communist forces.

"This isn't a general advance," said a spokesman at United States Eighth Army headquarters, "but we're spurring for an opening."

The armored patrols struck ahead on the western front for the fourth consecutive day.

The reds had pulled back on the central front. They withdrew on a smaller scale on the western front.

The red spring drive that began April 22 had carried the enemy into flames after being dragged 600 feet by the freight. Police gave identification of the victim through a ring and wrist watch.

Police said they learned of the accident, which occurred two miles east of Ommeme, about 15 miles from here. Skid marks indicated Blackwood made a last-minute effort to swing the automobile out of the path of the freight and hit it broadside.

The train was en route from Lindsay to Belleville.

Blackwood was returning home from Toronto, where he had driven on a friend last night. His wife Dorothy, was to have made the trip with him but decided not to at the last minute.

Negro Pianist Refused Haircut In Hamilton

Hamilton, May 5. (CP)—Oscar Peterson, popular Canadian Negro pianist, said he was refused a haircut in a Hamilton barber shop Friday.

The Montreal musician who won the Down Beat All-American award last year said the refusal of the barber shop to cut his hair was a "put-and-out" insult, not only to me but other Negroes.

Peterson said he was told "the shop is closed" when he entered. He said a white fiddle player, Ray Brown, also a Negro, had been given a haircut earlier in the week in the same shop, and that despite the statement that the shop was closed, a man in work clothes came in and was given a haircut, Mr. Peterson left.

Glen McQuaid, proprietor of the shop and president of the Hamilton Barbers' Employers' Association, confirmed that Peterson had been refused a haircut.

"What can I do about it?" he asked. "It's hard enough trying to get barbers these days. I told them to cut their hair if wouldn't have a barber working for him."

Peterson said it was the first time he had ever encountered discrimination in Ontario.

Commenting on the incident, Magog Lyon, Toronto, said it was "discrimination of the rankest kind."

"I am ashamed to think it took place in this city," the mayor said.

ALMOST DID IT

Chicago, May 5 — (AP) — Bruno Cialkowsky, 70-year-old Chicago bachelor, married Chicago's "Mother of the Year" yesterday.

Mrs. Martha Fish won the title. But judges had a "difficult time" deciding between Mrs. Fish and Cialkowski.

The award was open to all persons who performed outstanding volunteer social service work. Cialkowski was nominated for his recreational services to veterans.

CANADA ENTERS SUGAR DEAL WITH CUBA

Expand Cuban Quota 15 Times in New Setup

By HAROLD MORRISON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 5—(CP)—Canada has entered into a sugar deal with Cuba—a move that may eventually help housewives fight rising living costs.

Details of the deal, which involves a complex tariff-cutting arrangement, likely will be announced soon.

So far as could be learned, the significant points are these:

1. Canada has agreed to fix a quota whereby Cuba can ship in about 150,000,000 pounds of sugar at a more favorable tariff cost. This would mean 1,125 in the 8,200,000 pounds Cuba shipped last year.

2. Cuba will extend trade concessions to Canada, equal to those granted to the United States—giving Canada a better chance to compete with the U.S. on certain manufactured products.

3. Sugar arriving in Canada will be charged the normal tariff of about 1.25 cents a pound under the most-favored-nation rate. Commonwealth countries get a preferred sugar rate of only 28 cents a hundredweight.

4. Importers buying Cuban sugar up to the quota eve, will be able to apply to a government agency and obtain a rebate up to the Commonwealth level.

Previously Unannounced

Official quarters say this is not a subsidy, but merely a trade concession.

The Dominion Republican, another sugar producer, will obtain the same kind of terms but in this case no quota will be fixed. Canada, will be able to turn off the tariff tap when she likes.

Previously Commonwealth countries, including Australia, Jamaica and Fiji, held a virtual monopoly in the Canadian sugar market.

Canada imports about 1,265,000,000 pounds of raw sugar a year. The Commonwealth has supplied about 40 per cent.

The experts believe that with equal tariffs Cuba can undersell the Commonwealth suppliers by about 85 cents a hundredweight. The quota ultimately will be fixed to be increased in the future if the deal works out.

In effect, Cuba will be able to obtain a firm foothold on the Canadian market which, even if the price thereby may become more competitive.

Commonwealth countries voiced opposition to the move, negotiated originally in 1948 but renewed in multi-lateral tariff negotiations. The sugar deal was made outside the general tariff bargaining.

Some have protested directly to the Canadian government but the government has taken no move to change its plans.

Arabian-Nights Honeymoon Planned By Farouk for 17-Year-Old Bride

Cairo, Egypt, May 5—(CP)—King Farouk has planned an Arabian-nights honeymoon for Narriman Sadek, sloe-eyed 17-year-old beauty who is to become his fourth consort.

After the Moslem ceremony at Montazah palace the royal couple will travel to Inchass, magnificent country mansion between Cairo and Alexandria, for the first week.

Later the portly monarch will take his bride—whom he met by chance two years ago in a Cairo jewelry shop—to Mersa Matruh, Egypt's fashionable western desert. There, according to legend, Cleopatra used to go swimming.

And in the summer, when the hot dry winds blow across Egypt, they will escape together to the cool Mediterranean, cruising in the white-and-gold royal yacht Mahrouss. They plan to drop anchor off the Italian isle of Capri.

The commoner's daughter chosen as queen will be married to the king by proxy. An ancient Moslem custom decrees she will wait in another room while the religious ceremony is performed between Farouk and her "stand-in," Mohammed Aly Sadek her uncle and Egyptian minister to Libya.

Costly presents have been pouring in for days but many more are still to come.

Foreign and non-Moslem consuls-general have been sent out to each other. The Italian consul-general sent royal couple a shiny $10,000 Italian racing car, the Jewish community presented them with a rich gold plate and vases, and mother-of-pearl with an inlaid inscription in Persian verse.

It contains 31 ancient gold coins and a string of pure amber beads. More than $173,000 will be distributed to the poor along with free meals and candies in a general three - day celebration throughout the country.

Famed Regiment Goes Active Again For Europe Force

42 Reserve Units Make up New Brigade

Two companies of the reserve battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will be mobilized for active service in Eastern Area Command, Canadian Army, Kingston announced this morning.

One company will be recruited immediately with the second to follow upon its organization.

Recruiting will start on Monday, it was announced.

An officer will be present at all company points of the regiment throughout the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward starting at noon today, to take names.

Lieut. Col. Max Porritt, M.C., commanding officer of the regiment, Major Bill Graydon, second-in-command and training officer Lieut. Angus Duffy, were in Kingston today completing arrangements for the mobilization of the company.

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—A manpower drive to recruit a new army brigade group primarily for Europe will be launched Monday.

It will rely heavily on the militia and permanent force reserve army units from coast to coast.

In an unprecedented move, the government last night asked 42 reserve units to shoulder the major responsibility for recruiting the 5,500 to 6,500 men needed for the brigade group itself.

Then they or other reserve units will be asked to raise nearly as many more as reinforcements.

This will mean in effect partial mobilization of the reserve forces.

The formation will be called the 27 brigade group and will muster at Valcartier, Que. It will be unique in that it will be made up of units quite unlike in infantry, artillery, armored, engineer and other arms raised by regiments.

The three infantry battalions, for instance, will each be made up of five companies. Each company will be recruited by a separate militia regiment.

Each company will wear the badges and insignia of the reserve regiment which raised it. The same system will be followed in the battalion of the Royal Canadian Dragoons but in time will be made up of troops from three reserve regiments.

A reoiacement group will be established at Valcartier to rotate men and units with the brigade overseas. Mr. Claxton said the Canadian Army will also enlist reserve force units into this system so they would receive some training.

May Start New Industry
Prestressed Concrete Beams Given Tests Here by Queen's Professor

Prestressed concrete beams designed to do the work of structural steel may soon be manufactured in Bellefville on a commercial scale.

During the past twelve months on a site in Coleman Flats in the north end of the city the Fred Rigle Company Ltd. has been experimenting in the manufacture of the beams. Progressive preliminary tests have been made and the results of a final test made this week will determine whether full scale production will be undertaken. If so, Bellefville will be the first city in Canada to make the beams on a commercial scale.

Although new in Canada, prestressed concrete beams are not a new venture in the construction field. As a substitute for steel they have been used for several decades in Europe, especially in Germany, where they have proven successful in many types of construction. Also in England prestressed concrete is being used in many forms ranging from supporting beams to fence posts.

Steel Shortage Paved Way

It was a shortage of steel which paved the way for the prestressed concrete beams in Europe. Beams over 200 feet in length have been used to facilitate construction. Another use is for bridges.

Strength of the prestressed concrete beams is dependent on the tensile strength of high grade wires. In fact, without the wire the beams would not serve the purpose.

Many strands of the highest grade wire are stretched with great tensile strength. Forms used to make the beams and are buried with a special waterproof cement. The tensile strength of the wire enables the concrete beams to bear heavy strain.

Just how much stress the beams will stand before failing was proven Friday in tests by Professor D. Lash of Queen's University.

A twelve inch beam 36 feet in length, supported at the ends, was filled high with iron bars. Sensitive instruments measured the stress and also the deflection of the beam. Eight tons of iron were piled on before the concrete cracked. Then the wire in the beam did not break. Under the eight-ton weight the beam had sagged 12 inches in the centre before the break came.

Regains Original Form

Previously the same beam had been tested with five tons weight. Then the deflection was five and a half inches—and the beam returned to its original straight line after the weight was removed.

Hon. Boldt, German D.P., who was six and a half years in concentration camp through being a non-sympathizer with the Nazi movement during the last war, supplied the mechanical "know-how" in the preliminary work for Mr. Rigle. Hans came to Canada in 1948. He had worked for many years in Germany where prestressed concrete beams were manufactured.

If Mr. Rigle decides to go ahead with the manufacture of the beams on a commercial scale a building 450 by 50 feet will be constructed to allow for year round production.

Belleville Fishermen Hit the Jackpot

This business or fishing for trout at the opening of the season still boils down to knowing where to get them. After an opening weekend when most anglers scored a great big zero for their efforts, three men walked into the Ontario Intelligencer Thursday afternoon with the remains of as nice a mess of trout as anyone would want to see.

The three, all city men, were A. J. Maguire, Charlie Shannon and John Kot (pictured above). They had about 25 species in a northern lake on two mornings of this week. The take-home bag was 13, because the boys ate a dozen while they were on the trip. The biggest fish they brought back tipped the scales at more than three pounds before he was gutted.

The Belleville fishermen got their beauties on a Williams wobbler, a June bug and worm, and just plain worms. They drifted close to shore with the wind-o make their catch.

The Belleville men attribute their success to two things that have happened in the past few years. In the first place, more strict enforcement of game laws has almost eliminated the setting of night lines. And secondly, winter fishing has been prohibited. "That's why we're getting the fish now," they say.

Hasty Pees Will Take Part In Field Schemes

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will be well occupied this weekend with two separated schemes.

Headed by Capt. Ken Ross, a motor transport convoy will leave early Sunday morning en route to Crystal Beach for the day. Including five officers and 30 enlisted men, they plan to cook their own meals.

Three Bren gun teams, one each from Trenton, Bancroft and Picton headed by Major J. Johnson of Headquarters Company are entered in the annual Bren gun competition being held in Barrisfield.

Col. J. M. Porritt M.C., E.D., went to Kingston this morning accompanied by Major "Bill" Graydon to attend a meeting of commanding officers. It is expected that they will receive information concerning the mobilization of the unit.

Cent. Ontario Bowling League Narrows Down

With but four weeks to go, the Central Ontario Bowling League has narrowed down to a two-team race between Trenton Guay's who are in first place, and the local Bowl-O-Drome. Following these two are Trenton B-O-D, Napanee, Belleville Recreation, Brighton and Picton.

Trenton B-O-D journeyed to Napanee last night with the local Bowl-O-Drome playing host to Picton and the Recreation travelling to Trenton Guay's. Brighton remains idle this week.

Jim McKenzie (24 games) of the local Recreation leads the pack for high average with 230. It is doubtful, however, if he can bowl a sufficient number of games to qualify for the prize money. "Letty" Reid (Trenton B-O-D) 233, Horace Crombaw (Trenton Guay's) 232, Ted Greenfield (Belleville B-O-D) 231, and Joe Legault (Recreation) 231 are battling it out for the pay-off positions.

Belleville B-O-D hold high team single and triple with 1400 and 3983 respectively. From the same team come Cec Hardwick, 866 and Pat Drumm, 385 to garner individual triple and single.

DIFFERENCE

27th brigade group primarily for Europe.)

Battalion—the infantry unit which is the real fighting unit of any army, it has about 900 men and is commanded by a lieutenant-colonel. It is broken down into five companies, each split into platoons which are further split into sections.

Regiment—in the infantry, a regiment is the parent unit which recruits battalions to fight—thus the 1st Battalion of the Royal Edmonton Regiment, Armored and artillery units bear the same regiment into action.

Other units—armor, artillery, engineers, signals, each has its own designations. Thus a tank regiment is broken down into squadrons, squadrons into troops. Artillery regiments are broken down into batteries and batteries into troops.

Unless Canada has to go to war, you don't have to worry about corps or armies. But a corps includes two or more divisions and an army, in the field, includes two or more corps.

The army also uses the term corps to designate an arm of the service—such as infantry or armored corps.

And now last tip. Canada's new brigade group will be called the 27th. That doesn't mean there are only 26 brigades in the regular army. It is connected, however, with the number of brigades in the army as a whole, that is both regular and reserve.

The regular army is a full-time affair. The reserve army units muster normally two nights a week.

Stories of Famous Hymns

By HORACE B. POWELL

"We Would See Jesus"

We would see Jesus: For the shadows lengthen
Across this little landscape of our life;
We would see Jesus, our weak faith to strengthen
For the last weariness, the final strife.

We would see Jesus, the great rock foundation
Whereon our feet were set with sovereign grace;
Nor life, nor death, with all their agitation,
Can thence remove us, if we see His face.

We would see Jesus; Other lights are paling
Which for long years we have rejoiced to see;
The blessings of our pilgrimage are failing;
We would not mourn them, for we go to Thee.

We would see Jesus: This is all we're needing;
Strength, joy, and willingness come with the sight;
We would see Jesus, dying, risen, pleading;
Then welcome day, and farewell mortal night.

Many of the world's most precious and enduring consecration hymns have been written by women and, in all the list, there is none more popular than this gem of Anna Bartlett Warner's. It was inspired by one of Jesus' experiences during the week that preceded His crucifixion.

The Saviour, according to the biblical account of the incident, had come to Jerusalem where the Feast of the Passover was being celebrated. The city was crowded with pilgrims who had come to worship. St. John tells the story. He says:

"And there were certain Greeks among them that came to worship at the feast: The same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and asked him, saying: 'Sir we would see Jesus.' Philip cometh and telleth Andrew; and Andrew and Philip tell Jesus. And Jesus answered them, saying, 'The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified'."

Miss Warner used the petition of the Gentile pilgrims as a theme for her hymn. It was written in 1851 and was given to the public seven years later in a volume of sacred songs which appeared under the title, "Hymns of the Church Militant." In 1869, a second volume "Wayfaring Hymns" was published.

There is another hymn for which Miss Warner will always be known; she wrote it one day after receiving a letter from a minister-friend who told how, though he was physically weary at the end of a trying day, he was spiritually happy in Christian service. She gave it the title, "The Song of a Tired Servant." Its opening stanza is familiar to all Christians:

"One more day's work for Jesus,
One less of life for me!
But heaven is nearer,
And Christ is dearer
Than yesterday to me;
His love and light
Fill all my soul tonight."

SWISS NEUTRALITY

St. Gallen Switzerland.—(Special to the Ontario Intelligencer)—If one is interested in vivid contrasts, he would do well to advised to study a rare example found in Switzerland, known as Swiss commercial and foreign policy. Foreign trade is the lifeblood of Switzerland, and without it they would be an impoverished race. Not only that, but they have to import almost all their raw materials, which makes them doubly independent on favorable trade relations with other countries. What deficit in trade they may have is made up by the thousands of tourists who visit the country every year, prepared to spend freely.

A complete about-face is evident in political affairs, and the first question it raises is "Why?" As to the answer, many of the Swiss are confused themselves and usually say that is the way they feel. It was their outlook on life, and they felt happy that way. This was the general answer that I received, but there are some who say that whatever the reason might be, neutrality has been its best days and should be replaced.

They compare Switzerland with an ostrich which sticks her head in the sand, and because she refuses to see others, believes that others cannot see her. They credit the fact that Switzerland has been able to avoid two wars to an Allied victory, and that, should a third war come, Switzerland would have to do her part. There are signs that this point of view is spreading, but as yet it is strictly in the minority.

Originated 1674

The actual origin of Swiss neutrality began in the year 1674 when the federal government decided to remain neutral in a war being waged at the time. Up until then the Confederation had been slowly expanding, taking on new cantons, and was always ready to carry on this expansion, until decisively defeated in one attempt. From that time on they declared that they would take no part in any war. This policy proved so successful that the feeling of neutrality gradually took hold of the Swiss people until the names Switzerland and neutrality were synonymous.

There were certainly no lack of attempts to draw them into an alliance, and there were always Swiss who were more than ready to conclude an agreement, but always the final answer was no. Today many Swiss look back on this with a great deal of pride.

This feeling of neutrality was given a rude shock in 1914 when chiefly Instructors. This every man is a soldier and can be called at any time. In case of need the while Swiss army of 500,000 men can be mobilized in 24 hours. The investigation has proved that the Swiss feel they might be called upon to defend their liberty, for the military budget has been raised considerably and recently the army has been shopping around for at least 500 tanks.

However, they still refuse to have anything to do with the North Atlantic Pact, for they have little faith in armed alliances of any type. They cannot seem to understand the policy of collective security, but suggest that if Western Europe is attacked, they will wait to see what happens. Needless to say, most Canadians would find this attitude difficult to understand, but one must be content with knowing that the Swiss are extremely thankful that the Western powers have won out in the last two wars.

THE UNIVERSITIES NEED HELP

The plight of Canadian universities is becoming more serious. If we first concede that the value of educational institutions on higher levels is almost immeasurable in the growth of a nation, the monetary box that most universities peg in today is near tragic in its extent.

The University of Toronto is a case in point. Before the war, a university education was something attained by only a very few. The college campus was regarded by many as the playground of the rich, and indeed, in many cases it was. There were few helps offered for students who possessed the talent but not the money necessary for university education.

During the war, that attitude changed as people realized that from the universities come the technicians, the experts-to-be — men and women who contribute a great deal to a country's arts and sciences in peace or wartime. After the war, the colleges were bloated by service men who soon realized that they were ill-equipped to live their lives as an expanding nation. If they did not have at least a bachelor of Arts degree. Many of them went back to high school, and in highly concentrated doses, obtained their junior matriculation so they could go on to higher educational levels.

Almost without exception, the service men were excellent students, and their maturity changed the campus in many cases from a playground to a place of hard work. Junior high schools faced the problem in a greater presence being attached to a university education.

Despite the fact that they deal in commodities that are not normally considered salable in the business world, the universities of Canada have to run the same as any other business institution. They are facing rising costs at the same as any other enterprise, and must turn to every field they can to raise money.

The University of Toronto is a case in point. The officials of the university have been forced to raise tuition fees because endowments and contributions from private and corporation sources cannot possibly carry the load. The university cannot continue to run at the same extravagance.

If conditions ever get to the stage where students are forced to pay full value for their education, the system will be a step backward in the history of wealthy rank, and thus not fair. Free it is not good business sense to exempt students from the increases, because the service is being supplied for them. The solution of the problem, then, appears to lie in only one direction — the federal field.

The universities of Canada make too big a contribution to the integrity and welfare of this nation to have their activities limited by lack of money.

THE ROYAL COMMISSION ON EDUCATION

A bound copy of the Royal Commission on Education, headed by Mr. Justice Hope, which created such a storm when it was released to the press and government some years ago, has come into the inner confines of this office. On cursory examination, it appears to be an exhaustive work, and is a credit in its breadth, to the men who laboured over it.

It would take weeks, months, even years, to properly absorb all the facts, figures and arguments set out by the 17 pages of the book. It is divided into thirty chapters, starting with all manner of things relative to education, and minority reports, appendices and memoranda submitted to the commission by interested bodies. The controversy surrounding Separate Schools is given, from the early days in Upper Canada until the present time. Aside from its value as it ties in with the report of the commission, the history alone is so set straight many false impressions gained by much of the public over the years that the question has been debated.

It is interesting to note that the commission has not forgotten, in its survey, people who appeared before it to present their own feelings or the beliefs of various organizations. Four hundred and seventy-five people were given opportunities to present cases, ten of them appearing on private individual behalf. Two hundred and seventy-eight invitations were extended to the commission, some from organizations directly concerned with education, some not. Two hundred and forty-eight briefs were submitted and recorded.

The scope of the work done by the Hope commission in part indicated by the time they spent on their inquiry into the state of education in Ontario. The investigators were commissioned to do the job in March, 1945, and did not report their findings until more than five years had elapsed. They have been criticized for not releasing their findings as they went along, but it is doubtful if a true perspective could have been obtained by the public if that had been the case. Even so, it is doubtful if the public will get that perspective now, for the report is one that is long, and will be, hard to interpret in its entirety.

The Hope report does not make the type of book that might wish to curl up with in front of a log fire. It is not meant to be that. Time will show that it will have its place in the records and recommendations of this province as it moves towards a better system of education.

NOTHING TO DO

They tell me who know, and I'm sure it is true,
It is tough to wake up and have nothing to do.
Tough rest by the weary is after a day
Of worries of rest when he's no more required.

The young may look forward to duty and care,
When that time arrives I'll do nothing but play.
I'll watch clock, may ring, as an accusings before,
I'll go back to sleep for

But that "hour or two more"
when the slumber is free
Man finds quite the reason as he thought it would be.
When at last he retires and his labors are over,
He'd like to wake up to be busy once more.

"Stay busy," they say, "and don't ever retire!
The hardest of seats is a chair by the fire."
Believe us. We've learned, since they said: 'You are through,'
It's tough to wake up and have

FOOTPRINTS

The word "miracle" in Chinese is expressed by two characters which mean "the footsteps of God." When a miracle has occurred, that means that God was present, and the miracle is the evidence of that divine presence—the print of His feet in the circumstances which make up our lives.

There are many people in the world who disbelieve in miracles because miracles are so common. The world has been miraculously fashioned. The order of nature, the rotation of the seasons, the flowering of the field, the appearing of the starry host—all these show forth a divine power which we take as a matter of course.

Just ponder the fact that every human being is physically the result of the coming together of two cells no minute to be seen by the naked eye and each of these cells contains all of the hereditary characteristics of all the ancestors who have gone before. No, you and I, are not the wonders of a natural law. But what is a natural law? Natural law is only the pattern of God's activities in the physical world.

When something happens which is beyond your power to account for, begin looking closely at the circumstances, and you will see, as the Chinese say, the footprints of God.

Holland Planning to Increase Jobs in New Factories

The Hague, (Reuters)—Establishment of nearly 100 industries all over the country is a feature of The Netherlands' industrialization plan, it was disclosed to-day. To find work for an additional 250,000 persons by the end of 1952.

The plan to make Holland more industrial than Agricultural has been made necessary by the rapid increase in population and by the imperative need to establish a more favorable trade balance.

It is estimated that jobs must be found in new and expanding industries for 125,000 new workers resulting from the rapid increase in population, and another 125,000 jobs made available by improved factory efficiency, greater labor productivity, and a resultant reduction in staff.

The main problem is the establishment of new industries not only because of the difficulty of obtaining capital investment but also because of the many difficulties arising from the selection of localities and sites.

In a few large towns which were already partly industrialized, land is at a premium, a simple matter to build new factories and employ new workers. The housing problem could in most cases be solved by building new apartments of the government character or instituting good transport services to and from well-established residential areas.

An example of how the industrialization problem is being tackled comes from the progressive town of 's-Hertogenbosch. A large area on the outskirts of the town has been turned into a model industrial centre where well-known Dutch and foreign concerns are being encouraged to erect new factories.

Every facility is provided. New factories already at work there are making shoes, liqueurs, foodstuffs, typewriters and paper.

Another method introducing new industries is the planning one of taking the factories to areas where unemployment is greatest. There is particularly the case in regions where traditional industries such as peat-cutting have almost died out, or where the sources of subsistence have not been keeping with the population. Some 500 workers in the Zaan district, Zaanstreekgemeenten, who were peat-cutters or farmhands three years ago, now are skilled workers in the new large concern in their own village.

The new factories, whether large or small, provide the best possible working conditions. Special attention is also being paid to planting trees, both inside and outside the industry.

Marshall aid is being freely used for these purposes.

Newton's Jet Pays Off

It was Sir Isaac Newton, the great English mathematician who gested in 1680, that a carriage might be propelled by the power of steam from a steam jet, and he relates Arvo News.

Toward the end of the last century the British Admiralty experimented with jet propelled ships. During that period a number of inventors put forward schemes for jet propulsion, but a solution to the problem was not forthcoming until a British engineer, Frank Whittle, not also an engineer and brilliant mathematician, set his first patent as long ago as 1930 on jet propulsion for aircraft.

Passed Tests

This was Air Commodore Sir Frank Whittle who actually produced the first successful jet engine unit for aircraft in 1936. The Whittle engine passed its tests successfully in 1937, its importance was quickly recognized by the British air ministry, and development work was put on jet propelled aircraft in 1939, the first being built in the Gloster Jets Limited, a company formed for the purpose, in a secret factory somewhere in England.

In Great Britain design and development facilities were given to the experiments of a great number of test flights by pilots of the Royal Air Force, and in 1941 high as well as normal altitudes. The development of the Whittle engine was undertaken by various firms, including the B.T.H. Company, and by the Rover company, while work on axial compressors was carried out by the Metropolitan Vickers.

It was in 1936 that the world famous Rolls-Royce Company first took an interest in jet propulsion and the Whittle engine. By 1939 the first design projects were made. In 1940 test work began to be carried out on various components; the great experience of Rolls-Royce in engineering facilities for manufacture at the Rolls-Royce plant in Derby were put to good use in the making of delicate type engines, and the machining of parts as compressor blades, casings and wheelcase, and the manufacture of turbine blades and fuel pumps were undertaken.

Test Plant

In June, 1941, a test plant was set up at Rolls-Royce, Derby, for development work on compressors, combustion, run-up and airbox capable of transmitting 2,000 h.p. and running up the speeds of 17,000 r.p.m. This particular plant has been in operation ever since that date. At this time was the only test plant in the world capable of handling the compressors for the Whittle engine. Meanwhile, the same time development was carried out on combustion chambers, with, at the end of 1941, under instructions from the air ministry, the Rolls-Royce company undertook the manufacture of the simple gas turbine unit of the Whittle type in conjunction with Power Jets Limited. The Rolls-Royce plant for the construction of the turbine blades due to limitations of temperature and stress in the material, and it was made that Rolls-Royce was asked to take up the development and manufacture of the Whittle unit.

Only a few senior Royal Air Force officials knew of Sandy's early experiments and the first flight of this high-wing monoplane took place in May, 1941. Information was immediately passed on to military air attaché authorities in U.S.A., and General Arnold was so impressed that he asked for a complete Whittle engine as well as the plans of the engine. These were given, the job of redesigning a suitable machine. Twelve months later the first American jet propelled aircraft made its maiden flight in October, 1942.

Derwent Engine

The Derwent, now used in the Arvo Canada jellimer, was the first British jet engine to go into service with the Royal Air Force. The first operational duties of the Derwent engine were engaged to combat the grave menace of the flying bomb in England in 1944. Rolls-Royce began design work on the Derwent in 1943.

Following Sandy Meadow companies such as our own associated Armstrong Siddeley, began their own jet engine research and the propulsion based on extensive gas turbine experience including the Armstrong Siddeley Sapphire, one of the most powerful turbo jets in the world, the well tested single centrifugal flow Viscount prop and the largest turboprop in current operation in the United Kingdom, the Python.

The Curtis Wright Aircraft Corporation of New Jersey recently acquired rights to build these engines for the United States. In addition there will be a complete exchange of research and development information which will be very valuable to the United States gas turbine industry.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE EVISCERATION OF TONY THE WIRISH TERROR

The secretary of a medical research association recently sent me a letter that has given me hours of unhappiness—waking hours—and some bad dreams besides. The letter follows:

Dear Doctor Brady:-

You are being quoted in anti - vivisectionist correspondence as having said in a letter addressed to (a metropolitan newspaper) some time last year that "experimenting on dogs had no more to do with curing those babies than the man in the moon."

We doubt that you made such a statement and believe that you have been quoted out of context. Could you verify this statement for us?

Sincerely yours,

(Name withheld by request.)

Last year is an indefinite time. I think I'd rather go to jail for thirty days than go through one thing I wrote for publication in newspapers last year. So, after a few days dip here and there into the 1950 copy file I'pass-ified evidence that my memory is forthcoming let us proceed on the assumption that I was quoted out of context.

In my Hyde phase, I admit I dislike: (1) dogs that jump up and put their muddy paws on one's clothing, (3) dogs that smell growl at any one they don't like or recognize, (3) dogs that bark and howl at everything and nothing at all hours of the night, and (4) dogs that show off by taking their scrap of rubber rug and knitting the kitten becomes tired of it and lifts a menacing paw at the dumb animal. But I am a changed personality—well, look at that Hyde portrait right over my desk. That's Tony—the wirish terror. If my voice gets a little husky when I speak of Tony, it's only that I can make in conscience is yes—if equally suitable and less precious material were not at hand.

This does not mean that my dog is more precious than yours. It means rather that you and I naturally want to keep our own dogs and let the scientific workers choose their material from the stray dogs not claimed by bona fide owners.

However I may have said or meant to say in an item quoted in this anti-vivisectionist correspondence, I say now that the life-saving operation has been devised in the only possible way—by trying it on the dog first—and so-called "shiva babies" given a fair chance to live happily thirty forty or fifty years when before coming to bat for life was a matter of months.

It seems to me that any one who would save the life of a dog when sacrifice of the dog might save the life of a child is not the kind of human being that contributes to child welfare. Judging by the correspondence with which I have been bombarded these many months, I consider the typical anti-vivisectionist a nasty bit of work.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Edited by Eleanor Sclanders

About a year ago in an article in the ——— It was stated that Dr. William Brady has been dead for almost three months. Now come his articles and answers are often quite to the person, present tense. (Eleanor S.)

Answer—You see, it's like this. I'm trying to get on with writing twenty years in the scientific sense. But they can't dispose of the remains until I turn up now and leave 'em there.

Restless Legs

Husband, active during day, cannot rest at night—his legs never still, constantly moving, changing constantly changing their position. (Mrs. M. G.)

Answer—If your husband can get some nitroglycerin tablets (Nitrostat) from his physician he may have to give him a prescription for them—and take one dose before he goes to bed or more in the night if necessary, he may get relief. Anyway this can do him no harm to try.

Wry Neck

Daughter, aged 6 months, born with wry neck. Doctor said she must be operated on. Isn't there some other way? (Mrs. M.)

Answer—No. Sooner the operation is done the better the result will be.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ROADS

All roads are interesting. Modern craze for speed has taken the curve and beauty out of many a road. With our high powered cars this is perhaps a good idea, but when at the motor's pace roads are taken from a road when it is allure to suit man's craving "to get there" in the shortest time.

I have always liked the back roads that led to cross roads, farms, and clustered trees. There is a personality to such roads, a history as well. Some have a turn or hill has suggested a dream. In years gone by the horse and buggy made familiar every nook and fence along the way. We had time in which to see and enjoy all in our mind. Little surprises peeped up that broke in the shape of flowers and tufted grass and small pools glistened in the sunlight.

Winding roads are always interesting because you never know what you will find around the bend. Straight roads are good, but they are monotonous. Following a strange road is like being handed a book to read about which you have never heard. We begin at once to compare the strange road with those roads that have given us joy, or which have led us to many an event that we have treasured in our memory.

I have travelled out of many a town into a country that revealed its wonders to me, and I have entered towns from an interesting drive that have contrasted the beauty of the road with itself, and both seemed to melt their individuality into a new one. always thought that a beautiful, well-paved road leading into a town was as fine as a good boat. Many is the time that a good road is greeted by a good one when it leads to a town.

Roads are like the arteries and veins that give life and circulation to the blood in one's body. No country could be prosperous without its roads. They are a nation's pride, and make up an investment that would be difficult to appraise. Roads are intimately connected with the life of every individual, and are as virile as immortalized them. Least travelled roads fascinate most.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The house sparrow, the starling, the native birds occur. In eastern and the common pigeon—and Europe—are about the only birds you will see down town in cities. Rarely do you see native birds nesting in the ornamental shrubbery of a pumping station, a chipping sparrow in the spirea in front of a cenotaph or a robin on a downtown lawn areas that have parks or large lawns. In Montreal, for years past, the starling, the raven or duck hawk as it is more commonly called, has nested on the native plateau of the Royal Bank Building. In Toronto, the smaller grey woodpecker, the downy, lives of the Upper Canada College and has been known to take up residence in any nesting box that these are so rare as to warrant news items in the newspapers.

The imported birds, sparrow, starling and pigeon normally build around houses. But so does the native phoebe, which scorns cities, preferring the open fields, perhaps because there are no flies of any account to feed on.

Ornithologists the world over are agreed that the introduction of foreign species of birds is a mistake. Australia has had to import insectivorous birds to keep down the ravages of insects that have increased enormously since the native birds were driven out by the imported species.

The starling and the sparrow are not insectivorous. They are grain eaters. They are also destructive of the nests and eggs of native birds. Starlings will drive away woodpeckers, bluebirds and other native species from their nesting holes. Sparrows will kill young birds in the nests of native species.

One of the first things a newcomer to Canada notices is the comments upon its birds around the city. Most of the comments upon pigeons are chimney enough. It is true that pigeons foul buildings

Queen Mary-Prince Charles Schools Present Fine Concert

Two pretty blonde girls in mauve and peach colored gowns, were the gracious receptionists, who welcomed the proud parents, relatives and friends who more than filled the Prince Charles auditorium on Thursday and Friday evenings of this week to view the "Pupils' Concert", presented by the Queen Mary-Prince Charles Home and School Association.

What parents could fail to beam with pride as their offspring in the kindergarten class presented, so engagingly, the story of the little red hen! Eighteen youngsters all scrubbed and shining, and looking angelic in their cute party dresses and neat little suits, performed admirably to win a hearts of all. Another set of cute, little youngsters did likewise as they appeared in a most enjoyable little folk-dance featuring Robin Redbreast.

Rhythm Bands

A rhythm band, composed of little boys all in red bow ties, most competently directed by a smart little girl, while later on, a grade three and four rhythm band of girls in white dresses, red capes and pill boxes displayed by their technique that the advanced classes could do. These also sang an attractive little song about the British children.

A playlet, "The Gingerbread Boy" with Sherrit Bogart as reader, and a large cast of players, admirably costumed through the efforts of Mrs. Ellis Bogart and Mrs. R. Foote, proceeded without a hitch, through the capering of the realistic Gingerbread Boy from the oven, finally to the delectation of the little old lady. A large cast supported the main players with excellent singing.

"Spring Awakening", by the pupils of grades one and two was an ambitious and fine piece of work, with singing, whistling, and colorful costumes produced by Mrs. Blakely's grade eight handicraft class. Twelve boys appeared as bluebirds, black and yellow orioles, and red and brown robins, while girls appeared from the brown earth as bright pretty springtime flowers, white, yellow and violet with fresh green stems. A great deal of work must have gone into the costuming and training of this number.

Amusing Skit

"The Obstructive Hat", depicted by a lad in a Stetson, and was an amusing little skit by grades four and five with clever acting on the part of the young thespians; while the "Gun and Muff Drill", performed by boys and girls of grades four and five, was done with precision and finesse to music supplied on the piano by a fellow pupil, Ronald McBride.

In "Tom Sawyer Paints the Fence", portrayed by grade eight boys, it was most interesting to see the enjoyment the boys displayed in their parts and the complete naturalness in their approach. This play was certainly well directed and executed to create a feeling of reality on the stage.

Carolyn and Bobby Franklin, as an old married couple, delighted everyone with their professional performances of the amusing dialogue; and the play, "Parents on Parade", by grade eight pupils, with its urge for parents, and especially fathers, to attend the Home and School Association, was apt and amusing presentation, while the old time square dance, executed by grade eighters, made the audience feel they would like to be on the stage with them, joining in the fun.

Princess Laughter

"The Hole in the Sock," an ambitious and interesting play by grade six, showed how David Brown, as the 'King' and Ronald Post, as his chamberlain, decided to hold a darning contest to find a princess to make a suitable queen. Numerous lords and ladies appeared to watch while the various princesses, the 'Stuck Up', the 'Can't Sit Still', the 'Can't Shut Up', the 'I don't Want To', they'Too Lazy' and the 'Don't Know 'Sh Nest' tried the contest, until Princess Laughter was chosen Queen and the whole assembly ended in a grand ball of celebration. The costumes for this play were excellent, and grade six can be proud of a job well done.

This show, prepared in three weeks, was a 'Pupils' concert, staged by 300 pupils during each evening, and without the presence of the teachers being evident. Great credit goes to Col. J. M. Cousins, the director, and to all the teachers who have worked exceedingly hard during the training period to be able to produce such a smoothly effortless performance. The parents also helped with 20 mothers in attendance each night to assist with costuming and make-up and entertaining the players between acts. Another relay of 20 parents on the second night of the show to do the same job. Good Team Work

This project was truly one of team work between the pupils and the school and great satisfaction is felt over its splendid achievement and success, both financially and as a source of interest for the parents and the children.

Beside the various plays presented, tap dances by Dorothy Randle and Marion Thorn, the square dance, and the corset solo by J. Phillips added delightful color to an exceptionally fine program.

SISTERS ALL

DREAM HOUSE?

You and a hundred others may fall for that dear little ranch house in the woodsies the edge of town.* But before your husband begins to count the family heads, just make sure you want to live there. Magazine cover houses in technicolor can look like a little bit of heaven, yet turn out to be far, far from that when you actually set up housekeeping in them . . . Real estate agents will advise you on the usual things to look for before buying a house . . . those items like the amount of taxes, nearness to schools, strength of construction and the like.

After you've lived in a dream house for a year or so, you will find that there are not at all the important questions to be asked when considering the purchase or a little suburban home.

Main thing in buying a country home is your neighbor. Whether he owns a Buick convertible and keeps his property well fenced is rather here nor there. The question is, does he own a big, strong tractor to pull you out of the mud in your long lane and push you out when the snow drifts are deep? Does he have a power lawn mower, and is he anxious to lend it?

Has the neighbor a daughter who is a reliable baby sitter? Has he a big garden and chickens to keep your cost of living down? Has he a television set which you can nip over and watch when any international crisis comes up?

The thing that counts most of all when you live in the country is whether you have a good neighbor, one who will help you out of many a dark hole, many a time.

MacArthur's Clothes

The reporters certainly slipped up in describing the presence of General MacArthur in Congress when they neglected to describe his dress. For people who are used to seeing photos of the General wearing seven or eight rows of U.S. and foreign decorations, he appeared shockingly plain in his battledress jacket divested of all ribbons or medals. Only badge MacArthur wore was the 5-Star circlet of rank on each shoulder.

Currie Said It

Scanning a biography of Sir Arthur Currie, it is quite startling to read that as far back as January 1931, Currie said: "A few are beginning to realize that Europe's day as a dominating factor in world affairs is approaching its end. Russia, China and India are all on the move and what will come out of them nobody knows. But the day of Asia, which with Russia makes up one thousand millions of the world's people, is fast approaching. Shall we be able to stop India?"

At the same time, Currie is also quoted as saying: "The Pacific Ocean will become the centre of the world's political activity. Practically all Asia is in turmoil and I consider Russia a part of Asia because she flanks up one more Oriental than otherwise. Whatever else Russia may be doing she is boldly trying a new political experiment. What will come out of it I don't know and neither does anyone else, but Russia is our enemy in fact, in spirit and in ideals. She will not stop until there is a crash."

NEW BOOKS IN THE CHILDREN'S ROOM

PANTHER by R. L. Haig-Brown.

This book is a story but is full of accurate information about the panther of the British Columbia coast. It is a gripping attempt to trace the lives of two particular panthers—Blackstreak and later his son, Ki-yu—of interest to all who like animals.

Red Feather by Marjorie Fischer.

This is a fairy tale. The Fairy Queen wanted a "mortal" to do her dusting and the fairies planned an exchange of two babies that looked exactly alike. There was a little slip-up in the arrangements and even the fairies did not know if they had taken the "mortal" baby or the fairy baby. The story, which has plenty of magic in it, is how Rosemary, one of the babies, finds out if she is "mortal" or fairy. This book is for girls in Grades 5 or 6 and some boys.

South Pole Husky by C. S. Strong.

All have read a great deal about Capt. Scott's unsuccessful attempt to reach the South Pole. A Norwegian group under Amundsen were the first to reach the Pole. This book tells the story of the successful Norwegian expedition. Their success was partly due to their use of husky dogs. The story is full of detail but centers around Biyken — a lead husky dog and Nils Paulson, the boy who trained him.

Tomas and the Red Headed Angel by Marion Garthwaite.

The setting of this story is California in the early days of large Spanish estates which were worked by Indians. The Red Headed Angel or Angelita is the beautiful niece of a cruel Spanish Don. Tomas is a little Indian boy who is devoted to Angelita and helps her elope against her cruel uncle's wishes. It is a good teenage story for girls.

Horton Hatches the Egg by Dr Seuss.

New copies of an old favorite by Dr. Seuss. Horton is a faithful elephant which promises to sit on an egg in a tree for a bird which has ideas about leading a gay life. Horton sits and sits through storm and snow and even while being transported to America to be put in a circus—who ever saw an elephant sitting in a tree on an egg? When the egg hatched—you guessed it—it was a baby elephant with wings.

HOW TO PLANT FLOWERING SHRUBS

Proper planting, pruning and watering of nursery stock is a requisite of success in growing. The ground should be spaded deeply removing all sods and weed roots. Holes should be large enough so that the roots can be spread out without crowding. Soil should be packed firmly around the roots to eliminate air spaces and so that roots are in tight contact with the soil.

PRUNING: Part of the top of the bush or tree must be pruned at the time of planting. This reduces the amount of top which the roots must supply with water while they are getting established.

WATERING: Surface sprinkling should be avoided on newly planted shrubs. It is best to take nozzle off hose and let water run around the plant until the ground is thoroughly soaked to a depth of 12" to 18". The ground should never be allowed to dry out. A mulch of leaves, grass clippings or old straw over the surface of the ground is very beneficial and helps to conserve moisture.

FERTILIZER: After the hole has been dug, put good soil around the roots of the shrub but never any fresh manure, as if this comes in contact with the roots, it is liable to cause decay. The manure is best put over the surface of the ground. Consult the nursery catalogues as to the height of the shrubs you are planting so that the tall shrubs can be placed to the back and the lower growing shrubs to the front. If possible, always arrange the shrubs in groups several of each kind.

DESTROY DICTIONARY

Dearne, England, May 2. (Reuters)—The town council voted last night to destroy a slang dictionary in the local library because it might create a desire for the wrong type to get hold of it. The action was recommended because "use is made of certain old English words which describe certain universal customs."

POOR POSTURE

Calgary — (CP) — About 75 per cent of school children in Calgary walk around in an incorrect posture, said Dr. L. C. Allan, assistant medical health officer. He told the school health committee that if children were allowed to assume an incorrect posture they will be round - shouldered when they grow up.

His Lordship Came Back, Egad, To Win From Villainous Ben

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

"Gerald" the perfect gentleman's gentleman again approached the brink of the grave last night, but a last-minute flash of power on the part of "Ta Ludship" Lord Athol Layton proved a life-saver, umbrella and all for the parasol-toting "Jeeves".

Burly scion of a Tennessee backwoods family, ferocious, bewhiskered Big Ben Morgan, battered the blue-blooded scion of the Layton family all over the ring, used the regal noggin as a battering ram in an effort to dislodge a ring post or two and in general made life very unpleasant for the champion of Singapore, the Malayas, Java, Indonesia and points east.

Gerald, egad, protested volubly time and again. He pounded the mastic floor with his faithful umbrella in a ratatatat tights that matched his facial grimaces and general behavior and, ignoring the voluble protests of both "Ta Ludship and Gerald, proceeded with his villainous monkeyshines and had the regal bloke in a bad way no end of times. In fact every aid on part a few occasions leaped from his portable stool on which he sits near the ringside and dashed to the ring where he pounded the canvas with the handle of his umbrella in a vain effort to draw the attention of the official.

It was a decayed bad evening for His Lordship and Gerald. Even the conventional spot of tea 'tween falls did not restore the gay, debonair aplomb of the tilted Britisher. It only only his quick thinking and ability to take sudden advantage that enabled him to note, or at least Gerald to write another victory on the right side of the Layton ledger, or he would have gone down to ignominious defeat at the hands of the buxwhacking, bull-dosing Tennessee waltzer.

As a matter of fact the waltzing Tennessean did a right neat job on His Lordship in the first scuffle. He whittled down the heir to burgundy estates to his own 305-pound size while rivulets of perspiration ran down the immaculate Gerald's impeccable suit. He pounded, hounded and plucked handfuls of hair, or what appeared to be that, from the handsome noggin of the habitue of Mayfair clubs, rooms, egad, and finally plucked him heavily on his broad shoulders for the fall.

'Ta 'Ten, Sir.

In the second round, the varlet went back at his old tricks, but the blue corpuscles of the towering Layton were rifled, ecod. The huge Britisher, using one of his favorite methods the "chop", a simple little thing done with the side of the hand and used like a baloney slicer, did an effective job on the lumbering hillbilly. He groaned in anglish as the "cutting hands" of the Britisher struck him aft, for'ard, and amidships. He bowled in agony, despite the fact the sound of anguish were muffled by the hirsute adornment that trickles, wispy-like from his chin.

However, he soon regained whatever prestige he had lost and went back to his battering-ram technique, His Ludship was in dire straits and Gerald had the flags out in an effort to call the "blinkin' Nivy". But, and it happened just like that, Lord Athol pulled a quick flip and the first thing Big Ben knew the Britisher was striding east and he was counted out.

The same thing happened in the third fall with Layton recovering from some terrific punishment to again administer the "quick flip" and the scowling "grits and chitlin's" from the barroom hills of Tennessee was defeated.

'Strike the Peak' Yank Referee In British Soccer

(By The Canadian Press)

George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association Friday announced dates of the remaining Alexander Cup games between Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs and Valleyfield Braves.

Fourth game of the series will be played in Toronto Tuesday night, not Monday as originally scheduled. The fifth is slated for Montreal Forum Thursday.

The best-of-seven series is tied 1-1 and if sixth and seventh games are necessary they will be played Saturday, May 12, and Tuesday, May 15.

Dudley said the last two games were being played in Toronto because Montreal ice is not available on the set dates.

An American referee—with few precedents in English soccer —will officiate in London today in an exhibition tilt between Arsenal and Miffwall. He is John Best of Los Angeles, who officiated in the world cup series at Rio De Janeiro last summer.

At-Paris, Russia beat Finland 74-36 in the second round of the international basketball championships Friday night. It was the fifth straight victory for the Russians, favored to win the title.

The New York Boxing Managers Guild Friday signed a one-year television-radio contract with the International Boxing Club calling for the staging of 102 boxing shows from New York, Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis. Terms of the contract were the amount of money to be paid main event fighters on the Wednesday and Friday shows.

Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four Football League will henceforth be operated by a limited company under the name of the Argonaut Football Club.

Beyond the legal aspects, there is no change in the team's association with Argonauts Rowing Club.

The formation of the Limited Company, notice of which is given in the Ontario Gazette, is aimed at operation on a "sounder basis", a club spokesman said.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

by WINIFRED E. WILSON

WHY BAND BIRDS?

Not only has the method of banding birds improved during the last 50 years, but its value has increased. When systematically carried out, much can be learned, not just about an individual, but about migration, moults, behavior, and many other interesting questions.

Banding is the most accurate way of determining routes and dates of migration for the various species. We have proof that a certain tree sparrow has passed through the same piece of land year after year on practically the same date; that robins are apt to fly to the region of their birth.

Trapping stations, run by amateur operators working with the government, are dotted across the continent. Colored bands are now extensively used in addition to the official, numbered aluminum ones. Say a bander has caught a pair of juncos nesting in his kitchen, and while tagging them he has placed a red ring on the right leg of the female and a green one on that of the male. Next spring juncos are again living nearby, and one of them soon walks into his trap. Eagerly he looks at the right leg. Yes, there is the red band. Again and again she is caught. Sure of her identity, little handling is necessary, and he has discovered that one junco at least, likes to return to its old home, and that this individual is fascinated by his trap.

Habits Determined

The number of seasons she comes back is noted, and he discovers something about the age of juncos. Perhaps she is seen by someone half a mile off, and he knows how she goes to forage. He finds a mother which has mated with her own son, two birds that have stayed paired many successive years, and that some species live to be 5, 6 or more.

A captured bird is examined for parasites and to see if it is in any way maimed. Noting plumage, the bander learns the differences for sex and for age, and what changes take place during moulting. Weighing the captives at various seasons shows there is a tendency to grow heavy in winter, and that parents lose weight when feeding their young. Measurements have proved that individuals of a species vary in size. There are differences in behavior too — one bird lies passive in the hand, another fights against this interference. And strangely, a returning bird often guides an acquaintance to a baited trap.

Dwarf Apple Trees Gaining In Popularity

Ottawa—Dwarf apple trees, temperamental and service-demanding as they are, are increasing in popularity among urban and suburban dwellers in eastern Canada and British Columbia, according to D. S. Blair and H. H. Nelson of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa. But it's chiefly fruit the growers are after, although the tiny trees bear fruit soon after planting. It's their ornamental value that makes them popular. They grow no taller than a man can reach, usually about one-quarter the size of the average normal-sized apple tree.

There are a number of methods of dwarfing apple trees, such as severe pruning, but the trees referred to by Messrs. Blair and Nelson are produced on a root stock with inherent dwarfing abilities. So far, the best rootstock for this purpose is called Jaune de Metz, or Malling IX, which produces a small, low-growing bush-tree that produces fruit the second year, as a rule. Because Malling IX is propagated vegetatively, from layers or suckers, or rooted shoots, they take a lot more work than standard seedling rootstocks and, as a result, cost more to grow.

Need Special Care

Dwarf trees need special care. Not only are they slow growing but shallow-rooted, likely to break off or blow out just below the graft union. The brittle stock must be staked for support at the time of planting either with an iron fence post or a substantial wooden post. A wire trellis, or a convenient fence or wall, are also handy supports.

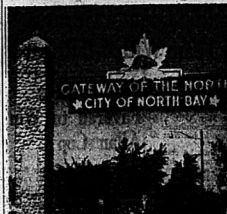
In planting dwarf apple trees care must be taken not to get the graft union below ground or the fruiting part may become established on roots of its own. If this happens, the dwarfing stock will have no influence and the owner will find himself with a full - sized apple tree. Plant them 10 or 12 feet apart with the union slightly above ground level.

Detailed Pruning

Dwarf trees require more detailed pruning. At planting, the tree should be headed back severely to encourage dominant shoots to feather out low down on the tree and form a low-headed tree with a good framework of branches. The scaffold limbs are spaced four inches apart, spirally around the trunk, the first being eight inches above ground level. Once the framework is established, stop pruning except to suppress dominant branches. One thing that can be done with these little trees is train them to various shapes, especially those grown on fences or trellises.

Dwarf trees need fertilizer, preferably a complete one such as 5-5-7, high in nitrogen, best applied in the spring when the buds are bursting. Mulching the trees with grass clippings hay or straw is of great benefit. Insects and diseases can be fought or avoided by using a hand sprayer with materials available at any local store.

"GATEWAY TO THE NORTH"



This welcome sign at the southern entrance to North Bay, Ont., is a familiar one to thousands of American and Canadian tourists who pass through the city on their way to Northern Ontario. The sign, a landmark, is an unofficial dividing line between Northern and Southern Ontario. — (CP Photo).

North Bay Scans Future As Head of Booming Area

By BEN WARD
(North Bay Nugget Reporter)

North Bay, Ont., May 4 (CP) — If anything ever comes of Northern Ontario's sporadic threats of secession from the rest of the province, North Bay will be in a peculiar fix.

Straddling the three - mile strip of land between Lake Nipissing and Trout Lake which links the province's booming northland and its raw materials with the industrial south, North Bay is a little bit of both. It's a Southern Ontario city with a Northern Ontario atmosphere and the combination is quite agreeable.

City officials are trying to parlay the combination of varied transportation facilities, plentiful water and an abundance of hydro-electric power into a profitable industrial future.

On one side of this "gateway of the north" construction equipment hums the birth of a $6,500,000 RCAF fighter base. On the other a $1,000,000 railway diesel shop for the Ontario Northland Railway is starting to take shape.

Three major railway lines cut through the rearr of the city. Long distance trucks and buses are a dime-a-dozen on Main Street. Craig Bit Company's plant works around the clock turning out drilling bits for every part of the world and seven of the Canadian Longyear plant go to every part of Canada on contract drilling surveys.

By the end of the year, 1,500 airmen will move into the RCAF base to provide jet fighter cover for such vital points as the Chalk River atomic pile, Ottawa, Toronto and the Sault locks.

Prosperous Centre

In the midst of the flurry and bustle, the average Baylte is an easy - going, contented fellow — quite unimpressed by it all. Two factors contribute to the feeling that all's well with the world — thanks to high wage rates, the effective purchasing income is $4,872 a family, second highest in Ontario; and 84 per cent or the city's homes are owner - occupied.

On the surface, North Bay citizens look like go-getters. Its Chamber of Commerce boasts the highest per capita membership in Canada (one in 36 belong) and there are 140 active clubs and organizations. But they are homelovers too — the average resident reads more library books in a year than in any other eastern Canada city.

Probably three out of five Baylies have never seen the world-famed Dionne quintuplets who live in a stucco mansion nine miles away. Yet visitors come from all over the world to see the humble farm home where they were born, and perhaps to catch a glimpse of the girls themselves.

North Bay's prosperity may be said to date from the birth of the quints. Before they were born May 28, 1934, this was a small, unpublicized city, depending entirely on railways — then struggling through the depression of the 1930s. There were no secondary industries and an insignificant tourist business.

But the birth of the famous five, Annette, Marie, Yvonne, Cecile and Emilie — hit the world like a bombshell. And hundreds of thousands of visitors hit North Bay with an impact that is still felt.

Tourist Hub

Corbeil, the birthplace, lacked facilities for handling the army of tourists and the chore fell on North Bay. The visitors couldn't look at the quints all the time. So they took to swimming, fishing and holidaying along Lake Nipissing and a gigantic tourist industry was born.

In the summer the city's population of 23,500, including the suburbs, is doubled by tourists — most of them from the United States. This creates one of Ontario's worst traffic congestion problems. But the city finds its compensation in the $5,000,000 this visitors leave annually with business men and a multi - million dollar by - pass highway network the provincial government has started to build.

But the steady year - round economy still depends on the 3 railways. Locomotive shops of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the provincially - owned O. N. R. employ the biggest labor force. Resident train crews of the Canadian National Railways, the C. P. R. and the O. N. R. run a close second.

Transportation, it seems, is North Bay's destiny. The Indians passed by the city's site on the canoe route between Georgian Bay and the Ottawa River. After Samuel De Champlain travelled the route in 1615 it took on added importance in the development of Canada. Each summer hundreds still make the 42-mile trip by canoe over the historic "Champlain trail."

After the canoe came the train. C.P.R. construction crews set up the city's first home in 1881 and a young worker inadvertently gave the community a name. He ordered a keg of nails for the new campsite and, taking his cue from the bay which curves in from the big lake, he wrote: "Send it to North Bay." The name stuck despite later efforts to make a change.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Meet Lou Brissie, one of the thoroughbreds of baseball. Up to the other day Brissie, a big handsome kid with an infinite capacity for grief and cheer, was a pitcher with the Philadelphia Athletics. Now he wears the uniform of the Cleveland Indians.

Better keep an eye on this smiling young giant of the diamond. He's just 24 years of age, stands six feet 4½ in his spikes and tips the scales at 205 pounds. Right at the moment, there are several lot of the experts, and others, pulling for this fine youngster to finish among the top-flight pitchers of the season.

Time was when in the Appenine Mountains Lou believed his major league career was ended, even before it began. He spent seventeen months in a hospital when he was sure of it. There was a moment of panic at Fenway Park when a line drive from the blasting shillelagh of one Ted Williams, almost settled the issue. There were three more or less unsatisfactory seasons with the Athletics, and along comes this chance.

LOU BRISSIE

As Arthur Daley of the New York Times writes, "Brissie was never one to complain even when he lost one heartbreaker after another. Actually he never thought himself unlucky. To him it was lucky to be alive, the most fortunate of young men that he was a big leaguer".

However things look brighter for this plucky youngster. Now with a pennant contender behind him for a change, he may realize a rich promise at last. Last season he won only seven games and lost nineteen for the fading Athletics. But he has something to shoot at, at that. Take Red Ruffing, the fiery sorrel-top of the Yankees mound staff. Red had scored a brilliant won nine, lost 22 for the Red Sox in 1929. Then he was sold to the rampaging Yankees and was soon the wheelhorse of their pitching staff, four times a 20 - game winner.

* * *

The Brissie story is a poignant one. All his life he had dreamed of becoming a big league pitcher and he was edging ever closer to his one consuming ambition when the war detoured him. It almost was the biggest detour of them all.

Corporal Brissie — 20 years old, 6 feet, 4½ inches and 205 pounds — was the squad leader on that dark December day in 1944. He was on patrol with eleven men as German shellfire grew more intense. He never knew what hit him.

A 77-MM shell exploded at his feet, spraying shrapnel behind him and killing all his men. The concussion ripped every button off his clothes, tore the boot off his left foot and virtually shredded his leg. When he regained consciousness he dragged himself to a dry creek bed and blacked out again. Six hours later the medics found him and he seemed almost too far gone to bother administering first aid.

At the battalion first aid station they gave him the first or forty blood transfusions he was to receive. At the evacuation hospital the doctors were in agreement that the left leg was hopeless. Only an amputation would have his life.

"I'd rather die," said the kid grimly, "than have my leg amputated. If I can't play ball, life just isn't worth living".

So they flew him to a big hospital in Naples and handed him over to Maj. Wilbur K. Brubaker, a rabid Cleveland rooter. The major was a medical wizard. Although there was no solid bone in more than four inches of the leg, he wired the torn bone and sewed together the severed muscles. It took twenty-three operations to patch him up.

* * *

Two years later — all of the time spent in hospitals — re reported, still on crutches, to Connie Mack. "Here I am, Mr. Mack." he said bravely.

"Take your time getting well, son," said the old gentleman, giving him a contract, his faith in this determined boy unimpaired.

After a year in Savannah as a 9-game winner, Brissie not only made the Athletics' varsity but pitched against Boston on opening day. He did nobly until a projectile shot from Williams' bat struck the damaged leg and jelled him. Down he went, a terrible fear gnawing inside him. All he could think of were forty transfusions, twenty-three operations and two pain - wracked years going for naught. But he still wouldn't quit.

* * *

In the eighth he faced Williams again, striving manfully to protect a 4-2 lead. The big slugger fouled off two pitches and Brissie came in with the fastest curve of his life to strike him out.

Not all thoroughbreds belong in the mint julep belt. Lou Brissie is another kind of thoroughbred. The best is none too good for him."

BASEBALL PRACTICE

Yanks Edge Into Top Slot With Eddie Lopat's Hurling

Pacing Team With 4-0 Record

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Eddie Lopat, the New York Yankees "hot weather pitcher" is very much for May, with a 4-0 record, the chunky southpaw is well on the way to his first 20-win season.

He used to think he couldn't win until the June sun hit him, professor Casey Stengel gave him a lesson in psychology.

"Casey proved it was all in my mind," said Lopat. "Just a lot of flunk."

Thanks to Lopat's runaway start, the Yanks have edged into first place earlier than usual. Last year it took them until May 16.

He had a 20-inning scoreless string going when St. Louis got to him for a run in the first inning last night.

Jackie Jensen's fine defensive play helped Eddie over the rough spots enroute to an 8-1 win that sent the Yanks into first place. Jensen, one of the new Yank stars who gradually are ousting the oldsters, cut down a man at the plate with a fine throw and made a spectacular catch to turn a liner into a double play.

Kellner His Tribe

Alex Kellner, who has won two of Philadelphia's three victories, continued to show the way to third place with a six-hit job, 3-1. He got in trouble in the ninth when Al Rosen drove in Larry Doby, who doubled. Bob Hooper came in to retire the next three in order.

Chico Carrasquel's double in the 11th inning gave Chicago a 6-5 edge over Washington. Keyhoe had 3 doubles and a single and Priddy a double and a single. Each drove in three runs.

Meanwhile, the Boston Braves threw on their home stand, Wilm Vern Bickford winning his fourth on a five-hitter, the Braves slipped back into first place in the National.

Bob Elliott backed up Bickford's steady work with two home runs. Hank Sauer hit one for the Cubs.

Umpire Jack Conlan warned both clubs after one batter had to duck quickly, and another was hit by a pitched ball.

Sal Maglie threw a one-hitter at Pittsburgh, 5-1, as the New York Giants backed him up with homers by Hank Thompson, Bobby Thomson, Monte Irvin and Spider Jorgensen. There was no suspense to Maglie's one-hitter for the hit was a triple by leadoff man Pete Castiglione in the first.

It was the second one - hitter of the season; Connie Marrero of Washington allowed Philadelphia only one — a homer — April 26.

Pitcher Russ Meyer won his own game with a two - run single in the Phillies' 6-4 decision over the St. Louis Cards. Meyer slowed nine hits including homers by Peanuts Lowrey and Joe Garagiola.

Cincinnati scattered 14 Brooklyn hits for a 5-4 win with some shutout relief work by Frank Smith. The towering righthander came to the relief of Howie Fox in the fifth. Duke Snider hit 9 homer in the first.

The Brooks had a run-in with Umpire Frank Dascoli who tossed Don Newcombe and Dan Bankhead off the bench.

Pickering, Ont., May 3—(CP)—Norma Jean Hottot, 4, had her face and nose badly torn by a dog as she played in front of her home here last night.

Police said the dog—a collie—was so vicious they were unable to remove it to a Humane Society shelter and had to leave it tied to a verandah all night before destroying it today.

Fort Frances Favored to Win Allan Cup

Owen Sound, Ont., May 5—CP —Fort Frances Canadians rate as favorites to win the Allan Cup for western Canada as they prepare to meet Owen Sound Mercurys in the fifth game of the best-of-seven series here tonight.

Still grumbling about having to play all games of the series in Owen Sound, the Canadians figure to take the lead in the final for the first time. They have come from behind twice to leave the series tied 2-2.

Performance of the fast-breaking Canadians in last Wednesday night's game, which they won 4-2, is the chief reason they are favored to take the cup.

They outplayed Owen Sound, a fact that was admitted by coach Jack Markle of Mercurys who said: "They deserved to win enough. They were cleanly outplayed by Fort Frances."

The western team is injury-free while Mercurys have one player sidelined and another two playing under a handicap.

Left winger Buck Forslund was sidelined for the season with a broken wrist. Art Hayward, Mercurys defenceman, ran a garden fork through his right foot Tuesday and right winger Pat McReavy was put out of action Wednesday for a bad case of the flu. Both McReavy and Hayward will play tonight.

Bud Jarvis, coach of Fort Frances, is still peeved at the C. A. H. A. for ordering all games in Owen Sound.

"The C. A. H. A. executive members are a bunch of phonies and the C. A. H. A. itself is nothing but a farce," he said.

The association said Owen Sound is the only place where the series would draw. However, crowds have fallen off after filling the arena for the first two games.

Braves Demand Fourth Game Played in Quebec

Toronto, May 5—(CP)—Valleyfield Braves have demanded that the fourth game of the Alexander Cup final be shifted from Toronto to either Montreal or Quebec.

The demand was made last night by coach Hector (Toe) Blake after dates of remaining games of the best-of-seven series between Toronto St. Michaels Monarchs and Valleyfield were announced in Midland, Ont., by George Lumley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Blake was so burned up by what he described as the "runaround" that he wanted the series rotated to five games. He said his team wouldn't be here if site of the fourth game remained in Toronto.

"We were told that if the first two games in Toronto were split, we would play the next in Montreal," said Blake.

"Now they tell me the fourth game will be here Tuesday regardless of Saturday's outcome. Well, we won't be here—that's all."

He claims his team would draw between 7,000 and 8,000 in Quebec or Montreal, compared to a small crowd of less than 2,000 for last Wednesday night's game in Toronto.

The series is currently tied 1-1. Third game will be at Maple Leaf Gardens tonight.

In Midland, Ont., Dudley announced that the fourth game will be in Toronto Tuesday night, not as Monday as originally scheduled. The fifth is slated for Montreal Forum Thursday. If sixth and seventh games are necessary they will be in Toronto, May 12 and 15. Dudley said Montreal ice is now available for those dates.

Coach of St. Michael's, Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty, wasn't impressed by Blake's demand for a reduction to five game series.

"What's wrong, are those fellows afraid they'll be tired before seven games are finished?" he asked. "The schedule calls for best-of-seven. We'll play best-of-seven and we'll win the trophy."

Barrie Flyers Score Second Win Over Winnipeg in Junior 'A' Finals

By Al [illegible]
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, May 5 (CP)—Barrie Flyers are in a rut. But it's a pleasant one.

The Eastern Junior Hockey champions last night scored their second successive 5-1 victory over Winnipeg Monarchs in the best-of-seven Memorial Cup final.

Tonight the series switches to Brandon for the third game, with the clubs returning here for the fourth contest Monday.

Last night's victory gave Flyers a 2-0 edge in games and boosted the popular opinion of many fans that the classy visitors are will walk through the series in four straight.

However, Coach Happy Emms said after the contest that his club was "playing away above their heads." But it's belief Emms made the statement with tongue in cheek. Nobody little doubt that Barrie is one of the smoothest Junior clubs to appear here for some years.

Jim Morrison, a classy defenceman, also showed he has power on the attack. Leading defence scorer in his own loop, Morrison paced the Flyers' onslaught with a goal and two well set up assists. Leo Labine, Don Emms, Doug Favero and Neal Cheverfills scored the other goals for Barrie.

Barrie goaltender Norm Hoverson again was robbed of a shutout by Monarchs' defenceman John Riley. At the first game, Riley tallied his goal in the third period.

"Top" Gets Three

Jerry Toppazzini, always a scoring threat, was credited with three assists, while Barrie's first-string centre, Smoothie Archie White, set up two goals.

Monarchs, outshot 38-19, again counted until the third frame before turning on the heat. Along with Riley who stood out on defence with Don Johnston, forwards Gerry James, Ronnie Barr and Johnny Novak also looked both ways and were the Regalet best.

Winnipeg held the fast-skating Flyers scoreless in the opening period, but rattled in the second when the visitors pumped home three unanswered goals.

Labine lifted the first at 23 seconds of the middle frame on a nicely-placed shot to the lower right-hand corner past goalie Don Collins. Morrison's screened shot nine minutes later made it 2-0 after a sustained Barrie power play while Riley was off for hooking.

At 12:41, Towers scored Flyers' fourth goal. His shot came behind the Barrie net rebounded into the net off Collins' skate.

Don Emms' third-goal at 3:00 was of the soft variety. He skated into the clear but Collins made little effort to block his shot.

Monarchs started to roll from the five-minute mark on and were finally rewarded at 8:09 when Riley's hard shot beat Howes.

Barrie made it 5-1 at 18:52 when Labine beat a pass through the Monarch defence to Chevrefils who parked unmolested in front of Collins. The high-scoring ace lifted the puck over the defencemen netminder.

Juleps Crowd Provides Color At 'Derby'

Louisville, Ky., May 5 — (AP) The crowd still flocking may prove to be the largest ever to turn out for the Kentucky Derby.

Just how large is a guess, for officials at Churchill Downs don't give out official attendance figures. But past estimates have run to 100,000 or better.

There wasn't a room to be had today. Two of Louisville's principal hotels — the Brown and Kentucky — are strike-tied. But they are filled nevertheless.

Mint Juleps — the traditional drink of the Bluegrass — abounded.

Celebrities here included the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, movie actress Greer Garson and Ann Sheridan.

Kitchener Wins Pony Opener

Fiyl baseman Fred Koenig and catcher Cy Bilko of Hamilton got two hits each. Joe Castel of Hamilton hit a homer in the third.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 5—(CP)—The Kentucky Derby is a one-day madhouse and two minutes of first-class racing at what is otherwise a quaint, antiquated small-time track . . . You go to Louisiana a week in advance and spend more money than you can afford. You stay up too late at night but drag yourself out at dawn to see the workouts. You spend endless hours collecting misinformation and indulging in fruitless speculation (our 1-2-3 selections, for no good reason, are Big Stretch, Battle Morn and Mameluke) . . . On derby day you fight the mob at the track . . . You wander around gawking at the drunks falling into the flower beds and the startling costumes of the orchid-decked feminine spectators and find they're gawking at you, too . . . But, gosh, wouldn't you like to be there today?

Common Complaint

In the spirit of the day, Keeneland's Johnny Clark relays this one: . . . A horse named Uncle Otto was being unsaddled after he had "eaten dust" all the way around the track . . . His groom pause in his talk, looked the nag in the eye and remarked: "Uncle Otto, you sho' has done your

Polaroid Eye Shields

BY JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Selmar Tables)

One of the very handy aids for the sportsmen nowadays is the polaroid eye shield. The longer I own one — or, then, as I have several — the more uses I find for them.

Some years ago, when polaroid first came on the market, I purchased a pair of sun glasses which had the laminated polaroid lenses — layer of polaroid between two layers of glass. The man who sold them to me advised not buying them, strangely enough. Being naturally hardheaded, I bought them anyway.

All I had to do was to wear those laminated things for half an hour and I would develop a splitting headache. I finally gave them to a game warden in Wisconsin who seemed to be able to wear them without discomfort.

The first time I went bonefishing in Florida, I went with Capt. Jimmy Albright. On the way across the bay in his cruiser, Rebel, he handed me a polaroid eye shield, explaining that they were standard equipment for bonefishermen.

I thanked him and handed the shield back to him. Then I told him about my experience with polaroid. He didn't say anything — simply put the shield back in its case and tossed it on the shelf in front of the steering wheel. Before long we anchored the cruiser and went bonefishing.

Glare Strong

The sun was bright that day, as it usually is around the Florida Keys. The glare off the water was strong and I found myself squinting with discomfort. Not only that but I soon learned that Jimmy could see a great many things which I could not see.

As we made our way across the shallow flats he would spot a bonefish. Thereupon I would stare in the direction he was pointing. All I could see would be bright reflected sunlight. We flushed fish after fish because of my inability to see where to cast.

Not until we found some fish that were feeding in water so shallow that their tails showed above the surface now and then was I able to cast my fly so that one of the fish would take it.

At lunchtime Jimmy again suggested that I use the polaroid shield as I decided to try it, headache or no headache. What a difference! Now when Jimmy pointed out a fish feeding in the surface, I, too, could see it.

These days on the Florida Keys and flats, almost every angler you see is wearing a polaroid shield. Without one a man fishes under a tremendous handicap. In this fishing the angler first spots his fish before casting to it. If he can't see the fish he doesn't do very much fishing, as "blind casting" is rarely productive.

On the way north from Florida last year, I decided to try one of these eye shields instead of using my driving glasses. Reflected light or "glare" is intense on the roads under the bright Florida sun. The eye shield eliminated glare and bright reflections and made driving pleasanter. Now I carry a polaroid shield always in the glove pocket of my car.

Useful for Trout

Last season, my son and I experimented with the polaroid shields while we were trout fishing. While wading trout streams it is always better to be able to see the bottom of the stream. Unless the light is just right, with the sun at your back, this is not always possible without visual aid.

At that time we had only our Florida shields, which are quite dark and exclude much of the light. Thus, we could use them only on sunny days when there was plenty of light.

Now one of the companies puts out polaroid shields in two — one in dark greek for bright days and one in grey for cloudy days. This latter innovation is a big help as surface "glint" nearly always is a problem of grey days.

As I say, being able to see through the surface down through the water to the stream bottom is a distinct help to trout fishermen. Not only does it facilitate wading, but it enables him to spot his fish more accurately.

Bonefishing, for instance, you are dry-fly fishing, which means, of course, that your fly is floating on the surface. You see the dimple as a feeding fish takes an insect from the surface. When casting to a feeding fish, it is always better to place the fly so that the leader is not in evidence.

Without visual aid, all you can do is drop your fly slightly to one side of the spot where the fish rose last. This may or may not cause the leader to pass over the fish. If it actually does pass over him, the probabilities are that you won't get him.

However, if you can watch him rise and then see him return to his resting station you can place your fly so that the leader is not too obvious as it drifts past him.

Same for Bass

The same is true of bass-bug fishing or of plug fishing. Often a bass will drift up part way to inspect a lure more closely. Sometimes he will do this slowly with the aid of a polaroid shield, successive casts may enable you to hook him.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

He wouldn't have been very smart, either, would it?" put in Mart Preston.

"Perhaps not," Peter admitted. "Again, perhaps Cousin Leanna had it all figured out just as it happened. She intended to be found feigning unconsciousness, in the dark hall with that cook and built story about somebody choking her. Then she could say, Aunt Maggie had sent her after you—for protection—and one of us, either Jasper or Sondra 'we' I would burn for her crime. Or is all that too legal for you Preston?"

"It smells high heaven," Mart snapped.

"Dear me," observed Sondra, "it's clear where your deputy's sympathies lie, Sheriff. Isn't it?"

"Is it?" Purdy scowled a warning at Mart nevertheless, adding: "It seems to me, now, that you folks are taking the wrong attitude. Why don't you try helping instead of hindering and see how quick we can get this thing straightened?"

"Oh," Sondra said lightly, "don't you know? They don't want it over. This way they're safe."

"They?" echoed the sheriff. "Who, Miss Thorne?"

But Sondra merely gave him a sphinx-like smile that barely carved her tantalizing lips and looked at Peter whose face flushed—it did!—and then went white. The terror of a dragged animal was in his grayish eyes for a long second before he managed to mask it.

"You're bungling this thing pretty badly, Purdy," Peter drawled angrily, "but then I guess I can't expect the efficiency of a district attorney in a country sheriff's office. Will you permit me to call in his private investigator?"

"I won't stop you," Purdy promised.

"Well, I will!" Miss Agatha was on her feet, rocking back and forth like a sparrow clinging to a twig against a buffeting winter wind. "My sister was afraid of you, Peter, and I will also have a private detective hired by you in this house! I am the only honest-to-God Thorne left and—"

"Oh, shut up, Aunt Agatha," Peter groaned, "For the love of Pete!"

Miss Aggie's outburst had ripped his forward accent to shreds; he sounded almost human. Leanna could feel sorry for him then could even like him, but when he shrugged back into what she mentally called his holier-than-thou cloak he again became a potential murderer. Or was it any longer potential? Shudderingly, Leanna wondered.

The remainder of the night would be long. Leeana was glad when the sheriff announced his intention of leaving Mart Preston on guard, but she wondered what good one man would be if—

If what? she asked herself. If Peter decided to kill again? She walked until she had gone into the hall after Purdy before she stirred from her chair.

Sondra was waiting at the door.

"I couldn't go with the dishes, Leeana," she whispered. "I'm afraid of Jasper! May I stay in with you?"

Quick sympathy stabbed at the dislike between them. Leeana nodded.

"Of course, Sondra," she said, and added: "If you're not afraid of me and my money."

"You're a dear," Sondra said warmly. "After all I've—But Jasper has a gun. If—Miss Maggie's I think. I found it a while ago, under his pillow."

Sondra was not the ideal roommate for a night of murder. She had to talk about Miss Maggie. And about Peter, whom she really didn't like at all, she said.

"Frankly," she added confidentially, "Peter is a stinker, although I imagine I shouldn't find that out by now. Poor Miss Maggie was so proud of him until she found out. Then she hated him."

"Until she found out what!" Leanna asked.

"Oh, didn't you know?" Sondra seemed genuinely surprised. Peter is a 'criminal' lawyer in quotation marks. He pulls leaves out of the fire for gents who steal from widows and orphans. That sort of thing. He's a shyster, ingly legal, the way Peter does it. But he doesn't have a very good name, even in New York's lower strata. And that, my dear Leeana, is saying a lot."

"Yes," Leeana agreed. "I imagine it would be."

"Almost 1 o'clock, isn't it?" Sondra asked yawningly.

"Umm. But I'm not sleepy. I think I'll go downstairs."

She could hear Sondra chuckle softly. "That cop," she teased. "Don't say I didn't warn you Hope you had."

Leeana fumbled in the darkness for her robe and slippers.

"Lock the door if you like," Leeana suggested. "I'll tap when I come. And don't worry about me."

As if Sondra would. Sondra Thorne thought of nothing but her own lovely skin. The rest of the world—including me, Leeana thought wryly—could go hang.

Leeana went into the hall while Sondra padded barefooted across the room to slide the big old-fashioned bolt into its slot. The shaded night light at the head of the stairs struggled fitfully with the darkness and failed to increase the old house's frightening gloom.

Martin, Preston and Jasper were drinking coffee in the kitchen. Mart grinned as Leeana entered but Jasper regarded her with an angry frown.

"You would butt in, wouldn't you, Leeana?" he growled.

"You sound like Peter," Leeana retorted.

Leeana poured herself a cup of coffee. It emptied the pot.

"You two have been on a binge haven't you?" Then, quickly, "Don't scowl at me Jap. I've just come from Sondra. She tells me you have Miss Maggie's gun."

The blunt statement surprised no one but Leeana, who stared in amazement as the men traded knowing glances.

"I wondered who put it there," Jasper said finally. He sounded dead-tired, hopeless. "Now I know. My wife," bitterly, "is trying to frame me."

Leeana sipped her coffee. It didn't make sense. You didn't just walk into a room and practically accuse a man of murder if you have his gun. It so calmly, Peter would have screamed his innocence from the housetops.

"Maybe Peter is trying to make you think Sondra is guilty," she ventured.

"Why?"

"Why not? If Peter killed Miss Maggie it would be to his advantage to play you and Sondra veins against one another, wouldn't it?"

"And you against the both of us, you mean?" Jasper Thorne shook his head. "Somehow I don't think it's Peter. He isn't the violent type."

Martin Preston snorted into his coffee. "Is there a 'type' to murderers, now?" he demanded, hurriedly wiping away traces of his breach of etiquette. "Even a shyster with a penchant for beautiful dames—"

"So you know that, too," Jasper said dully, as though another grievance had been added to his already back-breaking load. "But you would. Peter's escapades have been talked about. He's a Thorne; people thrive on our troubles."

"Stop feeling sorry for yourself snapped Martin. "If you Thornes would come down off your pedestal—" He broke off, perhaps realizing that he was echoing Sondra, and began again: "Don't let it break you, Jasper. You can leave Thorne Hill now. You can live normally, you and Sondra. You can live as Peter has all these years—freely, if," and Leeana watched while eyes became narrow slits through which he appraised her cousin's pinched, drawn face "you didn't kill your aunt."

Jasper merely gave him an enigmatic smile and said coolly, "go practice your dramatics in greener pastures, Preston. I'm going to bed."

He stalked out of the room without looking back. Leeana wondered if he knew he still carried Miss Maggie's lukewarm coffee—or if he cared.

Leeana tipped the percolator, now again full it was empty, and said, "he told you about the gun. Why?"

"He even showed it to me. Managing, I might add, to muff my fingerprints that might have been on-it."

"Intentionally?"

Mart Martin shrugged. "You Thornes are queer ducks, you know that? Jasper, Peter and the devil take him—then you right-about-face and bungle every chance there might be of trapping one of the clan. But I've got the gun, at least. That's something."

A scream rose eerily from somewhere in the darkened house, rose—and fell as the thin body plummeted downward. Terror closed its fingers, struggling in Leeana every emotion but the wild urge to run—run while there still was time.

'MacArthur's Plans Mean All-Out War'

Says U.S. Buying Time to Prepare Against Third War

Claims MacArthur's Plan Would Wreck Coalition

-- Marshall

Washington, May 7. ((AP) Defence Secretary George Marshall contended to Senators today that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Korean war proposals would risk "an all-out war with the Soviet Union".

Replying to MacArthur's attacks on the administration's Far Eastern policies, Marshall also said:

1. The Truman administration's unwavering policy is to deny Nationalist-held Formosa to the Chinese communists and to oppose seating of the reds in the United Nations.

2. A Jan. 12 memorandum of the joint chiefs of staff, which Secretary Marshall contended supported his proposals for fighting the Korean war by direct action against communist China, was drafted for use if American troops had to withdraw from Korea.

3. The memorandum was discharged after it became apparent that American troops had turned the tide of battle.

4. The memorandum contained 16 courses of recommended action, only four of which were quoted by MacArthur in his testimony last week to Senators inquiring into the Far Eastern and policy disputes involved.

5. MacArthur was fired because of "basic differences of opinion" not only with Truman, but the chiefs of staff and Marshall himself.

Closed Session

Testifying at a closed session with his "combed" testimony made public later, Marshall said MacArthur's plan would risk "what the world conflict "even at the expense of losing our Allies and wrecking the coalition of free peoples throughout the world."

MacArthur has proposed intensification of the economic squeeze against red China, blockade of its coast, air operations over Manchuria and use of Chinese Nationalist troops from Formosa.

"He wants us to accept the risk of involvement not only in an extension of the war with red China but in an all-out war with the Soviet-Union," Marshall said, adding:

"He (MacArthur) would have us do this even though the effect of such action might expose Western Europe to attack by the millions of Soviet troops poised in Middle and Eastern Europe".

MacArthur has argued that his proposals ought to be acceptable to other members of the United Nations. But he said that if they were not, the United States should "go it alone".

MacArthur contended, too, that the moves he advocated would not involve any near risk of Russian entry into war than had the first American troops intervention in Korea.

The 70-year-old Marshall, wartime army chief of staff, testified behind closed doors as did MacArthur last week. The senate committees -armed Services and Foreign Relations--are making a general inquiry into the Far Eastern policy dispute and MacArthur's dismissal.

As with MacArthur, a stenographic report of Marshall's testimony was given reporters First, it passes through the hands of military and a state department censors.

After denying any disagreement on that part of the president, himself and the joint chiefs, Marshall told the senators:

Have Been Differences

"There have been, however, and continue to be basic differences of judgment between General MacArthur, on the one hand and the president, secretary of defense and the joint chiefs of staff on the other hand."

Earlier, a senator who asked not to be named, said Marshall told the hearing that the United States is "buying time" in Korea to prepare against a third world war.

A senator who declined to be named said Marshall also:

1. Said it was Truman, not MacArthur testified, that the joint chiefs of staff made no recommendations last Jan. 12 proposing moves against communist China and that the chiefs made no recommendations of MacArthur. But, Marshall was quoted as saying, conditions changed later so that these proposals were not carried out.

2. Said he supported President Truman's action in dismissing MacArthur who was killed by a shell fire commands.

3. Said a theatre commander should not attempt to dictate over-all global strategy or that outside his theatre.

Decade Has Passed Since Hess Startled World by Flight to U.K.

London, May 7.--(AP)--Ten years ago next Thursday Rudolf Hess literally dropped in on Britain with the idea of ending the war and the Second World War.

The No. 3 Nazi, outranked only by Hitler and Hermann Goering, arrived by parachute in a field near Glasgow. The plane he had piloted in a spectacular flight from Augsburg, Germany, crashed in flames a few hundred yards away.

Hess, his ankle broken, spoke vaguely of a plan to "oust the Churchill clique," and was deeply embittered because the British government did not take him seriously.

His coming--possibly with a substantial peace plan, possibly with a secret message from Hitler, possibly as a trifler to the Nazi cause--gripped the world's attention.

But after 10 years, the anniversary of his strange adventure stirs little interest in Britain. In Berlin's Spandau prison, Hess, now a 57-year-old dreamer, is almost a forgotten man. He was sentenced to life imprisonment by the war crimes tribunal at Nuernberg.

Prison keepers, officers of the four powers, report he is in "reasonably good physical condition," but they are not authorized to say anything about his mental state. They understand, however, that "he is not always in the world of reality."

Hess first was held a prisoner in Britain--by turn petulant, then middle-aged and bored--he gave little of value to the intelligence services but his rambling conversation suggested that Germany might attack Russia soon, and that Hitler considered was useful to the Nazis.

He escaped death penally, handed over to other top-flight Nazis, but did not seem to much interest them.

At Spandau now he does little but walk with a cane in the garden and brown in the corridors, and reads a great deal.

200 Reported Killed in Quake In El Salvador

San Salvador, El Salvador, May 7.—(AP)—At least 200 persons were reported killed in an earthquake yesterday in the cities of Jucuapa and Chinameca.

Jucuapa is about 90 miles and Chinameca about 92 miles east of this capital. Jucuapa has a population of about 15,000 and Chinameca of about 17,000.

El Salvador is a tiny central American country on the west coast of the narrow neck of land joining South America with North America. It is bounded by Guatemala to the north, Honduras to the east and Nicaragua to the south.

The strong quakes which began at 5 p. m. yesterday, destroyed many homes and public buildings. Many persons were said to have been buried in ruins. The exact number of dead is not yet known but authorities estimate about 200 are buried in the debris.

Nearby towns, Nueva, Santiago de Maria, Usulutan and Caserios, east of the Lempa River, also suffered great damage.

SYRIANS OPEN FIRE ON ISRAELI BORDER AREA

Several Houses Hit But No Casualties

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 7—(AP) —Syrian troops opened fire today with rifles and machine-guns on an Israeli settlement near the frontier, dispatches from the border reported.

An Israeli military spokesman here said several houses were hit but there were no casualties.

In the area of Tel el Mutelle, where fierce fighting raged for three days, no new incidents were reported.

(In Damascus, the Syrian government announced it has sent instructions to its United Nations delegate to submit a new complaint to the Security Council on recent frontier outbreaks. The message told the U.N. delegation to protest that Israeli troops, using fighter planes, 155 mm. guns and mortars, attacked the Syrian village of Shamalnah.

(At the same time the Syrian foreign ministry denied Israeli charges that Syrian forces invaded Israel's territory and violated armistice lines.)

Sporadic firing was reported along the Ein Gev settlement on the eastern shore of Galilee.

Will Not Heed Order

Israel has announced that she will not heed a cease-fire order pronounced by the U.N. to end frontier dispute as long as Syrian forces remain in the demilitarized area.

Israel's stand was outlined in letter last night by Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett to Col. Vagn Bennike, acting chief of staff of the U.N. observers here. Sharett stressed however, Israel's readiness to cooperate in "restoration of peace."

On the Israeli front was quiet last night for the first time since the bloody fighting started last Saturday along the River Jordan.

The calm came after a battle during which, a military spokesman said, Israeli troops drove Syrian army invaders back in fierce hand-to-hand fighting yesterday morning.

Homes Bombed

Damascus a Syrian Army communique yesterday said five Israeli planes bombed Arab villages, demolished some homes and attacked a Syrian army outpost east of Lake Tiberias. The communique said one Syrian was killed in the bombing and a Syrian lieutenant was killed by a shell fragment.

(An earlier Syrian communique said Israeli troops staged three assaults early yesterday in the demilitarized zone north of the Sea of Galilee but were driven off by Arab residents of the area.)

Hides in Hills

"I threw away my sleeping bag, all of my equipment except my rifle, helmet and bullets, and struck out across the mountains. I figured I'd be safe in the hills during the day and walk at night," Miller said.

After several days of wandering he met a young Korean.

"He offered to lead me to those positions. . . I explained to him that I was so weak I couldn't go on.

"He went back to his village and brought back a warm meal nice it was, and then led me all the way to the front positions . . . I tripped a flare and then everybody on the mountainside was up there and started hollering to each other, 'don't shoot.'"

He escaped to the American and I yelled back that I was a G.I.

"They shouted back that we were right in the middle of a mine field and not to move. It almost ended disastrously right there. The soldiers told us to edge over a trail which we did and then moved into Baker company."

Gen. MacArthur's Exposition On Strategy Poses Question; How Ready is United States?

Washington, May 7 — (AP) — Out of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's exposition on strategy there emerged today this question for the joint Senate committees to ask the military commanders:

How ready is the United States, including the state of her atomic weapons and bomber force preparedness, if Russia chooses war?

The Senate's Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees asked MacArthur about the military policy phases of their conferences which finally led President Truman to fire him, and the Russian enigma appeared and reappeared many times.

Senator Brien McMahon (Dem. Conn.) contended the MacArthur plan — blockading China, putting aircraft over Manchuria and using Chinese Nationalist troops — might bring Russia into the war.

The general replied:

"As far as the initial state of an attack is concerned, we must understand that our own prepared-ness, atomic preparedness, is far in excess of that of our potential enemy at the present time.

"Within hours after we launched, we could counter - attack. Every disastrous and gloomy prophecy that you have made you can multiply against the enemy."

Will U. S. military strategy makers, Defense Secretary George Marshall and the joint chiefs of staff agree with that view? The joint committees were ready today to begin hearing their ideas, leading off with Marshall.

MacArthur testified that if he had been permitted to bomb the Chinese communist forces in Manchuria they would not have been able to advance into Korea in any force. Why wasn't the permission forthcoming?

Risk Always Present

The reason given by Truman in his April 11 speech was that he thought Manchuria and China itself would mean a "very grave risk of starting a general war."

MacArthur contends the risk of intervention by China or Russia always has been present.

It is possible the senators may hear reasons other than those stated by Truman.

The committee may ask the military chiefs whether what the reason was for the reluctance to allow MacArthur's air force even to cut the bridges across the Yalu River from Manchuria, as MacArthur says.

Senators may want a statement on whether the U. S. has told the United Nations it will bomb enemy bases in Manchuria if the communists launch heavy air attacks on U. N. forces in Korea. Reports about this have persisted for months.

The refusal to give Chiang Kai-Shek support for offensive, instead of defensive operations, has, dictated only by over-caution, and fear of bringing Russia into the war.

The joint chiefs may tell senators there are other confronting factors.

MacArthur estimates the Nationalist forces on Formosa included the "finest aggregation of half a million troops." Some U. S. military chiefs argue that the matter is not the 500,000 men with heavy equipment would be difficult to transfer. But it still has to provide material for fighting an active war in Korea and building up the armament for defence against an all-out war with Russia.

Wanders Ten Days in Red Area, G.I. Saved by Small Korean Boy

East Central Front, Korea, May 7—(AP)— A bearded, dirty and tired American soldier slipped into allied lines late last night after wandering through communist territory 10 days.

Sgt. Corlis Miller, 29, Colorado Springs, Colo., staff sergeant for Army newspaper Stars and Stripes, trudged into his own lines through a pelting rain.

He wore a field jacket and lived on corn and water in an effort to avoid the reds. Miller became lost April 26, four days after the red communist launched their big spring offensive.

Still wearing his dirty fatigue jacket, Miller told his story.

He and another Stars and Stripes correspondent had been assigned to the French forces.

What Miller didn't know was that allied troops had begun their withdrawal after breaking the back of the red offensive on the central front.

Hides in Hills

"I threw away my sleeping bag, all of my equipment except my rifle, helmet and bullets, and struck out across the mountains. I figured I'd be safe in the hills during the day and walk at night," Miller said.

Hundreds Fled Homes In Sarnia Explosion

Sarnia, Ont., May 7 — (CP)— Children cried. Women shrieked. Men carrying a bulging suitcase raced down the street, clad only in long underwear and a fedora.

Hundreds of families, stunned and bewildered, fled from their homes last night as an explosion rocked the Polymer synthetic rubber plant and homes within a three-mile radius.

"It was a pathetic sight," said Stephen Jackson, a hotel proprietor. "People were hurriedly piling their belongings into cars and racing away . . . men folks tried to keep some semblance of order."

The explosion, and the fire that followed, destroyed a section of some 1,000 square feet in the western section of the 185-acre plant south of here. Thousands of windows were shattered.

Jackson said most of the residents returned to their homes within two hours after the blast.

Missing Man Found By OPP At Cartier

Cartier, Ont., May 7. (CP)—Missing since last Tuesday, Mike Kellinik, 50, was found here Saturday by a search party headed by Constable Del Hope of the Provincial police.

Kellinik was none the worse for his absence and was walking back to Cartier when located by the search party about 2 1-2 miles from this railway town.

The middle-aged, gang-worker had decided to walk through the bush to the K.V.P. Company's drive camp on the Spanish River, a distance of about 12 miles. He stayed there since Tuesday night and started back for Cartier on Saturday.

200 U.S. TROOPS NOW IN ICELAND TO AID DEFENCE

Probably Technicians To Survey Air Bases

Reykjavik, Iceland, May 7 — (AP) — A contingent of United States troops arrived by air today at Keflavik airport, 30 miles from this capital, for the announced purpose of aiding Iceland's defence under the North Atlantic Alliance. The number of troops was not announced.

(In Washington, defence officials told reporters the initial detachment consisted of about 200 men under the command of Brig.-Gen. Edward John McGaw.)

The European edition of the opinion was expressed that it was only a small contingent of American troops, probably technicians for the most part, sent to survey possible sites for bases in the Atlantic outpost of western defence.

The arrival of the troops apparently was no surprise to the people of the tiny island republic, since it was generally known that negotiations had been under way for some time. Nevertheless, the announcement of the arrival was published in extra editions of Reykjavik's newspapers.

Little Light Thrown

The government statement threw little light on the mission of the American 11 and airmen.

"When Iceland joined the Atlantic Pact, it agreed that it war broke out Allies would have a similar position in Iceland to that they had during the last war. But it was entirely up to Icelanders to say when such a position would be granted.

During the Second World War Iceland was major assembly point for convoys to Russia.

Members of Parliament's democratic parties support Ferdin, the government said, and they agreed to ask for defence forces. Parliament, with a total of 39,758 square miles and a population of only 140,000, has no army, navy, coast guard or air force of its own.

Commies Not Consulted

Of the 52 members of parliament, 43 supported the government in its request. The nine communist members of parliament were not consulted.

The number of troops sent here must be approved by the Icelandic government. Neither is said the agreement is to be construed as impairing the authority of Iceland with regard to its territory.

Iceland is the second North Atlantic island for which the U S. has assumed defence responsibilities. An agreement for the mutual defence of Greenland was negotiated with Denmark only a few days ago.

Nice Roasted Dormouse May Come To be New Delicacy in Britain

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

London, May 7 — (AP) — The dormouse, according to European legend, didn't like Christopher Columbus and so never emigrated to America.

Consequently, not being personally acquainted, North America thinks of the dormouse as a furry, whiskered creature who lives in the crossword puzzles, and as a nuisance if he's when and wanders through Wonderland.

If only that were all that need be said about the dormouse. But said an official of the British Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries, I continued the official.

"He eats the apples of Buckinghamshire, and other counties just as handsome, and we had to do it. We had to classify him officially as a pest."

So here, any one at all may go about Britain slaying dormice — there is some debate about the plural — and eating them. Already the dormice of Britain are of the edible branch of the dormouse family, and are to be distinguished from the "dormouse vulgaris," which of course no one would eat.

Since the dormouse could eat has called the dormouse a pest his friends have come to his defence. He is a little fellow, somewhat like a squirrel and something bigger than a mouse, and he likes to live in the branches of trees and old stone walls. He likes chestnuts and walnuts, and has developed a fancy for apples and pears.

But even his friends have to admit that when there are too many dormice in Britain and that was damage to the fruit.

Casting about for ways to do the agriculture ministry discovered an old Roman recipe. The dormouse is fattened, then roasted, then dipped in treacle, known as syrup in the Western Hemisphere, and then gulped down.

How does a dormouse taste?

Different from mutton, said the agriculture ministry. It isn't like duck, though, that all the dormice in Britain will add much to the national larder. But they are a delicacy.

Five Workmen Injured by Flying Glass, Little Loss

Residents Close by Plant Flee in Panic From Homes

Sarnia, Ont., May 7—(CP)—A spectacular explosion rocked the Polymer Synthetic Rubber Plant last night and shattered windows over a wide area but officials of the government-owned company said there was little serious damage. Five men were injured, none seriously.

The explosion of a tank of butadiene, a gas, set off a fire in the immediate area but plant firemen brought it under control within an hour.

E. H. Rowzee, plant manager, said Polymer's profit for the extraction of butadiene—a volatile bi-product of synthetic rubber—will be back in operation before the end of the month.

Mr. Rowzee said damage to an adjacent building, which held up production of synthetic rubber latex, will be repaired in 24 hours.

Damage Extensive

Earlier today, production minister Howe said in an interview at Ottawa that damage was estimated at between $50,000 and $100,000 and that synthetic rubber production would be held up for only a few days.

Mr. Rowzee's statement gave no estimate of damage but it was "considerably less than was originally anticipated," and that there was no damage to the vital equipment in the synthetic rubber unit.

The blast went at 10.40 p.m. and its force was felt as far as London, 60 miles west of Sarnia. Residents near the plant left buildings within a two-mile radius and persons fled in panic from homes near the plant.

The explosion and the ensuing fire destroyed a section of about 1,000 square feet in the western part of the sprawling 185-acre plant. Sarnia is in an area known as "Chemical Valley", south of Sarnia, between such other plants as the Imperial Oil Refinery and Dow Chemical Company.

One thousand workmen were on duty at Polymer which, in normal 24 hours of operation, turns out enough new Lincoln Park, Sarnia, and Kimball Barnes of nearby Corunna right. Their injuries were described as face and hand lacerations.

Giant Bomber Falls in Flames 23 Are Killed

Albuquerque, May 7. (AP)—A giant B-36 Bomber crashed in flames as it tried to land at Kirtland Air Force base yesterday, killing 23 airmen. The explosion made the base resemble a junkyard.

It was the fifth and worst B-36 crash since the United States Air Force put the 139-ton, six-engined Bombers—the world's largest—into operation in August, 1946. The toll of 23 dead is just three less than the combined deaths on the other four.

Col. Perry G. Griffith, Kirtland commander, said the flaming wreckage "looked like a burning oil field. Flames shot up almost 200 feet in the air."

Two survivors were in critical condition.

The Bomber, almost as long as a city block, had five finished a three-hour flight from Carswell Air Force base, Fort Worth, Texas. Inland firefighters hrrived at the scene less than four minutes after the crackup.

Flames Fanned Quickly

But 40-mile-an-hour winds stirred to new billowing sandstorm and fanned the flames quickly to the parked C-47s in the transport and a private cargo plane.

Minutes before the crash, the Bomber caused wineglass rattle and walls to vibrate by roaring not over 500 feet above the city.

The plane carried 13 approach at 500 feet. About halfway down the runway, the wingtips scraped the ground. The impact tore the propellers and cowlings from the right outboard pusher-type engine and burst the right Jet engine cowl. All told on a B-36 contains two auxiliary Jet engines. There is one pod on each wingtip, about 230 feet apart.

The blaze was believed to have started when a spark from a cutting tool set fire to a truck's gas tank. Within seconds, the entire bottom floor of the building was in flames.

Mrs. Joseph Cirtwell, wife of the owner, her 18-year-old daughter Dawn, and her mother Mrs. Jack Brennan of Syracuse were trapped in an apartment above the garage. Mrs. Cirtwell tossed her daughter to AP Mrs. Brennan and then followed the mother through the window.

Thirty Officers, Other Ranks Apply for Enlistment In Famous H.&P.E. Regiment

Approximately thirty officers and other ranks of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment's reserve battalion applied for enlistment in the first company being mobilized for active service, over the weekend, regimental officers announced today.

If Company as the first of two companies to be mobilized immediately is known will recruit 134 all ranks, which will include five officers.

If Company will be recruited immediately following the completion of personnel of "F" Company. The second company will not be recruited to full establishment personnel but will recruit as many as possible and serve as reinforcement unit for the first company.

Included among officers who "have signed on the dotted line" are Major J. Johnson, Major Lloyd Linton and Lieut. George Hepburn, also of Picton.

The first "recruit" to apply for enlistment was Lieut. Col. Irvine David L. Moran, Bancroft who handed in his application.

A large number of non-commissioned officers have signified their intentions of "going active."

N. C. O.'s Called

Key non-commissioned personnel of the battalion have been called out for duty. These include Company Sergeant Major Jack Downs, Trenton; CSM. Gavin Sharpe and CSMM Jim Reid.

If Company will be maintained to go elementary training at Barriefield, Ontario, as soon as the establishment is completed, will be commanded by Major William Bennett, formerly former officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Trenton. He was junior officer at Central Command, Oakville, until the time of his new appointment.

If Company will be maintained and trained in the Picton Armories.

Recruiting, which officially started today, will be carried on at all company points of the regiment, Belleville, Trenton, Picton, Frankford, Madoc and Bancroft. A recruiting officer was in attendance at Picton, Trenton, Belleville, Frankford, Madoc and Bancroft. A regimental recruiting office was set out for permanent recruiting duty at the regimental headquarters here. The city recruiting office will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. while company officers will operate three days a week and also on Saturday.

Captain Ken Ross, assumed temporary duty at headquarters here today until a permanent recruiting officer has been appointed.

Hive of Activity

The headquarters of the regiment was a hive of activity over the weekend. Yesterday, Lieut.-Col. Max Porritt, M.C., commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. Harold Angus B. Duffy and others with the augmented orderly room staff were busy all day yesterday making arrangements for the recruiting and the mobilization.

A transit camp has been set up in the former Quinte Footwear Company building on lower Dundas Street. Electricians and laborers worked all day yesterday readying the place, installing lights and double-decker cots.

Lieut.-Col. Porritt will have overnight or until a quota is available for transfer to Kingston where final examinations will be made. While here recruits will be in the charge of Lieut. Billy Front Sr.

Telephone calls from Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa and a cable received at regimental headquarters yesterday from exmembers of the regiment asking for all information regarding enlistment.

Must Be 18 Or Over

Recruits must be a Canadian citizen or a British subject and if single be between the ages of 18 and 40. Younger men may be enrolled at 17 years of age with parents' consent in writing. If married the recruit must be 21 or over.

Provision has been made for the acceptance of former non-commissioned officers of the first battalion in their rank on discharge.

The two companies of the regiment are required immediately to join the 27th Canadian Infantry Brigade being formed at Valcartier, Quebec.

"In the meantime, the reserve unit will carry on its normal training activities," Col. Porritt said.

The battle colors of the First Battalion Hastings were on display in the afternoon breeze yesterday outside the main entrance to the old Bridge Street Armouries. Across the way, a glimpse of defiance and pride shone in the face of the regimental mascot, "Pelawawa Mush" wooden Indian, which stood, arms folded across the way from the colors.

Investigations of police corruption led to the new law, which also requires fingerprinting of all persons applying for entertainment licenses.

Junior Smashes Cross-Country Record at Albert

Running sensationally, a junior, practically unknown in track circles smashed all existing records at Albert College here Saturday to win the 15th annual cross-country run.

He is Dave Scott, fifteen year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Scott of the fifty-fifth regiment in the three-mile course in 16.54. The former record established by the winner in 1935 and had stood since 1944. Scott also broke the junior record of 17.05.

The youngster defeated George Mills, a senior, who was the event winner in the past two years, who finished second. In third place was Ron Gollieyie, an intermediate

Used Furniture And Clothing Will be Welcomed

It doesn't mean that the local Kiwanis Club is going into the "used" furniture and clothing business, but if city residents have anything in the above two categories which they do not need the local service club is interested.

It is all part of joint project on the part of the Kiwanis Club and the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary, to collect used clothing and furniture which will be sold at a public auction in June.

Collections will take place on the East Hill tonight from 5:30 to 8:30 and on the West Hill Tuesday evening during the same hours.

So if residents have any used articles of either of the above commodities which are not wanted, the local service club will take them.

Clean out the attic, garage and basement and drop them out on the verandah in readiness for the pick-up. By doing so residents will be serving a two-fold purpose—they will clean up their premises and by so doing at the same time will be contributing towards a worthwhile cause.

Detroit, May 7 — (AP) — A move by striking Detroit bus and streetcar operators to tie up rush-hour automobile traffic was hinted Sunday in union official, the Detroit Free Press said.

The paper said that in its third week, bus failed to paralyze the motor city. Detroiters have been getting to work in private cars.

Montreal's Vice Probe Suspended By Court Order

Montreal, May 7—(CP)—Judge Louis Cousineau of Superior Court has issued a writ suspending Montreal's vice probe, it was announced today.

The action was obtained Saturday by Ubald Boisvert, Montreal lawyer, acting for 34 officers and former officers of Montreal Police Force named in a petition which was the basis of the probe.

The writ demanded that Judge Francois Caron, presiding over the inquiry into alleged police-tolerated vice conditions 10 years ago, stay all further proceedings.

Applicants for the writ contended that Judge Caron was partial and shown favoritism toward the 74 petitioners at whose request the probe was started last fall.

The application contended that Judge Caron, also a member of the Superior Court bench, went beyond his authority on several occasions since the start of the inquiry, Sept. 11, 1950.

It also contended that the original petition was not proper grounds for the inquiry, that Chief Gregoire authorized authority not legally conferred upon him, and that he has conducted the probe with "manifest favoritism" towards certain witnesses.

University Women Hold Annual Regional Talks

Over the weekend Belleville had the honour of entertaining the Regional Conference of University Women's Clubs, with delegates from Quebec City to Oshawa. All meetings, dinner on Friday, and luncheon on Saturday, were held at St. Thomas' Parish House. On Friday afternoon, Mrs. R. Pringle graciously opened her home for tea.

The evening program with Mrs. A. C. Locke, presiding, consisted of a talk and pictures by Dr. Martha Law, of Toronto, on the International Federation of University Women Conference held in Zurich and Basle, Switzerland last August.

Mrs. D. G. Burr, the incoming president of the local club, introduced the speaker.

Dr. Law's pictures and her descriptions of Swiss women and their difficulties were most interesting. Appreciative thanks were extended by Mrs. D. I. MacKinnon.

Panel Discussion

A panel discussion followed given by members of the Ottawa Club, Miss McClellan, Miss Gilliland and Mrs. MacKay, on "Penal Reform and Methods of Dealing with Women Offenders in Ontario." Miss McClellan told of the efforts now being made in the Correctional Jails to find work for the girls work to do, so they can earn money for their use when they are released and to give them a chance to learn trades and acquire skills.

The new approach is to rehabilitate and to reform, not merely to punish. This seems logical when one considers that 80 per cent of the offenders are recidivists or repeaters and that the greatest cost is in getting prisoners in and out of jail.

Another point made, was that the people of Canada could be proud of their federal penal system—but much work was still to be done in improving the city and county jails and provincial reform institutions, such as Mercer, where there is still serious overcrowding and inadequate buildings, and lack of constructive efforts toward rehabilitation.

More Panel Discussion

On Saturday morning, with Dr. Martha Law in the chair, in place of Mrs. W. R. Hamby, of London, Ont., who was unable to be present, greetings were given by Mrs. Locke of Belleville. Three-minute reports, from each club in the regional conference, were given, followed by a panel discussion, "Are Women Ready to Accept Equal Status", led by members of the Kingston Club—Mrs. Lin Elliott, Miss Belle Elliott, Miss Audrey Rushbrook and Mrs. Kay Spooner.

Dr. Allen Wilson of Ottawa, publications convener, spoke on the "value of the Chronicle to C.F.U.W. mentioning the difficulties in persuading members to send in articles promptly. Dr. Wilson also called attention to a useful leaflet calling all university graduates, and giving briefly, reasons for joining the Federation, and declaring what the Federation stands for.

Human Rights

Following luncheon, Miss Constance Hayward, convener of International Relations of the Federation, and also liaison officer of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration, gave a short talk on the matter of "Human Rights" and the interest of the various clubs in different aspects of this subject. After some general discussion and questioning, it was voted by the regional conference delegates and members that they go on record as approving the motion that the "subject of Human Rights be incorporated in the fundamental law of Canada", and that Miss Constance Hayward head a committee to represent the F.U.W. in a delegation to interview the Prime Minister on May 8th.

In the afternoon session, Dr. Law introduced Miss Timmins of the French-speaking club, of Quebec City, who gave a paper on "Secondary School Education in the Province of Quebec."

Miss Timmins outlined the "Humanities and classical courses", and made comparisons between classical and scientific courses, showing the values of each.

Dr. Law treasurer of the C. F. U.W. gave her financial report.

The last item of the program was a panel discussion "How can University Women Assist in Adult Education?" This discussion was led by two members of the Montreal club, Miss Barbara Jenkins of the McGill faculty and Mrs. David MacFarland of MacDonald College, St. Anne de Bellevue. Miss Jenkins spoke on such points as the importance of the knowledge of the parliamentary procedures, knowledge of the background of the community and issues in the town governments.

District Legion Delegates Meet, Present Reports at Trenton Rally

Trenton (Special)—From far and near, representatives of various Legion branches in the district attended a mass rally in the hall of Legion Branch 110, Trenton, Sunday.

The many delegates were welcomed by councillor Don Sutherland, who acted on behalf of Mayor Ken J. Couch, unable to be on hand for the get-together.

District Commander Frank Threadgold of Whitby encouraged the Legionaires present to first establish a home or headquarters to enjoy the fruits of their endeavors. He urged his comrades to never forget the Legion and put it ahead of any personal enjoyment or gain that may be attained from taking part in the organization's activities.

Mr. Threadgold announced that he would be retiring from the District Commander's office following the annual Legion convention this term and pledged himself to assist the newly elected officer in any capacity desired.

Delegates from Port Hope, Cobourg, Brighton, Trenton, Warkworth, Campbellford and Frankford reported on the progress made by their branches to date and related activities they had sponsored in the sports field. All praised the Ladies' Auxiliaries for their helpful assistance.

The Campbellford delegate announced that their $6,000 Legion hall had been fully paid for and the branch had a small surplus. Bill Colterjohn who recently replaced Allan Vandewater as Trenton Legion president when the latter rejoined the R.C.A.F., told the gathering that it had taken several years to establish a Legion hall and that a considerable sum was still owing on the improvements. He reported that there was a steady increase in memberships with each new week. Now there are 128 paid up members of the Trenton Legion Branch 110.

sponsored by the provincial government, eight schools, community centres, municipal sponsored fort, recreation and an uprising in creative effort.

Church societies, Y. M. C. A., Little Theatre movements, arts and crafts clubs, are all helping along this line; how better to live and how better to use the responsibilities given and the power now possessed.

In the past there has been emphasis put on the training of leaders but not every member of the group is important and the emphasis is on group dynamics.

In closing, Mrs. McFarland said "In Canada adult education is one of our greatest concerns. The economic approach is still the best avenue and we need federal aid for it. The aim is for fuller and happier living. Implement it, wherever possible."

Dr. Law introduced Mrs. Roland Davey of Toronto to the gathering and spoke of her extensive work for the Federation over a period of many years.

Appreciation Expressed

Miss McCallum of Ottawa, expressed the thanks of the conference to the following persons: Mrs. Hambly for her fine effort in planning the conference; to Mrs. MacKinnon for her work as program chairman; to Archdeacon Arthur Smith of St. Thomas' Church; to the Ladies' Guild for their very fine work in serving dinner and luncheon; to Miss Timmins for her excellent paper; to Dr. Law for serving as chairman in place of Mrs. Hambly; Mrs. A. L. Locke and the Belleville Club for their hospitality; to Mrs. R. Pringle for her kind invitation for tea on Friday afternoon.

At the conclusion of the meeting, tea was served by the members of the Belleville club.

Following the dinner on Friday evening, the Belleville Club held a short business meeting and election of officers. The slate of officers was brought in by Mrs. Arthur Smith, chairman of the nominating committee.

FIRST CROSSING

The first airplane crossing of the South Atlantic was made by the Portuguese Coutinho and Cabral westward in 1922.

Provide Protection

The Frankford delegate reported that a movement to provide protection for lockkeepers working on top of dams on the Trent Valley system was underway, and that in the future lockkeepers would be provided with an assistant while removing or lowering logs in the dams in the winter time, that the logs of the dams would be sanded, and that guard rails would be erected around the tops of the dams. The Frankford Legion branch placed a resolution before the Provincial Command; asking for installation of safety regulations at the dams after one of their members dam keeper, Leo McCauley, fell off No. 6 dam at Frankford some months ago and drowned.

The third zone commander Roy Service of Cobourg in the chair, election of officers for the zone was held. Those selected to take office following the annual convention were: Zone Commander "Scotty" Broughton of Brighton; Deputy Zone Commander, Jack Wood of Cobourg; Zone Sports Officer, Harkie Morrow of Brighton.

Minutes of the previous zone meeting were read by secretary Ross Hardie of Cobourg.

Four Resolutions

Four resolutions to be presented for action to the Dominion Command were read and approved.

A Cobourg resolution that all World War II men who had who embarked to the United Kingdom for service in France be granted full benefits of the War Service Allowance Act. Three resolutions from the Frankford Legion branch, proposing that veterans' documents be kept confidential, that persons in the armed services outside Canada be exempt from income tax, and that an extension of time be given families of service men who are posted to stations and are forced to find other living accommodations.

Other zone business during afternoon included District Secretary and president of the Oshawa Legion Branch, R. S. Grant; Zone Commander Mumby of Madoc; Zone Welfare Officer Jack Drew of Kingston.

Following the meeting, those attending the rally, with the permission of No. 6 R.D. Commanding Officer, Group Captain S. A. Green, were the guests of the Sergeants' Mess at the Repair Depot. Group Captain Green welcomed the Legionaires to the station and extended the hospitality of his command.

Lunch was provided by the wives of the Trenton members.

THE HASTY ONES

"To strengthen the forces of freedom in accordance with the United Nations Charter and the North Atlantic Treaty." Those words, plus a few more, brought the famed Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment back to active duty again this week and another chapter in the glorious story of the regiment has been started.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, known throughout Canada and on many segments of foreign soil as one of the most honorable fighting forces of this country, will once again be represented in the fight for balance of power in the world. The honor and prestige of the Hasty Ones, established through many battles, and prepared in its reserve regiment, will now be incorporated in Canada's international army.

The Hastings and Prince Edward force will be used one of three Canadian battalions organized for fighting either in Korea or Europe. A Highland battalion will bring together the Black Watch, the North Nova Scotia Highlanders, the 48th Highlanders, the Seaforths, and the Canadian Scottish. The rifle battalion will incorporate the Queen's Own, the Victorias, the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, the Royal Winnipegs, and the Regina Rifles.

In the third battalion, along with the Hasty Pees, will be the Fusiliers Mont-Royal, the Carleton and York Regiment, the Algonquin Regiment, and the Loyal Edmonton Regiment. All these names bring back memories of brilliant battles and an upkeep of tradition so closely associated with the Canadian forces.

In addition, men will be recruited for the 6,000-strong force for composite units of artillery, armour, engineer, and a fourth other army raised by reserve units. The monogue in Canadian army annals, will see the formation of 27th brigade group from reserve units while the reserves carry on their part-time peacetime activities.

Belleville and the surrounding district will have always been proud of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, peace or in war. And just as Canada has been proud of the 28th brigade in Korea these past months, and will be proud of the 27th brigade in the months and years to come, Belleville will always hold her head high while the Hasty Ones are fighting for the democratic cause. In her new role the regiment, with forty-one others, has an opportunity to help mold the path of the free world in the near future. Backed by her traditions as a fighting force, she is doing nothing but well in her new role, and the best wishes of the city and district will go with her across the sea.

THE ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

The St. Lawrence seaway question, once merely a dream on the part of Canadian planners, has now changed its character. It is the country's hope for future expansion and development. Canada will build, and for Ontario in particular, it is the magic which will open the door to power resources that will badly needed in another five years.

For that reason, more than any others, Canada may be let go ahead with the $800,000,000 job herself. The United States, with whom definite plans for the seaway have been sitting for many years, still does not seem inclined to favor the proposal.

The stand the seaway has its start before World War I, but the first world conflict was the first real attack. The first representation made to the United States was in 1902; a joint commission was set up in 1909, establishing almost nothing. Then, in 1932, the U.S. state refused to ratify a treaty between that country and Canada to carry out the work; in 1938, Roosevelt expressed no with the proposal, but by that time, some Ontario interests were against it. In 1941, the theoretical seaway was given a new coat of paint, and new plans were drawn up.

Congress shelved the proposal without a hearing, and stated the action in 1945. Since then; there have been final flurries on the parts of the border with regard to the seaway, but nothing has been done.

Now, finally, Canada has decided that if the seaway is to be constructed at all, she may have to do it alone. If this happens, Canada will certainly be one of the best in the history of this country, and could conceivably have a huge effect on world trade. The seaway would open up whole new fields to ocean ships, and would provide for commerce for an interior area heretofore cut off to the sea.

Tremendous expansion in Ontario in the past decade has seen the province outrun its power resources again and again. Only by the building of steam plants and the harnessing of additional water power has the Hydro been able to keep pace with the industrial boom. Officials now foresee that Ontario will be crippled by 1956 or 1957 if plans are not made to provide more and more horsepower. The seaway is the logical answer.

The cost of the waterway, as estimated by officials of Canada, is tremendous. But it will not get any less as the years go by, and if Canada is to maintain her growth, the project must be taken.

BEST OF BOOKS

The late Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale has been quoted as saying that any youth eager to learn to write well, I would say three words: Read the Bible. The Bible book is the best-written book in the English language. It is more than any other book or novel, because it contains in its own pages the greatest short stories, the greatest essays, the greatest philosophy, and the greatest literary thought. It is greater than all the other books in the world combined. It has no rival."

Wendell Phillips once said (and you recall that he shook the nation with his oratory a hundred years ago) that the chief part of his education had been a strict course in Bible study which his mother conducted for her son, and the fact that she made him memorize considerable passages of Scripture.

Dad and Mother, what are you doing about teaching your children the Bible? The best thing you can do is read it yourselves, read good books that have been written about it, and then read it to your children, and make them memorize some of its most beautiful and helpful passages.

And if in my little way I may echo the words of the great figures quoted above, may I say to boys and girls, young men and young women who may be reading this brief article, that I believe there is no way by which you can prepare yourselves so effectively for a successful life and a writing career as by reading and studying the Bible.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

When a suburban area has been, to all intents and purposes, a village in its own right becomes merged at last into the expanding city, it takes the community some time to get used to city ways and to forget its village characteristics. This is particularly true with regard to suburban behavior in the motor car.

In a village, everybody knows everybody else. It is all very homely. The suburban village shopping district has a personal quality as between merchant and customer that is pretty close to domestic in spirit. They call the tune you dance.

In the village, you park your car the handiest way, whatever that happens to be, with parked, parallelled, double, triple Or if you is to grab a loaf of bread, wave it at Harry, yoo-hoo, and tell him to put it on the bill.

Driving the car within the village limits is much the same. This horse and buggy habit of hailing of a car in a village, is the nearest thing the modern car can to the horse and buggy ever come in their character. You stop to holler, or greet a friend, or to see just where you are and turn off the engine while some neighbor stands, foot on the running board to converse at leisure with you. If you are in anybody's way, well, for Pete's sake, all they have got to do is toot.

Such villages around cities some day become suburbs. And then comes the day, inexorably, as most, when the city grows out life of barracks and training with great good sense and patience.

They were, for you, good soldiers, and while I get gloomy at the need for that, its worth remembering.

The Sisters

All this deserved praise should go double for the Nursing Sisters, as almost any man who was wounded will be happy to tell you.

They used to say there was only one trouble with the nursing sisters. Their patients were always falling in love with them. So much attention, so much cheer and tenderness was often too much for a weary guy who had ended up as a casualty. His recovery might be a hundred per cent, but a lot of times he left a part of his heart in the hospital.

On many occasions I watched these young women (and many outstanding worthy under nightmare conditions, surrounded by pain, and by death, and maybe despair at their spirit. That is a story you must have heard before. It can bear repeating.

I would not want this to sound altogether like a recruiting trait, but life in the service was probably delighting to be rid of a uniform. Its men were and the adventure of service is usually a pleasant experience only in retrospect.

It seems to me an unnatural life for a girl and I wonder that any young ladies who might confuse their motives in enlisting. They were, I suppose, more matured and who, in effect, found themselves in uniform.

Three Million Young Koreans Want to Fight

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

D. S. Kim, member of the South Korean assembly and director of the Korean Pacific Press Bureau, tells me his country has plenty of manpower if it is equipped and trained for the fighting front.

"Three million young Koreans men are waiting for their chance to get into the war.

"If America will give us the arms and the training we will do the rest. Our men are particularly well equipped because they know the country and its mountainous terrain.

"Korean military experts say any 100 South Koreans, trained in American military tactics, and equipped with modern weapons, can defeat any number of Chinese. Koreans had experience with the Japanese army in the world war."

Kim is in the U. S. on a goodwill mission. On behalf of the Korean people he presented to the United Nations assembly in the free nations of the world and the heartfelt thanks of a proud and spirited people for their help in the days when the promises made in the Atlantic Charter seemed to all world, that Korea may become a free, unified and independent nation, once more on the map.

Going to See It Through

"We are going to see it through," Kim told me. "We don't know whether we are going to survive as Koreans, but we won't give up.

"South Korea must be armed and trained for future use. The war may be long. We have plenty of manpower.

"Koreans on the spot have to die anyway, so they might as well be soldiers."

Premier Kim what he thought about the view held in U. N. circles that a compromise peace might be acceptable, leaving north and south Korea separate states. He shook his head and said:

"You can't compromise with the communists. That idea won't work. It's all or nothing with them."

Kim said that even in north Korea only 10 per cent are followers of Stalin's creed.

"When the reds invaded south Korea," said Kim, "they expected that many people would flock to them, but they got no converts. Three months occupation of Seoul by the reds taught the people what communism was."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE AFTERMATH

Shouts and celebrations pass. There remains to us all who have witnessed or lived through the events that called them forth, however, something significant that is far more than the mere fabric of our being. We are influenced in more ways than we realize by what we see, or hear or read about.

Those of us who witnessed the tributes of the people given to General MacArthur, upon his return to the land for which and for which he has given over fifty of his years in the preservation of its liberty and free way of life, can hardly express in words the impression received in the sound of his voice and noting the acclaim as spontaneously given, is a great personality. Above all else that remarkable tribute was rendered to a personal friendship.

The recordings of history are the aftermath of the events that people created. It is history that makes the attempt to both record and interpret, as accurately as possible, not only the events but the people involved in them.

In the reading of the lives of great men and women, it is interesting to note how quickly the faults or mistakes of each are usually are left behind as the refining process of the character itself is unfolded. Defects show so clearly close up! At a distance they are lost sight of entirely.

One of the genuinely heroic characters who emerged from the Second World War was General Jonathan Wainwright, who for three years was a prisoner of the Japanese. I recently saw him for the first time, standing alone in the lobby of the Statler Hotel in Washington, D. C. Only a few months before he had been the famous soldier whom all revered because of the sacrifice he had endured.

An interesting incident happened to this hotel. One morning we saw this famous general go into the coffee shop and take a seat alone. Noting his arrival, a man next to him leaned over and made the remark that he had a son in Korea, wanted to know if the soldier he was addressing had ever been there. The fine-looking and beribboned soldier replied that he had been there. Then the stranger leaned over again and

ARE YOU TRAINING FOR DIABETES?

A year ago, writes a reader, I discovered that I was diabetic. I would like to give full credit to your column, for the symptoms you printed paralleled mine in almost every particular.

The reader doesn't give the date of the article which gave the symptoms, but I infer it was one in which I quoted from an American Diabetes Association Pamphlet which is distributed to the public for this very purpose; to help physicians and local health authorities find cases of diabetes which might otherwise go unrecognized until some untoward complication occurs. I mention this in order to give the address of American Diabetes Association, Inc., 11 W. 42nd St., New York 18, N. Y.—the place to write for authoritative information about diabetes—and also to justify, if I can, the printing of symptoms in a health column.

Here is precisely what a public bulletin of the 1950 Diabetes Detection Drive (Nov. 12-18) sponsored by the association said:

The danger signals which point to the possible existence of a diabetic condition in an individual are:

Excessive thirst
Excessive hunger
Excessive urination
Changes in vision
Loss of weight
Easy tiring
Intense itching
Pain in the extremities
Slow healing of cuts and bruises.

Now I'll duck for cover and let the reader carry on:

Fortunately my case has been mild, thanks to early discovery, so that we have been able to control it almost entirely by diet alone, supplemented with vitamin B, again as suggested in your column. I have become a patient of Dr.

There is no known record of diabetes in my family, but as far back as any one can remember. However, two years before I discovered it I was struck by a car and hospitalized. This article printing notes with other diabetics I find that in many cases there has been some such shock before the condition developed, although Joslin makes no mention of shock as a contributing cause.

Not in the Index, perhaps, but I'll have to delve for hours in Treatment for Diabetes before I can believe the mahatma has overlooked shock as a possible factor. As a student and admirer of Dr. Joslin's writings I am inclined to think he has investigated the point in his usual open-minded way and reached the conclusion that shock or injury does not contribute to the development of the disease.

In Diabetes Week, Nov. 12-18, '49, more than 9,000 of the 11,000 people in the city of Virginia, Minnesota had tests—self-tests or tests by physicians or technically trained persons in testing centres. More than 50 hitherto unrecognized cases of diabetes were diagnosed.

How many of us have one or another of the "danger signals" on the possible list? Not many, to time. That is unimportant. But when one has two or more symptoms listed in the list it is certainly good sense to have an immediate sugar test made—and if there is any doubt at all about it to consult a physician.

Even the studies of Dr. Joslin from his associates I gather that nearly 25% of the entire population of the United States are carriers of the potentiality or tendency to develop diabetes, through inheritance.

Fr these 35 million people I prepared the booklet Training for Diabetes. I believe study of the booklet can do harm and may do good. For a copy send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope.

The time to treat diabetes is before you are convinced you have it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Freed From Slavery

It would take a page to tell you all the benefits I have derived from Alcohol Injection Treatment. To begin with, I was freed a lifetime of slavery to tobacco.—(W. F.)

Answer—Thank you. If the lifetime was more than forty years that is a long time to suffer. If it is hard to teach old dogs new tricks. However, perhaps you can tell till you try. Send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope for the booklet on Conditioning Habit and Colon Hygiene.

Alcohol for Disinfecting

Your opinion of alcohol for sterilizing hypodermic needles and syringes, clinical thermometers, dental instruments. (B. A. M.)

Answer—Steam pressure, sterilization or boiling is always preferable, but of course you can't disinfect thermometers in that way. In practice disinfecting the insulin syrings and needle with alcohol (pure grain alcohol, ethyl alcohol) or iso—propyl alcohol is reliable.

Gloucesters Dammed Flood Of Latest Chinese Offensive

Somewhere in Korea, May 7 (Reuters)—It was disclosed Sunday that one heroic, three-day stand by a British battalion—the famous 1st Royal Gloucestershire Regiment—dammed the flood of the Chinese offensive two weeks ago.

The Chinese were reported still licking their wounds and trying to rebuild the centripetus of their attack—the forces which broke against the Gloucesters.

The battalion, part of the British 29th brigade which is the allied line now—what is left of it.

Between 500 and 600 men of the battalion are believed to have died fighting on that bloody battlefield north of the Imjin River. Only 40 or 50 got back.

Those they stopped—the communists in their drive against Seoul, believed by the United Nations staff to have been the prime objective of the Chinese offensive.

Red Deer Flea Core of West

Bug hunters are still searching patiently for two missing fleas, here in Central Alberta, Kerry Woods writes in the Calgary Herald. It all started back in the mid-1920s when this region was first settled. An English naturalist named Douglas Gregson homesteaded eight miles from the settlement that has since become the City of Red Deer, adding to his family income by making a big collection of wild animal fleas.

He sold these parasitic specimens to the late Baron Rothschild of Tring, Oxfordshire, Eng., owner of the world's largest flea collection. Our Alberta naturalist collected fleas from any wild animal he chanced to shoot or trap, the list included coyotes, wolves, wolverines, porcupines, weasels, ground squirrels, and mice.

First in Area

Douglas Gregson was the first flea collector to operate in the northwestern part of our continent said this gave Red Deer a unique distinction. Gregson collected many fleas previously unknown to the entomological world, giving "Red Deer" as the home locality of the new specimens and thus establishing this pleasant city as the Flea Capital of Western North America.

The English naturalist worked hard at flea collecting in more ways than one. Gregson's pioneer collecting kit consisted of a killing bottle and a large jar covered by sewing two linen bed-sheets together with a special drawstring top fastening. When he bagged an animal whose fleas he wanted to collect, the dead beastie was placed inside the bed-sheet bag.

Then the redoubtable naturalist stripped off all his own clothing and crawled into the bag, too, with the sheet bag. He allowed his head to stick out the top of the bag, but drew tight the drawstring fastener around his neck to prevent fleas from leaving the container. Then he stretched out alongside the dead animal, and waited.

Transferred to Him

Gregson knew that fleas will not stay on a dead body if they can avoid it. Soon they would transfer to a live host within 24 hours, or die themselves. Therefore, when the fleas left the dead fox, beaver, or muskrat in Gregson's bed-sheet bag, they found their host animal was stone-cold-in-the-shroud, while alongside their defunct host was the invitingly warm body of a live and naked naturalist, the fleas promptly executed a hop-skip-and-jump across to that collector's epidermis.

The naturalist then clapped the open mouth of a killing bottle over the smarting spot, holding the bottle firmly in place until the cyanide fumes had killed the flea. Then he transferred the tiny creature from killing bottle to a phial containing alcohol preserving the flea for science from that minute on.

"You had to be resourceful during—pioneer times," Gregson used to say, with a twinkle in his eye.

Among many other new specimens, Douglas Gregson collected in 1905, two fleas that have never been taken since by any other entomologist. The only known specimens are the originals now in the British Museum, Weasel and Vole

The host animals were a weasel and a vole, the latter animal better known by the name of meadow mouse. One of the missing fleas is labelled with the moniker of Megabothris stroz, while the other is named Megabothris ilonis.

The good naturalist who collected the originals died some years ago, a charming and learned gentleman with remembrance of many Alberta old-timers. While pioneering, flea-collecting may seem a strange one to the average citizen, it is very serious business to the scientist.

The importance of flea collecting is thoroughly appreciated by medical men laboring for improvement in human health standards, since they know that these tiny parasites have carried the germs of some of the world's worst diseases—among them the bubonic plague or Black Death, spread by flea whose host animals were rats. Those bubonic fleas caused the deaths of 40,000,000 people during the 14th century.

Hence Douglas Gregson's name will be long honored in entomology circles as the first flea collector of Western North America. Today, bug hunters will visit this Central Alberta locality periodically to trap and shoot rodents and voles, carefully collecting their fleas and adding to Gregson's collection the missing Megabothris and Ctenophyllis somewhere around Red Deer, the Flea Capital of the West.

Chinese Laughed at U.S. Planes Report Released War Prisoners

Western Front, Korea, May 7 (AP) — Fifteen United States soldiers, captured by the Communists a week ago, returned to allied lines last night and told of being interviewed by a Chinese general.

The men said they were well treated and were liberated twice—the second time after they were accidentally recaptured.

They treated us pretty well, especially after we were moved back from the front-line troops," said a soldier from Baltimore.

Censorship prevented naming of the Americans.

The story they all was the Chinese general we met—he was a big chunky man and very well dressed. He asked us a lot about our family life."

The men said the Chinese activities are carried on at night. The reds and their prisoners lay hidden in their holes all day.

"Our artillery is pretty damned good, but the Chinks don't think much of our airplanes," said one. "We caught hell from our own guns. The Chinese didn't like it either, but they laughed like crazy fools when our fighters came over on strafing runs. They could dive in their holes to get away from artillery, but they jumped up and laughed and shot at the planes.

"I think they were new to our planes."

Prize Steer Brings Record Price at Auction

Five hundred and thirty-five dollars worth of steaks — live weight — are represented in this fine Hereford steer, which was sold last week at the Belleville Livestock Sales. The steer, weighing 1530 pounds, sold for $35 per hundred pounds and was purchased for Canada Packers by Clair Russell, of Napanee (standing left foreground behind the steer). The steer was fattened on the Logan Bowie Estate at Keene, near Peterborough.

With the current high prices for livestock, community livestock sales are popular throughout many sections of Ontario, but possibly few have enjoyed the popularity and success of the Belleville Livestock Sales, just north of the city.

Opened just one year ago as the first in Eastern Ontario, the local sale draws cattle from a 50-mile radius. Volume of livestock offered at auctions is so great that it takes 16 hours or more to dispose of all the cattle.

Sales are held every Tuesday starting at one o'clock and sometimes running through until five o'clock the next morning. In that time from 175 to 200 cattle will be sold; 500 to 600 calves and ten to 25 horses, as well as numbers of pigs.

Farmers in the district have found it a profitable way in which to sell their cattle with competitive bidding assuring the highest prices going.

For instance last week saw bulls selling up to 30 cents per pound, while one prime steer sold for $35.25 per hundred pounds — the highest price ever received on a Belleville market. One Holstein bull sold for $370, and the 1530 pound steer for nearly as much.

One of Largest Auctions

The Belleville Livestock Sales, operated by Chas. E. Scott, of Belleville, and his brother, W. J. Scott, of Campbellford, along with P. O. Reake, also of Campbellford, is possibly one of the largest auctions in the province.

The sales building, including pens and sales' ring, is 200 feet long by 50 feet in width. The sales' ring is about 24 feet across and the seats have accommodation for roughly 500 persons. The evening crowd each week sees the seats always crowded.

The building is heated in Winter and air-conditioned in Summer and after each sale pens and ring are washed down and sprayed with disinfectant. City water is on tap and fire hose are spotted every 50 feet.

A regular office staff of two, augmented by four additional clerks on sale days, along with 15 yard men, assure farmers prompt service. Minutes after an animal is sold in the ring the owner calls at the office and collects his cheque.

Two Auctioneers

Two auctioneers, Cameron Bunnett and Barton Haggerty, alternate to keep the auctions moving at a fast clip. Their work is made easier by a loud speaker system, while an inter-com system allows clerks to contact workers in any part of the sales building.

When animals are unloaded at the unloading chute, bills are forwarded by wire carrier directly through to the office. Just before animals are in the ring they are weighed, the auctioneer's clerk receiving weights from the weighman through a headphone set. Immediately the price is sold the clerk forwards bills—also by wire carrier to the office where they are double-checked with receipt bills from the unloading chutes.

Women are Caterers

Women's organizations throughout the district also have a part in the weekly sale proceedings. Each week one women's church or other organization caters for meals served to both sellers and buyers.

The owners supply kitchen and lunch room facilities, while the women's organizations, Women's Institutes, or church groups, each week provide the food and the necessary labor.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma started to smile to herself, saying to pop, Do you know why I'm smiling, William?

No, my dear, but it's very becoming, pop said, and ma said, I'll tell you the story. I had lunch today in the Orchid Room of the Ritz with Blanch Slapjack, Hippie.

I hope you ordered something you thought. I'd like, pop said, and ma said, We both had sweetbreads.

Never eat them, but I suppose, you didn't remember, pop said, and ma said, The last time we lunched together I paid the check, so this time it was Blanch's turn, but Blanch is famous for her convenient memory when it comes to obligations of that sort, and I just knew she'd get out of it if she could manage it gracefully by some kind of crook. So I decided to use all my diplomacy to keep her from getting away with it. I thought of every suttle trick she mite try, and how I'd foil them, ma said.

Sutch as what, and how? pop said, and ma said, Well, in case she sat there like an absent minded sfinx when the waiter put the check down, I decided I'd sit there like 2 sfinxes. And if she tried the old trick of complaining that she didn't have anything smaller than a 20 dollar bill, I decided I'd say, "Yes, I know just how you feel, but it has to be changed some time." And William, it worked like a charm. She snatched up the check almost before the waiter had time to lay it on the table, ma said.

I seem to of lost the thread, pop said, and ma said, Don't you see, she sensed at once that I was reddy for her craftiest wiles, so she determined to save her face at the very beginning instead of the bitter end.

It's a woman's world and I love it, pop said.

Saying it from behind the sporting page.

Women's Activities

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the United Church W.M.S., was held at the home of Mrs. Everett Stratton, on Thursday afternoon, with 16 ladies in attendance. Mrs. Stratton, group leader, gave a read from Mrs. Fraser, followed by readings on the same subject by Mrs. Elmore Yirsan and Mrs. Fred Barlow.

The president, Mrs. L. W. Scott, welcomed the members and visitors, and took charge of the business. A card of thanks was read from Mrs. W. S. Dies and family for sympathy expressed at the time of their bereavement and a letter from Mrs. D. Hinchey thanking all who sent cards when she was in Toronto hospital.

Mrs. Robert McFarlane and Mrs. Saul MacFarlane each expressed their thanks for the cards they had received during their illness. The president also brought thanks from Mr. Scott for the cards sent to him. Mrs. Alfred Little sent blocks for two quilts and the secretary is to write a letter of thanks and the appreciation of the society for these.

Mrs. Orval Hinchey and Mrs. J. F. McFarlane are to be on the committee together to get the lining, the batting and have the quilts ready at the June meeting. It was decided to have a pot-luck supper and quilting in the church hall on the regular meeting on June 7th. Each member is to bring a contribute two articles of food for the dinner and to bring in their spare good used clothing, and quilts to be sent to overseas relief work.

Mrs. Scott offered prayer for the absent members who are ill, and thanked the hostess and her group for the program and refreshments.

The next literature secretary, Mrs. J. F. McFarlane, read the second of Dr. Lily B. Mathieson's articles, of Deseronto, at the close of the material, urging the members to use their influence in the "conscience" cause. A litany of dedication was read by the group leader, in which the members pledged themselves to work for peace and to do all possible in relieving the misery and want of the needy.

Mrs. W. D. Roberts led a quiz-tionnaire on what is being done for war victims in the giving of food and clothing, which was answered by Mrs. Stratton, who pointed out that this assistance is given where it is most needed, regardless of race, color or creed.

After the closing hymn, the hostess and her assistants served refreshments and all enjoyed a social time.

Color Big Factor in Modern Design Says British Artist

Toronto — (CP) — Inexpensive things can be beautiful, says the British artist Anna Zinkeisen. It's the design rather than the price that counts.

Miss Zinkeisen, now on her way home following a visit to Canada, said in a recent interview that Canadian women are much like British women in their tastes.

Commissioned by the Lawley Group of Potteries at Stoke-on-Trent to create China designs, she visited New York, Montreal and Toronto — to discover what Canadian and United States women seek when they go buying china.

"Canadian women all have a feeling for designs more or less modernistic," she said. "They don't care for anything very violent."

Pretty, with smooth brown hair and gentle grey eyes, this Scottish - born artist has decided ideas on beauty and its price.

"A thing doesn't necessarily have to be expensive to be beautiful," she said. "It's the design that really counts."

So much can be done with color. Even a subtle change in the shade of a wall can make a tremendous difference in a room, she said urging one of her favorite themes.

Hospital Colors

Miss Zinkeisen, who has made a name for herself in Britain as a portrait - painter, chose the colors for the St. Mary's Hospital at Paddington where she worked as a volunteer nurse in the last war.

"Hospital walls needn't be white," she said. "Think of all the delicate pastel shades there are—there is a tremendous range between white and the palest blue."

She thought the paint manufacturers have yet to investigate the wide range of color.

Again on the subject of hospitals she suggested a "pearly pink" for the walls of private rooms.

"And give the patients a picture to look at" she said, "something cheerful."

Outstanding examples of Miss Zinkeisen's work include the equestrian murals on board the Queen Mary, scenes which the artist took particular delight in doing. She confessed that she is "keen on horses," and has "hunted a lot."

Miss Zinkeisen is married to Col. Guy Hasslline and has a 17-year-old daughter who also is studying to be an artist.

New Spring Togs Attract British After Long Rain

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP) — In the first days of spring sunshine bright shop windows proved an irresistible magnet for British women bored by the long wet winter.

Lunch-time crowds flocked around clothing stores, drawn by windows dressed in spring flowers and displaying crisp, fresh dresses and colored cottons.

The office worker dreaming of summer weekends on the Thames or rush trips to the seaside, and the Mayfair debutante contemplating her Ascot finery all went window-shopping—or shop-gazing as they call it here.

With memories of the wettest winter on record and the dull summer of 1950, would-be Ascot belles can't make up their minds between sunshine or taffeta, organdie or nylon, and the sensible light-weight woolie that may mean the difference between a happy cold and a smug enjoyment of the race.

Designers try to meet necessity half-way by combining sleeveless tailored coats of shantung and taffeta and matching or lighter-weight dresses. One such attempt is a slim woven shantung dress in black and white horizontal pattern teamed with a full black taffeta coat, with big bell sleeves cut in one piece.

This ensemble and others like it cost around £40 ($180). The full coat is complementary to the dress when merely carried over the arm.

Top choice in summer materials, both for race meetings and holiday in Britain, will be the latest nylons, a British product with new sparkle and texture. There are more than 90 types of sheer and brocade materials including the latest nylons made from superfine yarn, woven lace effects, voiles with lattice stripes and iridescent organzas with metal threads.

Tub frocks and garden frocks in gaily-printed cottons can still be had for less than 30s. ($4.50). While lovely shantungs with skirt fullness, cuffed, strapless top and matching bolero cost around £8.

Surprise of the season is the increasing number of smart-cut play-suits, and beach-suits at moderate prices. Typical is a tailored white sharkskin play-suit with straight, knee-length bra-line and brief, uncuffed shorts tied by a colored waist sash costing only 63 shillings.

Precious Gifts Pour Into Palace After Marriage

By FRED J. EUST

Cairo, May 7. (AP)— Precious gifts poured into Cairo's Abdin Palace today following the gala marriage at which King Farouk I reportedly made beautiful 17-year-old Narriman Sadek his queen.

As the Nile Kingdom continued its jubilant rejoicing at the nuptials with a public holiday today, Farouk and his commoner bride prepared for a tea party at the ladies' tonight. A gala diplomatic reception tomorrow night will wind up the festivities.

The shieds of foreign diplomatic missions arrived at the palace today, bringing gifts from their heads of state.

United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery delivered from President Truman a set of four matched Steuben glass vases. Truman had given one vase, and Farouk one—to Iran's Shah on his recent marriage.

Many of the gifts were of solid gold. Some were decorated with diamonds and other precious stones.

King Abdullah of Hashemite Jordan sent a 13-piece toilet set of pure gold, studded with diamonds and other precious stones, along with two gold chandeliers. 101 Salute Guns

The wedding of Farouk and Narriman was announced to the public yesterday with the booming of 101 salute guns. They set off a gigantic double celebration—of the marriage and of the 15th anniversary of the 31-year-old monarch's reign.

While the bride waited in her widowed mother's modest home, a 30-minute all-male Moslem ceremony at Rubber Palace joined the couple.

Later Narriman made her first public appearance as queen, driving the ten miles to Abdin Palace past more than 1,000,000 of her cheering new subjects.

As the Nile Kingdom continued its jubilant rejoicing at the nuptials with a public holiday today, Farouk and his commoner bride prepared for a tea party at the ladies' tonight. A gala diplomatic reception tomorrow night will wind up the festivities.

The shieds of foreign diplomatic missions arrived at the palace today, bringing gifts from their heads of state.

United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery delivered from President Truman a set of four matched Steuben glass vases. Truman had given one vase, and Farouk one—to Iran's Shah on his recent marriage.

Many of the gifts were of solid gold. Some were decorated with diamonds and other precious stones.

King Abdullah of Hashemite Jordan sent a 13-piece toilet set of pure gold, studded with diamonds and other precious stones, along with two gold chandeliers. 101 Salute Guns

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Courtesy, Unlimited

Dear . . . one flam, thank . . . to which we don't have . . . economics!

On envelopes never write city and state on the same line

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. On the inside envelope of engraved wedding invitations should the names of "Mr. and Mrs. John Hill" or "Mr. and Mrs. Hill"?

2. On the outside envelope is the address written in three or four lines—that is, the name of the city and the name of the state written on the same line?

June bride

1. The inside envelope carries the surname only . . . no need to have the first name. Correct: Mr. and Mrs. Hill.

2. On all envelopes . . . business, professional, social . . . the name of the city and the name of the state should be written on separate lines. And this is particularly important on wedding invitation envelopes, which should follow a very definitely prescribed form. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Hill
123 Pleasant Ave. . . .
Haven City, 2
New York

Must one send a wedding present?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Formerly there seemed such a definite distinction between wedding invitations and wedding announcements; that is, wedding invitations were sent to relatives and friends, announcements to acquaintances. But nowadays it seems that everyone is sent an invitation, and very seldom are announcements sent at all. So what is one to do when a mere acquaintance than a friend of either the bride or groom or of either family is married? In ways send a present when one receives an invitation?

2. And in the few cases when one does receive an announcement, is one expected to send anything about acknowledging it?

R. P.

1. You're very right about this dilemma that arises from today's new custom of sending wedding invitations to the entire list, and therefore no announcements. And many people are puzzled by this same question. But as a matter of fact there is no obligation for anyone except relatives and intimate friends to send a wedding present.

2. It is not strictly necessary to acknowledge a wedding announcement . . . but it is generous, polite, to at least write a friendly little note of good wishes.

Widow's name in telephone Directory

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband died last month. Our telephone has always been listed in the telephone directory in his name; let's say John Henry Clark. How shall I tell the telephone company to make the listing now—Mrs. Mary Clark or M. C.

No Your telephone listing should now be: Mrs. John Henry Clark.

Attractive Accessories

Gloves and hat.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

IT is wonderful how well some tailor gloves simulate suede. A well cut, well-sewn glove of fine fabric such as double woven cotton can stand squarely on its own merits and claim sartorial fame. This handsome glove has a cuff that can be regulated to a varying depth. The glove has hand stitching for back stripe, cuffs and fingers. A nice little color of white straw sports a double cuff of navy blue velvet. In addition, a lone feather slips through a rhinestone ring in front. A navy mesh veil is an added attraction.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He's in Service—wants her to date, but not steady.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For two years I went steady with a boy who is now in service. He told me he wanted me to date other boys while he was away but not to go out with the same one all the time. He wants me to wait for him.

He has now been gone two months, and I haven't dated once, one since he left. I think I love him, but I wonder if I love him enough to wait three years until he gets back. Please help me decide what to do.

M. E.

Dear M.E.:

If I think your young man gave you some very sound advice, and if I were you I would follow it. In other words, you should go out with a number of other boys and have good times with them. It would be very foolish for you not to make any dates over a long period of time. In fact, I think if you have not been doing so as long as two months, it was a mistake.

The point is, that if you get to know as many boys as possible, it will help you make up your mind whether or not you like the one with whom you are corresponding to marry him when the time comes. He evidently has the good sense to realize this, so take your cue from him.

Intrigued by the girl who's not interested

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have two girl friends, both of whom I like very much. One of them is specially fond of me, but the other one isn't, and she is the one I like best.

What shall I do about this?

G. J.

Dear G.J.:

Your problem is a very common one. Unfortunately those we most like aren't always interested in us! Sometimes it's just because the latter person pays little attention to us that we feel intrigued.

About all you can do to get this girl to like you better is to pay her some special attentions that will make her understand you're particularly interested in her. If she doesn't respond, though, you had better stick to the one who likes you. Maybe, if you get to be better friends, you'd find you liked her just as well as the one you find so hard to get.

BEAUTY

Keeping in form

You'll laugh at yourself.

Nerve tension seems to be a common trouble these days. You see it expressed in faces, but it is expressed even more in figures—in drooping shoulders, jerky steps, and in muscles that are tied into knots. What to do? A combination of simple exercises, together with periods of relaxation, may put one on the right and cheerful track.

Teachers of physical education will tell you that many women aren't interested in their muscles, even when awakened, sagging muscles have destroyed the neat, youthful lines of their figures. The word exercise brings sneers! They're tired. They fancy that any kind of calisthenics will make them even more fatigued. That is where they are wrong. Rhythmic movements make the blood streams dance, have a favorable effect upon the glands, help the body to send away waste materials. A ten-minute workout and a half-hour rest will put the tired woman all together again, send her thoughts in pleasant channels.

Are you doubtful? The fact has been demonstrated time and again at salons where feminine shapes are remolded and made over, under the supervision of specialists who understand what makes us tick.

Suppose you feel dull and dumpy. You're tired of a lot of things—looking at grocery bills that take your breath away, chasing to a beauty shop to have your hair done, sitting under a drier for forty minutes. You wish the members of your family would keep track of their belongings, so you wouldn't be tearing around looking for them half the time. There's a pile of mending waiting for you.

All right; That's the way thousands of women feel at times. You are going to pull out. Take off your outer garments; lie on your back in bed, a pillow under your head. Place your hands under your hips. Lift your legs slowly, with plenty of muscle pull on your mid-section; keep on lifting them until you have a fairly standing on the back of your neck. Stay that way while you count five. Lower your legs slowly. Wow! You puff a little. That shows you need what you are doing.

Do this five or six times! Then go limp as a rag. Put your hands at your sides and take long, deep breaths—inhaling through your nostrils and exhaling through your lips—then start the leg-lifting again. Believe it or not, but this exercise is fun. You'll laugh at yourself, and laughter is energizing, sustaining, good for morale. Make this exercise a daily practice. It will ward off fat cells, too.

STATUE ABANDONED

Aurora, May 7 — (CP) Thieves Saturday night tried to steal the pumpkin from its pedestal to stop the entrance gates to St. Andrew's College. The 1,000 - pound bronze statue, valued at $1,500, was abandoned when it toppled from its perch and sank almost 2 feet into the ground.

Royal Neckline Gets Comment In England

London, May 7. (AP)—The decline and fall of Princess Margaret's neckline made piquant reading today for followers of royal family fashion trends.

Last week, the 20-year-old Princess appeared in public for the first time in a strapless, shoulders-bare pink satin gown. Fashion writers, putting two and two together, figured that the Princess finally had won her battle for emancipation.

Princess Margaret's victory followed a three-year campaign which started when the Queen ordered dressmakers to "fill in" anything that was low-cut.

The Princess, who has said she wants to be known as the world's best-dressed woman, made her appearances in the new neckline at a ball in the Grosvenor House Hotel last Monday and at the opening of the Royal Festival Concert Hall last Thursday.

Fifteen Persons Die Violently During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Fifteen persons died violently in accidents across Canada during the weekend, seven were from Ontario, six from Quebec and two from Nova Scotia.

A Canadian Press survey showed traffic accidents took the lives of nine persons, two others died in what police termed a murder and suicide and one man was drowned. An R.C.A.F. pilot died in a plane crash, a sailor suffocated and the battered body of a vagrant was found in a brick kiln.

Police said Sunday a family quarrel touched off the murder of Mrs. Rose Matisse, 36, and the suicide of her slayer, Maurice Matisse, 16, at their Joliette, Que., home Saturday night.

A level crossing accident near Smiths Falls, Saturday took the lives of Ken Audette, 41, and Mrs. Gaston Robillard, 41, both of St. Casimir, Que.

Yvette Poirier, 20, of Montreal, was killed in a two-car highway accident in which she was riding when out of control and overturned near Drummondville, Que.

A 26-year-old volunteer fireman from Weyburn, Sask., Ernest Hamilton, was burned to death Saturday when his motorcycle collided with a fire truck answering a call with a truck near Warwick.

A nurse was fatally injured in Fraser Canada, 66, Sunday, in Glace Bay, N.S.

Five-year-old Harry Sheffield died from injuries received when struck by a car while crossing the road near his Upper Canada, M.S., home.

The body of Tyrell Banks, 21-year-old vagrant was found in the fire sprawled in the entrance of a St. Thomas brick kiln. His head and face had been badly battered.

Not Much Glamor In Model's Life

Vancouver (CP)—A model's life is a lot of hard work and early-to-bed routine, and little glamor.

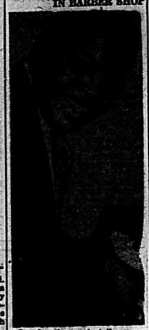
A Vancouver girl and former top-flight New York Powers model, Sandra Saxby, has pricked the glamor myth surrounding modelling.

She said any girl with a decent figure (reasonably thin) and fairly regular features, who isn't clumsy as an ox, can make big grade in New York—provided she is willing to work hard all day and sleep plenty at night.

It's work, not glamor, that brings results.

"Girls go to New York starry-eyed at visions of seeing stars at the Stork Club and such," she said, "but a successful model has to skip the night life."

REFUSED HAIRCUT IN BARBER SHOP



Legal action against the owner of a barber shop which refused to cut his hair is being considered by Cesare Peterson, Negro pianist. He said he walked into a Hamilton, Ont., shop, was told the shop was closed, then saw another a white — man arrive after him and have his hair cut. Mr. Peterson, who described the incident as an "awful comedown" after his bragging about conditions in Canada during a tour of the Southern United States, received the apologies of Mayor Lloyd Jackson. — Central Press Canadian.

Polymer's firefighting brigade, specially trained and equipped to handle chemical fires, fought the blaze with the help of men from Canadian Oil Co. The fire was finally under control less than an hour after the explosion.

Saw Blinding Flash

During firefighting operations, water was poured on seven other large storage tanks containing the same chemical. Firefighters said that if flames had reached any of these there would have been another explosion and it might have knocked off the big storage tanks of Imperial Oil Company. If this had happened they said, Sarnia, a city of about 34,000, would have been flattened.

An eyewitness, Carl Monk, who was driving toward the city and was 10 miles from the plant at the time of the explosion said he saw "blinding flash similar to sheet lightning."

This was followed by "flames and smoke", shortly after. He also very much like we've seen in pictures on an atomic bomb explosion."

He said that when he passed Stone Water, a community across the highway from the plant, people were fleeing everywhere. The explosion had broken practically very window in the village.

Polymer, built during the Second World War when Japanese victories left the Allied short of natural rubber, is considered one of the most important parts of Canada's defence production.

Immediately after the fire all gates to the plant were locked and guarded. Unauthorized persons were forbidden to enter.

The fire produced intense heat and melted several metal distillation towers 60 to 80 feet high. The first flash of flame shot 300 feet into the air and was seen clearly at points miles from Sarnia.

Residents of Springville, Mich., seven miles west, could see the flames, and excited reports of the blast being heard came from Chatham, 50 miles south. In Strathroy, 40 miles east, windows were rattled.

MARSHALL TAKES

Testimony to be Screened

And like MacArthur's testimony, Marshall's was to be made public piecemeal after being screened for matter whose release military and state department officials feel might affect security.

Marshall faced almost-certain questioning on two points:

1. MacArthur's assertion that in a war study prepared last Jan. 12 the joint chiefs of staff went with the Korean war strategy he has advocated and for which he was fired. He said he assured the joint chiefs were vetoed by Marshall or Truman.

2. MacArthur's contention that Marshall over-ruled the joint chiefs recommendation that say Korean peace talks should not included (a) Admission of the Chinese reds to the United Nations and (b) the eventual fate of Formosa, now held by the Chinese Nationalists. He said he opposed any discussion of those questions for any possible peace talks.

MacArthur argued that a stalemate in Kores—or the "appeasement" of which he expressed fear—would look to Soviet Russia like a sign of western weakness.

"The military action of your potential enemy is already under way," he said at one point. "I believe if you don't overcome it in Korea you are doomed to destruction. I believe it is already started, and if you let it grow and increase by the enemy, you will get engulfed."

One probable line of administration counter-attack appeared likely to be that MacArthur after 14 years in the Pacific, can't see the broader picture.

COURT STUMPED TOO

Temple Cloud, England (CP) — A doctor told a juvenile court in this Somerset village that a 14-year-old boy could solve a legal question relating to the similarity between a cow, a snake and a sparrow. The court did not know idea is to build up a reserve of "They are all alive."

TIMES CHANGE

Peace River, Alta. — (CP) — The end of an era was seen when the last public barn in Peace River was closed recently. Its usefulness ended when farmers began using cars, trucks or tractors for their visits to town.

SIGNS OF SPRING.

The most definite signs of spring yesterday despite the fact the mercury jittered the countryside with spots of half and occasionally full snows. The crack of leather on wood and mitt rang out in exhibition Park and the Alemite Field as baseball and softball squads of the city got in their first practice licks.

* * *

Jack Carson's Belleville Baseball Association Central Ontario entry had a fine turnout at the Fair Grounds with a representative list of fixtures on hand. The boys went through an easy throwing session to get some of the winter stiffness out of their arms and system, and nothing of a strenuous nature was indulged in. Out there tossing the ball around were youthful Billy Strahan, one of the city's most promising flinger hurlers, the veterans "Chuck" Barrage and "Coffee" Noakes, Sammy Malholland, ex-pro hockey player and voted the most valuable player in the COBL two seasons ago, McGregor and two or three middenified chaps, all of whom resembled pitchers. Dick Fitzpatrick, Vern Goyer, Red Carson, Mamie Bush, and other city players were there getting the old wing wider kinks out of their systems. A fine turnout for the initial practice.

The infield was in splendid condition, the results of a lot of hard work on the part of Mr. Nichonon, the grounds keeper. Loads of fill will be placed in various parts of the outfield and by the time the work is completed the playing area will be one of the best in years.

GERALD AND ATHOL

The sound and the fury was ever. Big Ben Morgan was weeping, figuratively speaking, into his shirt sleeve at his mere non-appearance of defeat at the hands of the British blueblood wrestler Lord Athol Layton, so when the post-bout bombast was over we wandered into the "private" dressing - room of His Lordship and Gerald.

* * *

'Is Ludship towered his six feet six of solid bone and muscle over us as we entered. Gerald took the reportorial fedora like the perfect gentleman he is, deposited it carefully and hung it on a four-inch spike that served as a temporary hat-rack.

* * *

"You, my man" quoth the impenetrable pachydermic edition of Jeeves, "what can we do for you, sir?" The press card flashed under the Geraldic proboscis and his face immediately became wreathed in smiles. Had there been a cocktail spot or tea and tomato on tap at the moment, I dare say around, we would have been presented with one or the other.

* * *

Gerald is perfection plus. He bowed us to a seat on a hardwood bench that cluttered the room on three sides. He proffered us a monogrammed cigarette. Then a gilded lighter flashed a flame. It was service de luxe.

* * *

'Is Ludship looked on with an amused smile on his handsome face. A true Britisher, he is no "phony" nor was he born in "Brooklyn" as some will have it. His blood is as blue as the Caribbean and he, in all truth, is heir to vast estates in his native shire of Surrey in England.

* * *

Then it happened. Gerald parked the now-famous umbrella in a corner, lit a cigarette after rudely doing down the "master" and both Lord Layton and he dropped the wrestling roles and reverted to the perfect English gentlemen type. And they are just that.

* * *

We cannot divulge "Gerald's" real name. But we can say he was a wing commander in the Royal Air Force when hell and high water was raging in the Far East. Lord Layton has a war record of which he is justifiably proud. Both are splendid fellows, and it was a pleasure to sit and chat with them.

* * *

Layton was quite a shap in wrestling circles in the Far East and Gerald "discovered" him. The two met at a wrestling match and a firm friendship was started, one that has lasted for years. In fact "Gerald", after being discharged from the RAF flew back to the Far East to be with, his friend, and has been with him since.

* * *

The British socialite has several Far-East championships to his credit. He took on and defeated the best the Malayan, Java, Singapore, Indonesia and the Dutch Indies had to offer, including several American "tourist" wrestlers. He also battled with the local lads, "stinking little bounders" as Gerald describes them. He met his American debut last season and wrestled in Maple Leaf Gardens in his first Canadian appearance also during last summer. He is possessed of a grand physique, weighs 256 pounds stretched over a six-foot six frame and has an overall reach of 86½ inches. He speaks cultured English, never uses profanity and has all the manners of his title and place in society. So has Gerald, for that matter. They received gentlemen in the literal sense of the word, and it was a distinct pleasure for this reporter to visit them in their dressing room last Friday night.

Cliff Chambers, Pirates' Hurler, Pitches Major Leagues' First No-Hitter for This Season

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The toast of the baseball world today is Cliff Chambers, a lukewarm baseball property whose only previous claim to fame was his ability to throw a "duster" as expertly as he flings a curve.

Chambers made baseball history yesterday when he hurled a no-hit, no-run game, a feat no other Pittsburgh pitcher had been able to accomplish in the club's long tenure in the National League.

Chambers toiled eight, but he was deadly in the clutches and only one Boston batter reached second base. That was in the sixth when the no-hitter was in deepest danger. With two out, Tommy Holmes sent a long smash to right center but the fleet-footed Pirate flychaser made a circus catch over his head. Only one other ball was hit hard enough to cause Pirate fielders to tense. That came in the ninth when Walker Cooper blasted a pitch to deep center, but Clyde McCullough hauled it in near the 390 - foot sign.

The no - hitter overshadowed a hectic Sunday that featured six baseball - headers, 18 home runs, three extra - inning games, and 21 walks in one game.

The final - game St. Louis Cardinals thumped the Dodgers 11-7 despite a pair of circuit clouts by Brooklyn's Pee Wee Reese. After blowing a 5-0 lead, the Cards bounced back with four runs in the eighth to overcome a 7-5 Brooklyn edge.

Phils Split

Philadelphia and Chicago split a doubleheader. The Phils won the opener 5-4 and the Cubs took the 10-inning nightcap 6-5 on a two-run double by Granny Hamner featured 4 four - run uprising in the sixth to give Bubba Church his second Philadelphia victory. The Cubs clubbed Robin Roberts and Bob Miller for 17 hits in the finale. Triples by Woody Burgess and Bob Ramazzotti accounted for the winning runs in the 10th.

New York's Giants and Cincinnati also divided a twin bill. Virgil Stallcup's 10th - inning homer gave the Reds a 4-3 victory in the opener. The Giants took the nightcap 8-5 on Hank Thompson's three-run four-bagger in the first inning.

New York Yankees whipped the Tigers 11-6 for their eighth straight victory and increased their American League lead to 2 games.

Rookie Mickey Mantle led the 12-hit Yankee assault with three hits and three runs batted in.

Washington and Cleveland split a doubleheader. Julio Moreso pitched the Indians to an 8-7 seven - hit victory in his first start of the season. Bob Chakales won a 2 rookie duel from Washington's Bob Ross in the second game. Lou Brissie, charged with the Indians' first - game loss, came to Chakales' rescue in the ninth, retiring three men in order with the tying runs on the bases.

Chicago's White Sox swept two games from the Athletics 4-1 and 8-3. Ken Holcome won a five-hitter in the opener. Four Philly hurlers issued 15 walks to make it easy for Chicago in the second game. The A's received six walks.

Ted Williams' home run in the 10th gave Boston Red Sox a 5-4 victory over the Browns but St Louis came back to win the second game 8-2. Eight-hit pitching by Al Widmar and a three - run homer by catcher Sherman Lollar gave the Browns the split.

Hurler Did Not Realize He Was Making History

(By The Canadian Press)

Cliff Chambers "just didn't notice" that he was fashioning a no-hitter in the nightcap of the Pittsburgh Pirates-Boston Braves doubleheader Sunday until the ninth inning rolled around.

His Pittsburgh teammates, however, sensed that he had it in the making even as early as the seventh—but they kept mum. They didn't want to excite him as he moved toward the first major league no-hitter since last Aug. 11.

"It came to me as soon as I went out to pitch the ninth, especially after the Boston crowd cheered me when I singled in the eighth," he said in the dressing room.

Switzerland and Brazil gained the second round of the European zone Davis Cup elimination Saturday. West Germany took a 2-1 lead over Yugoslavia Sunday.

The Swiss qualified to meet Poland next by winning four games straight from Luxembourg at Lausanne.

At Helsinki, Brazil advanced to the second round with a victory over Finland 4-1 in the best-of-five series.

At Yonkers, N.Y., Tokyo Express, a 5-1 shot driven by Stanley Dancer, won the $25,000 Direct pace at Yonkers Raceway Saturday night before 26,231, the largest crowd of the spring meeting. The mutuel handle on the race was $171,036, the biggest for a single race in harness racing records.

The handle for the eight races was 1,115,662, setting an all-time one-day record for harness racing. It was the third time during the week that the wagering has exceeded $1,000,000.

In Edmonton, goalie Al Rollins of Toronto Maple Leafs, Stanley Cup champions said Saturday that without high-scoring Maurice (Rocket) Richard the Montreal Canadiens are just a senior team.

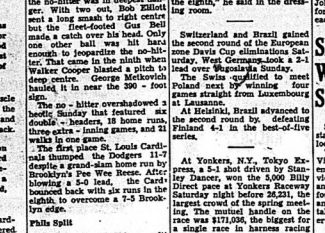
"Take away Richard and it's like playing at any other senior hockey team," Toronto's rookie netminder said in an interview.

The English county cricket season had a rain-sodden start Saturday. Not a single game went through the day without interruption while players scurried for shelter. Four games couldn't start at all.

At Victoria, B.C., Salem Senators and Victoria Athletics went at it for 23 innings here Saturday before Salem-owned Stadium in Western International Baseball League victory. The struggle lasted four hours and 36 minutes.

At least three records were set: Longest W.I.L. game; most consecutive scoreless innings; longest string of shutout innings by one pitcher.

Salem first baseman George McDonald set another mark by handling 25 putouts and two assists. The teams handled a combined total of 194 chances with only one error—McDonald dropped a pop foul.



Never, after cubhood.

The long, slightly curved claws of an adult grizzly bear prevent him from climbing trees as the black bear can. While he is a cub though, the grizzly is very adept climber! These majestic bears are spectacular Canadian features. They are becoming rare, and should be protected.

Ab Demarco Most Valuable Player in AHL

New York, May 7—(CP)—Ab Demarco, veteran centre with Buffalo Bisons, has been chosen the American Hockey League's most valuable player.

Demarco, Niagara Falls, Ont., star who has been playing pro hockey since 1938, received 27 of a possible 45 points in the balloting, on a 5-3-1 point basis, was made by the circuit's press and radio.

Demarco, who will be 35 Thursday, led the league in scoring with 37 goals and 76 assists for 113 points in 64 games — just five points short of the all-time league mark of 118 set by Carl Liscombe with Providence in the 1947-48 season.

Demarco's selection as the most valuable player brought him the Leslie Cunningham Trophy and a $300 cash bonus. He has received $200 for being the top scorer and another $300 for being picked on the all-star team.

Runner-up for the M.V.P. award was Freddie Glover of Indianapolis with seven points. Four players, Paul Meger of Buffalo, Wally Hergesheimer and Fred Thomas of Cleveland and coach Johnny Crawford of Hershey tied for third place with five points each.

Shoemen, Flyers Win Opening Soccer Games

Soccer got away to a fine 1951 start on Saturday with all three local district entries seeing action.

The Belleville team were hosts to the Oshawa Kingston, and emerged easy winners with a 10-1 victory over the visitors. Three goals and Hawrylih each accounted for four Batawa goals with Tisseldine of the latter scoring five remaining tallies. Jennes got the lone counter for the visitors.

Only two members of last year's Vimy team were available and the squad on Saturday were composed mainly of keen but raw youngsters and doubtless give a better account of themselves after more experience.

No. 6 Repair Depot RCAF defeated the Peterborough O'Hallon-ans on the station field by a score of five to three in a close hard fought match. Fletcher, Aarens, Sowell, Barns, and Woodcock scored for the winners with Payne (2) and Downer counting for the visitors.

The Belleville team travelled to Kingston where they were guests of the Kingston United and came home pointless after a 5-0 defeat.

Next Tuesday all six teams will see action in the opening matches of the Bay of Quinte League. At the Fair Grounds in Belleville the lake will be the Army and Navy Veterans with Mayor R. T. Potter kicking off to open the season. The game starts at 6.30.

The other games are No. 6 R.D. and Batawa at the Flyer's field, and Trenton Merchants and Picton Gunners at Memorial Park in Trenton.

A start will be made this year, said league president Les Digby, to introduce soccer to the junior ranks. Digby has become a committee of the Bay of Quinte League is under the chairmanship of Jack Bateman who will co-operate with the Belleville Recreation Commission in providing coaching facilities at the various playgrounds two-nights a week, during the summer. In the fall it is hoped two competitions will be organized for juniors to be donated by Frank Follwell, M.P. and William (Bill) Harvey.

Lacrosse Champs Will Not Play This Season

Toronto, May 7 (CP) — Owen Sound Crescents, 1950 Canadian lacrosse champions, have dropped from the Ontario Amateur Association's Senior League this year, Chuck Bowie, secretary of the Ontario association, announced Sunday.

Bowman said he has been notified by Harold Hindman, secretary of the Owen Sound club, that the Mann Cup holders will fold for the 1951 season.

Reason for the Crescents' decision, Bowman said, was the situation left by the resignation of the chairman and two members of the Owen Sound Arena Commission in a dispute over the use of proceeds from the Allan Cup hockey finals between Owen Sound Mercurys and Fort Frances Canadians. The commission positions have not been filled.

The Crescents defeated New Westminster (B.C.) in seven games last year to take the Mann Cup.

Bowman said the O.L.A. senior league will continue a 30-game schedule among seven remaining teams starting May 18.

Barrie Flyers Need One Game To Win Trophy

Brandon, Man., May 7—(CP—"Three down and one to go," was the chant of Barrie Flyers after knocking off Winnipeg Monarchs on Saturday night for their third successive win in the dominion junior hockey final.

Fourth and what could be the final contest of the best-of-seven Memorial Cup series will be played at Winnipeg Monday night.

After being bounced by identical 5-1 scores in the first two games, Monarchs made a spirited bid Saturday to prolong the series to at least five games. However, Barrie was not to be denied and won the contest on Real Chevrefils' third-period goal.

Other Flyer goal-getters were Leo Labbe, Bill Hagan and Don Emms. Team captain Elliott Cherlay paced the Regals with two goals and an assist behind Lou Zarie for the other.

Barrie goalkeeper Lorne Howes, who hadn't been tested too hard in the first two games, turned in a solid performance, especially in the third period when Monarchs were pressing for the equalizer. At the other end, Don Collins battled the high-scoring Flyers on numerous difficult plays but let two soft goals get by, including the second and winning markers.

The eastern champions, who outshot Monarchs 33-27, held a 2-1 margin at the end of the first period. Winnipeg scored two straight goals in the second period to take the lead, for the first time in the series, but Barrie evened the score before the session ended. Chevrefils settled the issue in the last frame.

Fifteen penalties were slight to Barrie—were handed out during the rugged contest, including majors to Monarchs' Blair Mitchell and Flyers' Jackie White for fighting in the first period.

Coaches Claim They were Robbed In Overtime Tie

Toronto (CP)—Two hockey coaches said that the other picked the wrong team as a result of 4-4 overtime draw Tuesday and then said: "We were robbed."

The players were too tired to say anything.

The dressing room comment came from east-going Leafs (Tue) after a 4-4 draw with O'Flaherty and Allen, Vallerfield Streets and Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs fought to the 4-4 tie in the third game of their Alexander Cup finals.

The home-town scribe over stands at 1-1-1, with the deciding Fourth game will be played here Tuesday night, with the fifth slated for the Montreal Forum Thursday. The remaining games, if necessary, will be played in Toronto.

Vallerfield won the first game 4-1 in Montreal and lost the second by 4-1, in Toronto.

Praise for Goalie

O'Flaherty, playing-coach of the powerful Monarchs, had praise for his big netminder, Jim Bigford who once again turned in a spectacular performance. However, he figured his forward lines should have got past the Braves' rock-ribbed defence.

"We were robbed on some counts," he commented.

Said Allen:

"My defencemen were tops. They played a good game. We should have beaten Hughes on at least two more shots . . .

Monarchs' Jimmy Javeties, were forced to come from behind three times to gain the tie. The teams were stalemated 2-2 at the end of the first period. Vallerfield connected for the only goal of the second and then Monarchs outscored the Quebec champions 3-1 in the final.

Jack Muldrum, a big right-winger who hails from Edmonton, tallied two goals for Monarchs, John Wetsen and Eddie Mulligan got the others.

Larry Kwong was the big gun for the Braves. He scored two goals, while Don Menzies and Andre Corriveau came up with singles.

Referees Hap Shouldice and Stan Pratt, both of Oshawa, handed out only 10 penalties—seven of them coming in the second period.

One of the penalties was a match misconduct to Johnny Ubriaco, a stocky little centre from Sault Ste. Marie who likes to mix it up. Ubriaco was benched from the game in the second period when he argued too strenuously over a minor penalty.

Hughes, one of the greatest amateur netminders in Canada, handled a total of 31 shots, 18 of them coming in the third period. Paul Leclerc kicked out 26, most of them labelled.

MATERIALS SHIPPED

Pusan, Korea, May 4 (AP) — A captured North Korean official said today that stone-bomb materials were shipped from the Kores to Russia and China in the last three years.

Chi Yee Yong, former chief of red Korea's general affairs section, told a South Korean investigating committee that the materials—monazite and tantalite —came from mines in northeastern Kores. Both contain small amounts of uranium.

The former red official said Russian engineers supervised the mining operations.

Count Turf Wins Kentucky Derby In Easy Fashion

By NELLE VANCE

Louisville, Ky., May 7 — (AP) — The Derby, Kentucky's fabulous horse race spectacular, was run today before a record crowd of 100,000 persons and then said: "It's over Bakhtar."

The players were too tired to say anything.

The dressing room comment came from east-going Leafs (Tue) after a 4-4 draw with O'Flaherty and Allen, Vallerfield Streets and Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs fought to the 4-4 tie in the third game of their Alexander Cup finals.

The home-town scribe over stands at 1-1-1, with the deciding Fourth game will be played here Tuesday night, with the fifth slated for the Montreal Forum Thursday. The remaining games, if necessary, will be played in Toronto.

Vallerfield won the first game 4-1 in Montreal and lost the second by 4-1, in Toronto.

Praise for Goalie

O'Flaherty, playing-coach of the powerful Monarchs, had praise for his big netminder, Jim Bigford who once again turned in a spectacular performance. However, he figured his forward lines should have got past the Braves' rock-ribbed defence.

"We were robbed on some counts," he commented.

Said Allen:

"My defencemen were tops. They played a good game. We should have beaten Hughes on at least two more shots . . .

Monarchs' Jimmy Javeties, were forced to come from behind three times to gain the tie. The teams were stalemated 2-2 at the end of the first period. Vallerfield connected for the only goal of the second and then Monarchs outscored the Quebec champions 3-1 in the final.

Jack Muldrum, a big right-winger who hails from Edmonton, tallied two goals for Monarchs, John Wetsen and Eddie Mulligan got the others.

Larry Kwong was the big gun for the Braves. He scored two goals, while Don Menzies and Andre Corriveau came up with singles.

Referees Hap Shouldice and Stan Pratt, both of Oshawa, handed out only 10 penalties—seven of them coming in the second period.

One of the penalties was a match misconduct to Johnny Ubriaco, a stocky little centre from Sault Ste. Marie who likes to mix it up. Ubriaco was benched from the game in the second period when he argued too strenuously over a minor penalty.

Hughes, one of the greatest amateur netminders in Canada, handled a total of 31 shots, 18 of them coming in the third period. Paul Leclerc kicked out 26, most of them labelled.

MATERIALS SHIPPED

Pusan, Korea, May 4 (AP) — A captured North Korean official said today that stone-bomb materials were shipped from the Kores to Russia and China in the last three years.

Chi Yee Yong, former chief of red Korea's general affairs section, told a South Korean investigating committee that the materials—monazite and tantalite —came from mines in northeastern Kores. Both contain small amounts of uranium.

The former red official said Russian engineers supervised the mining operations.

WITCH DOCTOR'S CACHE

Louis Triebardt, South Africa (CP)—The daughter of a witch doctor was the successful claimant to a 287 oz sovereign stashed in the late 1800s. The woman claimed her father buried the gold outside his hut before he died in 1926. A European now farms the area where the hoard was discovered.

WOMEN'S VIEWPOINT

Wellington, N.Z., (CP)—Mrs. Phyllis McDonald representative of Canadian Pacific Airlines has been looking New Zealand over from a woman tourist's point of view. "It's the women who are influential in arranging holidays" she says.

Canadians Score Overtime Victory Over Owen Sound

Owen Sound, Ont., May 7—(CP) —For 56 minutes Saturday night Owen Sound Mercurys appeared to be on the road to victory in the fifth game of the Allen Cup final series.

Then, in the space of 60 seconds the whole picture changed and Fort Frances Canadians demonstrated with lightning speed their ability to come from behind.

Twice that 60 seconds—from 19:18 to 19:19 of the second period —Canadians slammed in three goals, a spurt that marked the turning point in the game and inspired them to a 6-4 overtime victory.

The win, an important one in the best-of-seven series, gave Fort Frances a 3-2 lead in games. The westerners still have a chance to win the cup in tonight's game. If Mercurys stay in the fight by winning tonight, the seventh and deciding game will be played Wednesday.

Tommy Burlington, veteran Owen Sound centre, summed up the Saturday night game when he said afterwards:

"When you lose a two-goal lead in playoff hockey, you don't deserve to win."

He was referring to the 2-0 lead Mercurys built up—in the first period—on goals by Bob Markle and Jack Ingoldsby.

Exploded Theory

However, Fort Frances exploded his theory by losing a two-goal lead in the third period and still going on to win.

Ike Bazinshop, Doc Johnson and Ed Kilner were the Fort Frances scorers who made life miserable for Owen Sound goalie Laurance goal at 8:18.

Syracuse Chiefs Maintain Lead In Int. League

(By The Associated Press)

Montreal Royals are reaping the benefit of one of Branch Rickey's last deals before he left Brooklyn for Pittsburgh.

Rickey sold pitcher Harry Taylor to Boston Red Sox for $75,000. A pawn in the deal was pitcher Bob Alexander of the Sox' Louisville American Association farm.

Alexander, with a 2-1 record, turned in his third victory Sunday as the Royals split a doubleheader with Ottawa Giants before 19,534 fans in Montreal. The big righthander pitched Royals to a 2-3 six-hit victory in the opener. Dutch Mele spoiled his shutout with a two-run homer in the ninth.

Ottawa took the nightcap 8-0 with George Keller and Alex Konikowski teaming up to blank the Royals on four hits. Konikowski took over in the third with the bases loaded and one out and went on to gain his first victory. Catcher Neal Watling-

Bob Gibson during the fatal minute of the second period.

The third period was only 25 seconds old when Johnny Irving scored to make it 4-4 on the same play.

Owen Sound came back at 4:32 with Johnny Macdonald making it 4-3 and Burlington tied it up at 14:23.

The overtime was scoreless until 8:23 when big Alex Kurcba drove a hard shot into the Owen Sound net to give Fort Frances the goal that proved to be the winner. Bobby Finn got the in-ton's two-run homer in the fifth clinched the decision.

Syracuse Chiefs maintained their 1½-game lead over the Royals by dividing a doubleheader with Springfield Cubs. Syracuse won the opener 5-4 but lost the finale 7-0.

Jack Robinson went all the way to post his fourth victory without a loss in the first game. The Chiefs won the second in the 8th inning on Fred Richard's infield hit with the bases loaded.

Leafs Divide

Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Bisons also divided a twin bill. The Bisons won the opener 5-1 behind the five-hit pitching of Rudy Minarcin. Frank Coleman's pinch homer spoiled his shutout.

Toronto captured the windup 6-0 with veteran Lee Fleming pacing the drive with three singles and a home run.

Rochester Red Wings took both ends of a doubleheader from Baltimore Orioles 11-7 and 9-7. Ripper Jones and Johnny Bucha starred in the opener. Jones drove in four runs on as many hits and Bucha banged out five safeties.

Johnny Blatnik, who homered in the opener, provided Rochester with his winning margin in the nightcap with a two-run homer in the seventh. Russ Derry also homered for the Wings.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The art of simplicity seems way beneath the dignity of the big bridge artists. You see it in how most experts teach bridge. Their simplest subjects come out in the most complicated way.

You see the reflection of complex ideas wherever you play this game, even among the most expert player types. How do they exchange information with each other? By vague methods.

Many good ones will bid a suit defensively when their hand is conservatively weak. In exactly the same way, will they bid a suit in defence with a hand that is really strong.

Partner should be advised by a distinction. With a hand strongest than simple two-suit, double for takeout should be used. There is no mystery as to how strong. Merely as good as an opening one bid.

An opening bid of one needs five tricks, four of which are high cards, among which are two sure tricks. So, a takeout double shows a hand with five tricks, four highs, two sures.

South opens with a club when you hold this west hand:

♠A 9 8
♥A J 6 5 Q 10
♦Q 6 3 2

You could bid a defensive simple overcall of one heart. Partner would not be encouraged thereby. He had more information than hearts you might never know about it until too late.

On the other hand, if you had opened the bidding, partner, would be encouraged to bid. Somebody else having opened, it is too late for you to open. But, you can still show an opening hand by saying double.

This is all the requirement needed for a takeout double; enough for an opening one bid after an opponent has opened. If you think you need more, some expert has confused the issue for you.

They may say a takeout double needs so many and a half pounds of sausage, this and a half chunks of salami, that and a half pieces of pistrami. All of which is just a lot of bolony.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 7 — (AP) — What does a woman do when her husband dies after she has spent most of her life in the shadow of his fame?

Mrs. Alan Hale is returning to acting after an absence of 30 years.

The famed character actor died last year, leaving his widow well endowed for the rest of her life.

But a family friend, showed Mrs. Hale a book with a picture of Mrs. Hale as a child stage star, "It would be a shame to deny such talent to the public," he hinted.

Mrs. Hale took the hint. She went to Warner Brothers, where her husband had worked for 14 years, and landed a role in "As Time Goes By," using her professional name of Gretchen Hartman.

Now she has other deals on the fire and is enthused about the refinishing of her acting career. Biz Thrill'

"It was a big thrill to get started again," she said. "Nervous? Not much. It's just like riding a bicycle. Once you get your balance you can go right along."

Mrs. Hale's acting career started 40 years ago. She was a child actress on the stage and then drifted into the movies.

Three years later she met her husband.

An actor came up to her on the set and started to tell her a saucy story.

"What makes you think you can tell me that kind of story?" she protested. A few weeks later, he returned and said, "Do you want to hear the end of that story now?" She answered she could as well.

The story led to a date and the date led to marriage three months later. She was 16 and her mother objected, strenuously. The mother wouldn't speak to Hale for many years afterward.

Seated one day at the typewriter, Mrs. Hale started writing letters to various items on the Hollywood scene.

So today I am running a lost-and-found department. All of these items seem to me lost, and if anyone can find them, let me know.

Whatever happened to Warner's plans to film the life of Will Rogers, with Will, Jr., starring? ...Paramount's announcement that it would make the life of Bing Crosby? ...20th-Fox's plans for a picture on Wendell Willkie's One World?...

Whatever happened to Turhan Bey?...Butch Jenkins?...Anita Page?...Gracie Allen's mystery? ...the other Pickens and Boswell sisters besides Jane and Coniglio ...Simone Simone? ...Orson Welles?

Whatever happened to the proposals for a Hollywood film festival, along the lines of those held abroad?...For an all-industry conference here to discuss current problems?

Whatever happened to Joan Crawford's plans to do a picture about the plight of school teachers?...Hedy Lamarr's plans to retire?... Henry Koster's plans to film the life of wrestler "Gorgeous" George? ...Selznick's plans to star Jennifer Jones in "Romeo and Juliet"?

Whatever happened to little Audrey Jokes?...the big parties that Hollywood used to have? (I guess nobody can afford them any more)...the 25-cent movie theater?

While you're trying to figure out the answers, let's listen to a reader who has her own explanation of why movie business is sour:

"I believe that the reason people have stopped going is because of the sale of popcorn, ice cream and what-have-you.

"To have a bunch of rowdies sit behind you and crunch on popcorn while you are trying to see a show is more than people can stand."

MacARTHUR STILL DRAWS GALLERY

General Douglas MacArthur, right, waves to a group, some of the hundreds of admirers who crowded the halls of the U.S. Senate office building in Washington for a glimpse of the famous soldier. Gen. MacArthur was on his way from a session of the congressional inquiry listening to his version of the Far East controversy that brought his sudden dismissal by President Truman. At the inquiry he said the "policy vacuum" in the Far East was costing thousands of American lives. — Central Press Canadian.

Blow Restores Partial Sight To Blind Man

Washington, May 7 — (AP) — For 20 years, newspaper man Frank Kennedy has been groping around in the darkness of the almost-totally blind!

Then, on the night of April 8, Kennedy awoke to remember he had forgotten to turn down the thermostat on the gas heater.

Leaping from bed, Kennedy struck a chest, reeled and sat down on the bed. His wife had moved the bed a foot closer to the chest, after some furniture repairs.

That blow he got now seems to have restored partial vision and Kennedy is exuberantly happy. He can pick out the figures on playing cards, spell out newspaper headlines.

Doctors say Kennedy is and will continue to be blind in his right eye. The left eye had developed a cataract. The blow on the edge of the chest made the cataract drop below the pupil, restoring some measure of sight.

"I will settle for the sight I've got now," said Kennedy happily. "I can see light coming in the door."

The 52-year-old Kennedy is a Washington correspondent for 10 Florida newspapers. He has made his way around successfully, despite his blindness.

Speed up Growth of Cereal Grains Breeding Work

Saskatoon (CP)—Plant breeders at the University of Saskatchewan are getting three cereal grain crops a year by simulating summer conditions through the winter by artificial light and controlled temperature.

The crops, growing in miniature greenhouse fields, get maximum growth 24 hours a day all through the late fall, winter and early spring.

The process greatly speeds up the university's plant-breeding program for new varieties and for the reconstitution of others after crossing with disease-resistant strains.

Summer sunlight is simulated through the night by use of 132 special 100-watt electric bulbs in each of the field hut-bandary department's two greenhouses. A total of 28,800 watts is in use at one time.

Ideal Conditions

The scientists work to produce ideal growing conditions for any plant. The right amount of moisture is applied to the various plots and the temperature is controlled to suit the various periods of plant growth.

If the natural field condition in the spring to stimulate seeding in certain plants is a temperature of 50 degrees, for instance, then these plants are grown in the greenhouse at this temperature soon after planting.

Carried along tracks for 465 feet, pinned in the flaming wreck age of his car, Robert James Blackwood of Peterborough died Saturday. He collided with a C.N.R. freight train 10 miles west of Peterborough while travelling east on No. 7 Highway. Wedged under a boxcar of the train, the car became a funeral pyre for Blackwood, Prov. Cpl. Bill Milton said.

As the days go by the temperature is raised to simulate the mid-summer conditions in the field as the plants reach maturity.

Wheat and barley are brought to maturity in the field in about 90 to 100 days, so when these grains are grown in the greenhouse plots they are harvested about 90 to 100 days after planting.

Greenhouse Program

In the greenhouse program the grain is planted in September, a cross with another variety is made in November and the grain is harvested the first week in January.

The seed from this first generation crop is immediately planted and brought to maturity in approximately 90 days, so that the seed from the second generation can be sown in the field in May.

The reconstitution of a grain variety after it has been crossed with another disease-resistant grain would take at least six years if carried out solely in the field.

By the use of the greenhouses to get two crops off in the winter, a reconstitution program can be completed in two or three years if no complications arise.

A typical program now under way is with Montcalm barley in an effort to make it rust-and smut-resistant. Montcalm is susceptible to both rust and smut. These two strains are therefore crossed and the result is a grain with the qualities and characteristics of both strains embodied in it on a 50-50 basis.

Complicated Process

Having transferred the rust- and smut-resistant qualities in the first cross with Valentine, the plant breeders then try to reconstitute as much as possible the qualities and characteristics of the original Montcalm by making five back-crosses with this variety.

The result of the first backcross is to change the ratio to 75 to 25 in favor of Montcalm. The second and subsequent backcrosses change the ratio to 87½ to 12½, to 93¾ to 6¼, to 96⅞ to 3⅛, and finally 98 7/16 to 1 9/16.

After the fifth back-cross the plant breeders have two have a Montcalm with none of its former yielding or malting qualities impaired, but with added resistance to stem rust and smut from the one-fifth strain of Valentine bred into it.

MARMORA

Beaver Seen On Two Occasions

Marmora — The new beaver laws seem to be increasing their number in this district. On Monday evening, Constable Embury saw a large beaver playing on the west bank of Crowe River at the northern end of the village, opposite Matthew McGarvey's store and residence.

Mr. Embury was able to cross the river and get within 100 yards of it before it took to the water and disappeared. One evening recently, three beaver were seen swimming up the river by conservation officer, John Shannon.

The test piece, which they will sing, is "Lead Me, Lord" with a number of the singers entering the solo classes. Twelve new members will join the choir. Picnic Committee

Following the business session, at which arrangements were made and committees appointed to arrange for transportation of Junior choir to Stirling and after some discussion the following committee was named to arranged for the annual picnic in June: Carman Alton, Carl Howse, Dr. M. G. Dales and E. W. Jones.

At this time Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hamilton, recent newcomers to Tweed, were welcomed by the group and Mrs. Hamilton sang at two numbers, "The Sunshine of Your Smile" and "Just a Wearying for You," accompanied by Mrs. S. H. Connor.

Special Feature

The special feature of the evening was enjoyed when Carman Alton showed colored stills of Florida, local weddings and other scenes. Maniwaki Boys Return Home

Maniwaki, Que., May 7—(CP)—Two young Maniwaki boys, Jean Jette, 11, and Jean Guy Charbonneau, 13, objects of a widespread search in rugged Quebec hinterlands since April 27, were returned safely to their homes Saturday. Quebec Provincial Police said, however, they are still seeking two Indian trappers, Felix Henri and James Morin, both about 40, for questioning in connection with the young boys' disappearance.

According to the story told their parents, the boys met Henri and Morin on a Maniwaki street April 27. The two men were heading out on a muskrat-trapping trip into the Turtle Lake district, 18 miles west. They offered the boys $5 a day to go along and assist in the work.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

Miss Agatha lay in a crumpled heap on the landing halfway down the stairs. But she wasn't dead. The low noise that crept past her pale lips and a moment later her eyelids flickered and opened.

"Pushed me," she whispered. "Pushed—"

"Who?" Martin Preston demanded.

She tried to shake her head but the effort was too great and she collapsed against the deputy's chest. He scooped her up in capable arms and, ignoring the others, started up the stairs.

"I'll get the doctor," Peter Thorne offered, and Sondra, who had been standing helplessly by, cried out:

"I'm going with you!"

"You're not!" Peter snapped. "You're staying here with Mrs. Jones with Aunt Agatha. She'll need women with her till the doctor comes."

Leeana looked at him with new liking. He was different. She didn't understand the chameleon-like changes, but this was one of the nice ones.

No one had taken time to sift Ben Ritter from the crowd that had followed Miss Aggie's scream. That someone had pushed her, there was no doubt. Nor was there any that the assailant had mistaken his point of attack or his weapon would have fallen 30 feet down to her death and not just to the landing.

But there was doubt—and Leeana saw it—in the glances that darted covertly as they followed Martin Preston to Miss Agatha's room—in the story Jasper Thorne had bobbed out so quickly—and so unasked for. If he had seen a light in her room and had heard her talking angrily to someone, why hadn't he investigated?

The coppery taste of fear was in Leeana's mouth as she watched the creep suspicion spread over Sondra's haunted, lovely face. Sondra seemed smaller than ever that her husband was the killer.

Agatha Thorne had regained consciousness and was exploring her brittle old body with a tentative finger by the time Dr. Carlos Zimbrunsky arrived. She greeted him with a wry grin that brought an answering glint to the big doctor's eyes.

"Never more than a thing to handle you, doesn't it, Aggie?"

"I still have my bustle. Where's Clem Purdy? I want to tell him a few things!"

Dr. Carlos Leeana thought, for all the world like Miss Maggie, as though Agatha had snatched up the Thorne family cudgels once in a while. This conversation bothered him, realizing he was using bad taste in a house where death had struck once and had cried again, he added:

"Shoo out now, all of you but Miss Leeana. I'll examine my patient before Clem gets here and loses me in the shuffle of investigative nonsense."

When they had gone he turned to Leeana.

"All right, young woman—say what you're dying to all over you."

Leeana told him about Jasper and the gun and the accusation that Sondra had "planted" it. She told him, too, that Jasper said he heard Miss Aggie talking with someone. Agatha nodded.

"That was Peter," she said.

"You were awake?"

"I certainly was! He accused me of telling my father."

Peter had it all figured out, as convincingly as he had presented the case against Leeana. Miss Aggie had entered her sister's room from the connecting bath, and had smothered her with a pillow before going downstairs to wait in the dark. Of course, she had known Leeana was going to be sent to town after Clem Purdy.

Leeana glanced at the thin, gnarled fingers picking at the bedspread. Certainly it had not been those hands at her throat!

She said, "Peter is going too far, Aunt Agatha."

"He is spinning quite a web, isn't he?" Zimbrunsky looked up from his examination. "Around himself, I'm afraid." He sighed. "Clem isn't going to like this."

Leeana met Sheriff Purdy hurrying up the stairs as she went down to the living room where Mart was holding forth—in vain, if his scowl was any barometer of success.

"Come sit by me," Sondra invited, and as Leeana sat beside her on the loveseat, Sandra whispered, "I need you."

At once fear seemed to reach out and engulf Leeana. What had happened tonight? Had Peter tossed his fresh old aunt bodily over the banister, hoping to see her crushed by the fall?

Or had it been Jasper?

Suddenly there was a new tinge to Sondra's terror. It became the black fear of discovery, the desperate fear that drives a man, or a woman, to kill and kill again. Leeana forced herself to go on breathing, to sit quietly as Mart asked his questions.

Leeana knew that Sondra Thorne hated the two Thorne sisters, but was that hatred strong enough to drive her to violence?

Somehow Leeana could not believe this—any more than she could believe Peter was guilty. Sondra was a vascillating, shrewd woman of the world; she would think things out first and see that the only end for a killer was death for herself.

Leeana wet her lips. But what if there was a good fall guy? Would Sondra kill then?

She looked up at Peter. He was looking at Sondra and as Leeana's eyes followed his there flitted across Sondra's lips a smile so fleeting that it might not have been there except for the fact that Peter Thorne's face turned to granite that instant. In the next be on his feet, striding out of the room.

Mart Preston moved swiftly, but Peter Thorne was at the door. He did not intend to be stopped. His fist lashed out and up, catching Mart on the chin.

Leeana heard her own choked cry. Her eyes were open, but even as she knelt beside Mart she was conscious of those imperfect smiles that touched Sondra's lips and was gone like the snap of mental fingers. The goodbye, the wave on the feet, exclaiming over Mart. Only Jasper did not move.

The world settled back on even keel as Mart picked himself up to a sitting position and gave experiment with his jaw.

"I sort of go it things wrong, don't I?" he remarked dryly.

"You certainly do," agreed Sondra. "Whatever made Peter do such a thing? Why, good heavens, you'd think—"

"Shut up, Sondra."

Jasper did not raise his voice. He did not even look up, but the gentle threat was more than that to his wife, Leeana saw. Her face, still sporting remnants of last summer's tan, went pasty. She chewed her lower lip as though it pestered her; then, as though realizing for the first time how feelings were showing, she gave Mart a dazzling smile, tugged at his arm and begged him to let her "do something for it."

"Or sure," came her husband's monotone. "Sondra kiss it and make it well"

"Jasper!"

"Well, Sondra?" Jasper Thorne slouched to his feet. "Don't tell me you object to my knowledge of the truth! It isn't like you."

Sondra moved like the model she had been as she relloquished her hold on Mart's arm and went to her husband. She traveled to you, Jasper," she told him levelly, and Leeana found herself believing her.

"Because I've never asked questions."

They seemed oblivious to all but each other. Embarrassed, Leeana glanced at Mart.

Martin Preston was not embarrassed. This was, Leeana saw, nothing more to him than the opportunity to glean some clue from his suspects' emotions.

"Jasper, you've been very fond of her," Sondra seemed to withdraw from the pleasant Thorne Hill living room to some icy peak of her own imagination. "Your Aunt Maggie was right—you'd let some thing do divorce a Thorne."

Jasper Thorne laughed shortly, but there was danger in it. Danger—for Sondra.

"You wouldn't do that, would you Sondra?" he inquired nastily.

As though sensing a mood deeper than Jasper's, Sondra turned away from him. She shrugged, but the intended haughtiness didn't quite come off. There was fear in the gesture, and uncertainty.

"Let's not quarrel, Jap," she pleaded. "Not in front of a policeman. He might get the wrong ideas." She cast an inviting smile at Mart. "Mr. Preston, come. I'm going to do things for you—shinjury."

Left alone with Jasper Thorne, Leeana turned on him furiously.

"Why do you let her?"

"Let her? Jasper echoed wearily. "How can I stop her?"

He sat down again, hunched over with his face half-buried in his hands, staring at the soft mauve carpet with the same preoccupation that had masked his thoughts ever since his aunt's death. Leeana wondered if he was conscious of her presence, even though her question had touched off the mood again. She edged nearer the door.

"Sondra is a fool, Leeana. I love her, but oh God—!" He broke off, dropped his head again. 'Go away, Leeana. Please."

Leeana went, gladly. In the brief glimpse of his face she had seen pain, fear—and dread—mixed with so much anguish that it terrified her. If Jasper loved Sondra that much. . . and Sondra was yearning for the bright lights again. . . it added up—too well. Jasper Thorne had killed his aunt before she could put him off with money that would be chicken feed to Sondra. Why should they be content with $10,000 when there was only Miss Maggie. . . and Peter. . .

EMBARGO AGAINST RED CHINA APPEARS ASSURED

UN Hope to Break Enemy Morale By Heavy Casualties

Marshall Defends Policies On Conduct of Korean War

Washington, May 8—(AP)—Defence Secretary George Marshall said today the United Nations aim to win the Korean war by inflicting "terrific casualties" on the Chinese communists, breaking their morale and destroying their trained armies.

Marshall gave that answer to Senators pressing him as to what "strategic aim" the U.S. government's Korean war against policies promise.

For the second day, he defended those policies against the bitter attack made by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, deposed far eastern commander who contends they offer nothing but a "bloody stalemate."

Marshall told the Senators, too, that he is "disturbed" about the possibility that United Nations men in Korea of statements from their commander (MacArthur) which mention the casualties that they are suffering and, in effect, that it is without justified cause.

"We should find some way," Marshall said, "of proceeding with this investigation that does not destroy us in the field by serious reaction in the world."

Marshall said the U.S. plan for Korea has been to "inflict the greatest number of casualties we could in order to break down not only the morale but the trained fabric of the Chinese armies."

Marshall indicated he and the U.S. joint chiefs of staff hope that if sufficient losses are inflicted, the enemy will withdraw and talk peace terms.

"Retain Our Allies"

Marshall said the course he had outlined would "retain our allies" bring them to more satisfactory reactions before the United Nations as a whole, including our leadership in this delicate matter. He suggested it generally improve the situation."

Marshall said direct Russian intervention in the Korean war would be "a very serious matter."

He said Russia has a "considerable force" of military planes in the vicinity of Vladivostok, Dairen-Port Arthur and Manchuria.

"I don't know whether there are any plane concentrations in relation to Alaska," he said. "I would keep reports of troop concentrations and logistics of Japanese prisoner and former prisoner organizations, presumably of indoctrinated Japanese in the Sakhalin point, which is not very far southwest of Hokkaido."

Hokkaido is the northernmost of the main Japanese islands. Sakhalin is a Russian-held island to the north.

Might Invade Japan

Marshall's reference to Soviet troops on Sakhalin carried a possible implication the Russians might be capable of invading Japan.

MacArthur had declared he didn't believe the Russians could invade Japan so long as the U.S. held naval and air superiority.

Earlier, Marshall had testified that U.N. troops in Korea are barred from approaching within 15 miles of the Russian border.

Sandbach said he has been unable to find suitable work for several months. When brought into court here, he was already on suspended sentence from a Peterborough court for attempted theft of gasoline.

SOVIET PROPOSAL ON PEACE TREATY REJECTED BY U.S.

Plan Would Give Russia 'Double Veto'

Washington, May 8. (AP)—The United States today rejected Russia's proposal to turn over the drafting of a Japanese peace treaty to four Pacific powers including communist China.

Russia's purpose in advancing the proposal yesterday was to obtain a "double veto" over a Japanese peace settlement, the State Department said.

The U.S. intends, a department spokesman declared, to go ahead with the preparations for such a settlement for Japan with or without Russian participation.

The U.S. has been consulting 15 other countries including Canada in working out treaty terms and it is hoped to have a draft ready for signing within a few weeks.

Russia, in a note handed to American Alan G. Kirk in Moscow yesterday, proposed calling a council of the foreign ministers of the U.S., Russia, Britain and red China to meet in June or July to draft a treaty.

Other countries which took part in the Pacific war would be "consulted", the Soviet proposal sharply attacked the American draft now under consideration that Formosa is represented an attempt to impose an American peace on Asia without Russia, include the Soviet Union, China and other countries.

Michael K. Sheehan, State department press officer, said the Russian proposal is the type "which the Soviet Union makes periodically whenever it wants to stall the conclusion of a Japanese peace."

The Soviet effort is to get a veto now, now, through communist China, a double veto, on a Japanese peace.

Republicans Dispute Truman Claim That Limited Korean War Achieving Most for Peace

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

Washington, May 8 —(AP) — President Truman said last night that Gen. MacArthur's Korean war proposals might provoke another world war and threaten blow-atomic attacks on great cities in the United States.

Today, observing his 67th birthday and the sixth anniversary of his proclamation of victory over Nazi Germany, awaits reaction to Mr. declaration that victory can be won in Korea. The first comment from Republican Senators was that they'll have to be shown.

Some Republicans hotly disputed Truman's contention that a limited war in Korea "is achieving the most for peace—at the least cost in American lives."

Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, top Republican on the armed services' committee, said Defence Secretary George Marshall's initial testimony "was an inadequate defence of the dismissal and matters of dismissal of General MacArthur."

And Senator Harry P. Cain (Rep., Wash.), also a member of the committee, called Marshall's testimony "extraordinarily disappointing" and said there was a lack of any administration plan that "the war is going to end."

With Marshall ready for his second appearance before Senators at 10 a.m. (EDT) counting on the ouster of MacArthur, Republicans attacked Truman's declaration that "our policy is designed to win" in the Korean war.

MacArthur has contended it is doomed to end in "bloody stalemate," and called for broader prosecution of the war. It was for his public advocacy of these strategy proposals that Truman said he fired MacArthur.

Might Split Free World

Marshall told the Senators yesterday that MacArthur's strategy would risk all-out conflict with Russia, expose Europe to attack and perhaps split the free world into two camps. He also said MacArthur's basic views, for the red commander in Korea last March 24 killed any chances for a settlement.

Truman, addressing 800 civil defence workers last night, said that to expand the Korean war, as the General he ousted proposed, would bring the "real possibility" of Russia launching atomic attacks on New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Seattle, Los Angeles, Washington and other cities.

On the other hand, he said, the free countries have stopped the march of communism in Asia and dealt a heavy blow to the Kremlin conspiracy" all over the world by the fight in Korea.

Will Be Atomic War

"Remember this," Truman said, "if we do have another world war, it will be an atomic war. We could not escape destruction. Our cities would be destroyed. Our civilian population would be dropped on American cities.

"That is a simple fact which could cause many times more casualties than we have suffered in all the fighting in Korea.

"I do not want to be responsible for bringing that about."

Truman did not refer by name to MacArthur but supporters of MacArthur interpreted the targets of this assertion.

EARLY FINISH OF KOREAN WAR NOT EXPECTED

--Pearson

Says U.N. Stands Ready to Negotiate

Ottawa, May 8. (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson believes it is "quite unrealistic to hold out hope of an early settlement in Korea, or even of an early end to the fighting."

"The present Chinese attack must be broken before we can again begin to entertain any hope of a peaceful and honorable settlement there," said Mr. Pearson in laughing debate in the Commons last night on Canada's foreign policies.

"When it (the Chinese attack) has been broken as we hope it will be, and with heavy losses to the enemy, the Chinese communists may be in a mood to negotiate an honorable settlement, the only kind of settlement we have ever contemplated, or at least to desist from further attacks.

"While I think it would be quite unrealistic to hold out hope of an early settlement in Korea, or even of an early end to the fighting, nevertheless we should always remember that the United Nations stands ready to negotiate, though not to betray its trust or yield to blackmail."

Ice Cream Cone Started Adventure For Immigrant

Toronto, May 8. (CP)—An ice cream cone started an adventure for Jozef Kaszarowski, 25, who arrived in Canada from Germany last weekend.

Bound for a farm job near Ingersoll, Ont., he stopped off a train Sunday at Levis, Que., to get a treat in the form of a "white cream cone". While he was buying the cone, the train left without him.

That night he slept on a bench at the Levis Station. A police-man befriended him, got him a comer, unfamiliar with French and English, had a hard time explaining his plight. Finally someone wrote a note for him and put him on a train for Toronto.

On his arrival here today, the Red Cross helped him find an Ingersoll-bound train.

And when that train pulled out, Jozef was speeding happily on another ice cream cone.

Two More Bodies Are Recovered

Victoria, B.C., May 8. (CP)—Two more bodies have been recovered from Tahsis Canal, where police believe six men were drowned Sunday when a small boat overturned.

R.C.M.P. last night announced the recovery of the bodies of Johnny Ambrose and Any Jackson, both members of the Cheslakee Indian tribe at Tahsis, B.C.

The body of Gurbax Singh was recovered Sunday when the overturned boat was sighted off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Britain and France Drop Objections To U.N. Proposal

Embargo Presumably Would Be Ignored by Soviet Bloc

By MAX HARRELSON

United Nations, N. Y., May 8—(AP)—Eventually United Nations' approval of an arms embargo against red China appeared assured today as a result of crumbling opposition in the world organization, Both Britain and France were reported to have dropped their objections.

The embargo, if voted by the U. N., presumably would be ignored by the Soviet bloc.

A United States spokesman yesterday submitted a formal proposal for the embargo at a closed-door meeting of the U. N.'s 12-country sanctions committee. A vote is expected either late this week or next Monday.

A brief discussion indicated that it would not meet with any serious opposition.

At a meeting last Thursday both Britain and France gave the idea a cool reception, leading to the belief that they might run into difficulties. But yesterday Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb said it was possible his government would feel the U. S. was right. France's spokesman at the time expressed his belief his government would give it sympathetic consideration.

Egypt May Abstain

One observer said the embargo would be adopted by a vote of 11 to 0, with Egypt abstaining. Other members of the sanctions committee are Canada, Australia, Venezuela, the Philippines, Belgium, Brazil, Turkey and Mexico.

If approved the proposal will go to the 60-country political committee of the general assembly, and finally to a plenary session of the assembly. There it no doubt will be bitterly-opposed by the Soviet bloc.

Major provision of the resolution:

The shipment of arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic materials, petroleum products, and items useful in the production of war materials would be prohibited to areas controlled by the Chinese communists.

The sanctions committee should continue to study other possible measures against red China, but should defer any further recommendations if the U. N. good offices committee, now attempting a peaceful settlement. This three-member committee thus far has failed even to establish contact with the Peiping regime.

COMPANY OFFERS REWARD

London May 8: (Reuters)—A London insurance company today offered a reward of £1,000 ($2,-800) for the recovery of seven parcels of palladium, rare metal of the platinum group, lost somewhere between here and Canada.

Detectives were trying to find out how they disappeared two months ago from a consignment sent to Ontario through Liverpool, England, by the Mond Nickel Company of London.

The missing parcels, each less than a foot square, are worth £15,000. The metal is used in jewellery.

ELECTED DEPUTY REEVE

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 8 (CP) — Donald Gjlnzz was elected deputy reeve of Stamford township Monday in a special election called to fill the seat vacated by Robert I. Prior.

Today, observing his 67th birthday and the sixth anniversary of his proclamation of victory over Nazi Germany, awaits reaction to Mr. declaration that victory can be won in Korea. The first comment from Republican Senators was that they'll have to be shown.

Some Republicans hotly disputed Truman's contention that a limited war in Korea "is achieving the most for peace—at the least cost in American lives."

Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, top Republican on the armed services' committee, said Defence Secretary George Marshall's initial testimony "was an inadequate defence of the dismissal and matters of dismissal of General MacArthur."

And Senator Harry P. Cain (Rep., Wash.), also a member of the committee, called Marshall's testimony "extraordinarily disappointing" and said there was a lack of any administration plan that "the war is going to end."

With Marshall ready for his second appearance before Senators at 10 a.m. (EDT) counting on the ouster of MacArthur, Republicans attacked Truman's declaration that "our policy is designed to win" in the Korean war.

MacArthur has contended it is doomed to end in "bloody stalemate," and called for broader prosecution of the war. It was for his public advocacy of these strategy proposals that Truman said he fired MacArthur.

Might Split Free World

Marshall told the Senators yesterday that MacArthur's strategy would risk all-out conflict with Russia, expose Europe to attack and perhaps split the free world into two camps. He also said MacArthur's basic views, for the red commander in Korea last March 24 killed any chances for a settlement.

Truman, addressing 800 civil defence workers last night, said that to expand the Korean war, as the General he ousted proposed, would bring the "real possibility" of Russia launching atomic attacks on New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Seattle, Los Angeles, Washington and other cities.

On the other hand, he said, the free countries have stopped the march of communism in Asia and dealt a heavy blow to the Kremlin conspiracy" all over the world by the fight in Korea.

Will Be Atomic War

"Remember this," Truman said, "if we do have another world war, it will be an atomic war. We could not escape destruction. Our cities would be destroyed. Our civilian population would be dropped on American cities.

"That is a simple fact which could cause many times more casualties than we have suffered in all the fighting in Korea.

"I do not want to be responsible for bringing that about."

Truman did not refer by name to MacArthur but supporters of MacArthur interpreted the targets of this assertion.

R.C.A.F. Driving Toward 3,000-Plane Force by '54

Defence Paper Discloses

Ottawa, May 8—(CP)—Canada's big swing-over from British to American defence equipment will mean a major shift in aircraft-weapons, with more than 400 of the new heavy anti-aircraft guns going to European allies and an unspecified number of 90-millimetre guns to the United States.

An official white paper on defence, tabled in the Commons yesterday, also disclosed that the R.C.A.F. is driving towards a 3,000 plane air force by 1954. This was being speeded by stepping up reconditioning of planes taken out of reserve and purchase of new operational types, to replace the aging aircraft.

By 1954, the navy, too, hoped to have a 400-ship fleet.

This would be assisted by new production lines, the white paper indicated that it will be at least 1952 before new, fighting ships start coming off the ways.

Looking into the future, the white paper predicted that any outbreak of general war in Canada would be preceded by a wave of sabotage. "Fifth column activities, if said, are prepared to create, quickly."

Active and reserve forces, veterans and police would be built into a team to overwhelm saboteurs, and, added the white paper, "it is not anticipated that this would be very long".

Points Emphasized

The white paper, a 30-page summary of the military situation and Canada's steps to meet it, emphasized these other points:

1. Canada must be prepared, with her allies in particular, to meet either general war or the continuation of current defence tensions.

2. Canada's defence bill this year will take up 42 per cent of the national income. Defence spending is expected to hit $1,679,-000,000 in the next three years, associated departments.

The country's "readiness for full mobilization" is being stepped up materially. The air force is driving units in particular to being prepared to take on a fighting role almost immediately if war comes.

Two types of jet fighters are being turned out on assembly-line basis in Canada, and a major ship-building program will start paying off in new ships this year.

Defence likely will see the establishment there of an 11-squadron R.C.A.F. air division and this will "require a very large portion of Canada's total defence budget."

Sailors See Children First Time When Athabaskan Docks

Ottawa, May 8 — (CP) — The return to Canada for this month of the Canadian destroyer Athabaskan after nine months' service in the Korean War was marked by special significance for 14 members of the ship's company.

They will be meeting small sons and daughters they have seen only in photographs until today.

One crew member will do a double take. He is LS. James Ashley Bond, of Ottawa, who joined the father of two daughters Feb. 1.

The Athabaskan, away from Canada since July 3, is due to return to Esquimalt, B.C., May 17.

COUNCIL REDUCES RATE

Brampton, May 8—(CP)—Town council yesterday set the tax rate at 56.8 mills, one mill below the 1951 level.

Council explained the reduction was made possible by increases in the school board to float a debenture for $6,000 to grade and gravel the Queen Street extension.

Extension of the school grounds was made necessary when a recent addition of six rooms increased the attendance figure by some 200.

Heroic British Regt., Mortar Battery Given Highest U.S. Army Honor

With the British 29th Brigade, Korea, May 8 — (Reuters) — Lt.-Gen. James Van Fleet, United States Eight Army commander, today presented a presidential citation to heroic British infantrymen who two weeks ago lost 500 to 600 men attempting to halt Chinese communist tide.

The few survivors of the two valiant units — the 1st Battalion Gloucester Regiment and the 170th Independent Mortar Battery — lined a parade ground to receive the highest American Army group honor.

It came to pay tribute to the wonderful "commonwealth forces' Van Fleet said.

"I wanted to tell you most emphatically how proud and thankful I am for your achievement."

The Gloucester's' stand from April 22 to 24 was marked by the blunting the communist drive on the Imjin river. They were ordered to withdraw or surrender. After three days without food or water, they were overrun.

Only 40 to 50 men from the battalion got back.

Van Fleet said their stand against overwhelming odds had upset the communist timetable and saved that area of the front.

The indomitable and heroic Gloucester Battalion will long be remembered as an outstanding example of courage and determination by all freedom - loving people," he said.

Double-Shooting Accidental Death, Suicide

Montreal, May 8. (CP)—The double-shooting fatalities at St. Jean Baptiste, near Joliette, Saturday night were reported by provincial police today as an accidental death and a suicide.

Police first said it was believed 18-year-old Maurice Mayer shot and killed his step-mother, 56-year-old Mrs. Rene Majeau, following a quarrel.

However, acting director Hilaire Beauregard of the provincial police said it is believed the gun discharged accidently while Raymond Majeau prepared to clean it before going hunting. Beauregard added that the boy was probably unnerved by what happened that he committed suicide.

Police Checking On Defective Automobiles

Toronto, May 8—(CP)—A dozen motorcycle police sifted through Toronto traffic today, checking up on defective automobiles.

The drive, marked the beginning of the annual two-month survey which a year ago resulted in 600 cars being taken off the road.

Officers check brakes, steering gear, lights, windshields, tires, wipers, fenders, wheel alignment, and other vital parts.

If the defects are uncovered the driver will be given a card showing his auto is all right. Summonses will be issued if minor defects are unco>red.

If something serious is found—such as bad brakes the—car will be hauled off the road.

Newmarket, May 8 — (CP) — Many parents kept their young children home from school today after poisoned dog biscuits were found in the nearby Lake Wilcox district, where at least 38 dogs have died of poison in the last few days.

Provincial Police Constable Allan Houldsworth, who found four strychnine-treated biscuits along a roadside, said they could easily be mistaken for cookies by young children.

Police are patrolling roads around the summer resort area, 25 miles north of Toronto, and one coffee-owner, Harry Cooper of Toronto, has posted a $200 reward for information leading to the arrest of the person who has been slipping out the poisoned

Britain and France Drop Objections To U.N. Proposal

Embargo Presumably Would Be Ignored by Soviet Bloc

By MAX HARRELSON

United Nations, N. Y., May 8—(AP)—Eventually United Nations' approval of an arms embargo against red China appeared assured today as a result of crumbling opposition in the world organization, Both Britain and France were reported to have dropped their objections.

The embargo, if voted by the U. N., presumably would be ignored by the Soviet bloc.

A United States spokesman yesterday submitted a formal proposal for the embargo at a closed-door meeting of the U. N.'s 12-country sanctions committee. A vote is expected either late this week or next Monday.

A brief discussion indicated that it would not meet with any serious opposition.

At a meeting last Thursday both Britain and France gave the idea a cool reception, leading to the belief that they might run into difficulties. But yesterday Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb said it was possible his government would feel the U. S. was right. France's spokesman at the time expressed his belief his government would give it sympathetic consideration.

Egypt May Abstain

One observer said the embargo would be adopted by a vote of 11 to 0, with Egypt abstaining. Other members of the sanctions committee are Canada, Australia, Venezuela, the Philippines, Belgium, Brazil, Turkey and Mexico.

If approved the proposal will go to the 60-country political committee of the general assembly, and finally to a plenary session of the assembly. There it no doubt will be bitterly-opposed by the Soviet bloc.

Major provision of the resolution:

The shipment of arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic materials, petroleum products, and items useful in the production of war materials would be prohibited to areas controlled by the Chinese communists.

The sanctions committee should continue to study other possible measures against red China, but should defer any further recommendations if the U. N. good offices committee, now attempting a peaceful settlement. This three-member committee thus far has failed even to establish contact with the Peiping regime.

The missing parcels, each less than a foot square, are worth £15,000. The metal is used in jewellery.

West Germans Pay Little Heed To VE-Day

Berlin, May 8 — (AP) — VE-Day, like everything else in divided Germany, got divided attention today.

West Germans largely ignored the sixth anniversary of the surrender of the Third Reich on May 8, 1943. The Allied powers took a different view.

East Germany, playing the Soviet Union's game, hailed the day as a great holiday, one to be celebrated forever in gratitude for liberation from the Nazis.

Soviet zone communists conducted the only ceremony of any importance. Their leaders gathered with Russian officials at the Soviet Army's Memorial Park in Treptow. East Germany made speeches extolling the merits of the red army, which returned to the heart of Berlin.

Brussels, May 8 — (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower today celebrated VE-Day's sixth anniversary by getting wet touring Belgian Air Force bases.

Six years after receiving his Reims, France, the German unconditional surrender, Eisenhower inspected Belgian airfields during a heavy rain.

Car Crumpled By Boxcars, Driver Escapes

North Bay, May 8. (CP) — A shunting string of boxcars bowled into a 1951-model automobile at a level-crossing Monday night, but the driver, Mr. Ernest Nicol, got down the tracks and crushed it against a signal switch.

The driver, who salesman Jack Richards, of (77 Towers St.), Kirkland Lake, who had stayed at the wheel, survived. But he was trapped in the crumpled wreckage.

He said later that, as he waited for help, he heard a trainman say:

"Better hook on and back the boxcars off."

Another trainman said:

"No, not yet. There are probably some bodies in there."

Richards shouted to the trainmen, who broke a window and enabled him to crawl out unhurt.

"Just look at that car!" he exclaimed. "And it only had 1,000 miles on it."

To reporters who congratulated him on his escape, Richards said he had been staying at a suburban motel and decided to drive into the city for a cup of coffee. He was caught after a 20-minute chase in Toronto township, 15 miles west of here.

Canadian Legion Will Increase Scholarship Value

The Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion will increase the value of its scholarships offered to secondary school graduates with the minimum increased to $250 to $300 this year, it has been announced.

Last year the Canadian Legion awarded a total of 26 $250 scholarships in Ontario and the number is hoped to be increased this year, in addition to the $300 scholarships, the Dominion Command offers one scholarship of $400.

At least eight papers must be written in the qualifying examination. The $400 will be awarded to a student resident in each Legion province in the Overseas Command, unless no candidate meets the requirements.

Scholarships will be awarded only to persons eligible for membership in the Canadian Legion, or to children of deceased veterans, or to the children of parents, either of whom is eligible for membership.

The Belleville Branch No. 99 has contributed $25 toward the scholarship fund. Additional information regarding the scholarships or qualification may be had from Everett H. Liddle, Deputy District Commander, 71 Cedar Street.

Doug Wareham Petty Officer On Carrier

A twenty year-old youth's dream came true the other day.

Eight weeks ago, Doug joined the Royal Canadian Navy. He was assigned to his trade, and passed all his tests with flying colors, not to mention honors.

A few days later, a boyish ambition was realized. He was assigned to the crew of HMCS 'Magnificent', Canada's proud aircraft carrier, with the rank of petty officer. Today Doug, is somewhere on the high seas.

The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Wareham, Doug was born in this city and received his public school education at Queen Mary School, later getting his matriculation at Albert College.

Students Describe U.N. Visit To Rotarians

Members of the Rotary Club here learned more about the workings of the United Nations through the eyes of city teenagers at their weekly luncheon yesterday.

Miss Nancy David, and Bob Gibson, members of the student party which visited the United Nations and saw some of the inner workings of that body, addressed the club.

Miss David and Mr. Gibson represented the 25 BCI students who took the trip, which was financed by service clubs of the city, the Board of Education, and the Chamber of Commerce.

Describes Visit

The attractive young speaker with the easy flow of language described the students' visit to the Manhattan Building in New York, which houses the U.N. secretariat where they were addressed by a high-ranking U.N. official.

He outlined her personal reactions to the work of the United Nations as she saw it in action, and what she learned of its varied activities.

She told of the party's visit to Lake Success and the Security Council where they saw and met delegates of various member countries.

"It was", she said, "an experience we shall not soon forget. It was very moving and we learned a lot about world problems." She expressed the appreciation of the party to the citizens for their assistance in financing the trip.

Saw New York

Bob Gibson confined his remarks, as he said "to the simpler things." Possessed of a rare sense of humor the youthful speaker had the audience in the palm of his hand as he described a typical New York day, which included a visit to the Hayden Planetarium, the Battery, La Guardia Airport, Fishing Meadows where he saw the Russian delegate Malik, the dockyard district where some of the party boarded the Ile de France; the American Museum of Natural History and Radio City Music Hall.

Mr. Gibson described the big trip home when they crossed over George Washington Bridge and saw West Point, United States military Academy, followed the Hudson to Albany to Schenectady and thence by the Lee Bridge.

"The United States is a grand country", he said, "and I returned crossed to Canadian soil, the whole party sang 'O Canada'."

The young speakers were introduced by Rotarian Reg. Gage with club appreciation expressed by Rotarian Harold Pickett. President Ken Griffiths was in the chair.

Young Men Needed for Army States Lt. Duffy, Response From Regt. 'Very Satisfactory'

Lieut. Angus B. Duffy, army and training officer, in a statement to the press this morning, stated that the response to date from the Hastings and Prince Edward Reserve Regiment had been more than satisfactory with approximately 35 or the 42 already enlisted being from the regiment.

"However", he said, "we need the young fellows off the street, from 18 to 24 years of age. Those are the men who will work, are intelligent and capable. For the most part, the reserve army men are older and steadier because of their experience and are more the instructor type."

"These younger men should join up. Their lives, their homes, their freedom are at stake. The only way to keep the cities, towns and countries free is to have a whole – hearted response from everyone. The only way to prevent a war is to have a standing force."

"The onus is not on the reserve army. The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is not just three or four hundred men, but every member of the community. Anytime, since 1904, that Canada has been threatened, the Hastings and Prince Edward has responded 100 per cent.

"The wages compare favorably with any other job today and where else can be found the adventure, companionship and general excitement that a career in the army offers?"

In conclusion, Lieut. Duffy stated: "We are depending on every mayor, reeve and organization for co-operation in this endeavor because we are the people fighting for our own defence."

Toronto Youths Arrested After Crash Into Pole

Following a 75-mile-an-hour chase on No. 2 highway which ended at the Devil's Elbow in the west end of the city when their car crashed into a telephone pole, two Toronto youths were charged by provincial police Monday night and are being held for Toronto authorities on charges of car theft.

The youths, Jimmy Powell, 17 and Morley Thompson, 16, escaped injury but the car was considerably damaged.

Provincial Police Constable L. Pelissero was patrolling on the Trenton – Belleville highway when he noticed the licence number of a car which a few hours earlier had been reported stolen in Toronto. He immediately gave chase but in a burst of speed the car pulled away and the officer radioed ahead for police to stop the car as it entered the city.

Constables Watson and Hoppler in a second cruiser sped up Highland Ave. to intercept the car and during the speeding vehicle approaching partially blocked off the road.

Forced to swing wide the driver of the stolen auto could not make the curve and the vehicle crashed into the telephone pole.

Accused Takes Four Months Instead of Six

The choice of being sentenced to either a four or a six months term on a drunk charge was offered to an accused in city magistrate's court this morning. The man took the four months.

Found guilty on the drunk charge and all but termed an habitual drunkard by the court, the prisoner was given the choice by Magistrate T. Y. Wills of being sentenced to four months and possibly going to Burwash, or to a six months' term at Guelph, where he would have the opportunity of learning a trade and rehabilitating himself.

The magistrate compiled with the wish of the accused to do four months instead of six but warned "if you ever come back here and appear before me on a drunk charge you will get the maximum sentence I can give you."

Danger of Over-Inflation to Canada's Economy Pointed Out to Clubmen

Giving, as the cause of inflation, "too much money, leading to too few goods," John Walton in an address to the Y's Men's Club at the Y.M.C.A. explained that the banks have been given their share of the task of curbing inflation by means of credit restraints. "If we are going to keep our present standard of living and increase it, our system must work for the greatest good for the greatest number," he said. Inflation meant the destruction of that system, he added.

Reviewing the steps in the history of money, Mr. Walton emphasized that money is not wealth, but only a symbol of wealth and many civilizations got along without it. When man began to specialize money was introduced, as one of the great inventions of all time. No longer did man need to exchange his labor for goods required or storage, if indeed they were not perishable. This money, the speaker explained, gave man about the greatest freedom he had experienced. Storage of money was a simple one process than storage of goods and therefore the expending of man's wealth could be postponed to his convenience, earnings in excess of his immediate needs being stored for later use. Inflation developed when the amount which had been put into storage had lost much of its purchasing power with the passing of time. The more rapid the depreciation the more severe was the inflation. By this occurrence man was robbed of part of his wealth. Inflation benefited the debtor and the creditor loses, the speaker pointed out.

Must Have Control

Continuing, he suggested that inflation is often beneficial stimulating business activity and although "too much money leads to too few goods," the point is no control the result is disastrous. This he illustrated by economic events in Germany and Russia after the First World War where the total collapse of the financial structure wiped out the whole middle class.

To those who would think that currency depreciation could not happen here, he pointed out that the Russian policy is to extend economic inflation to the democracies to break their power.

Indicating that there are more ways of causing inflation than to print more paper money, as was done in Germany, he stated that bank or finance company credit had the same effect, in that it increased purchases. A loan when paid cancelled purchasing power but when extended beyond a moderate increase, which may be defined as a disturbance of inflation. The cost of living index then is a measure of the inflationary period through which we are passing, the speaker concluded.

Must Curb Inflation

Warning that to check inflation is not a popular government action for it curbs purchasing power, the speaker stated that such action by deflation is necessary to save the country from financial ruin. While deflation must hurt some, he added, inflation has worse effects. It redistributes the wealth taking from the old-time, the savings class, the old and infirm and those whose purchasing power is in the past.

On the dues hand the speaker continued, deflation means some hardship for labor, restriction of enterprise and production and casualties in business.

By reducing the value... money and increasing the vo... of goods, effective, curbs ... Introduced to stop inflation the destruction of our econ... system, the speaker added, ... feeling that money control ... not cure all troubles, but will prove most of our economic difficulties.

THE COMMUNITY CHEST

The record of the Community Chest across Canada is not encouraging. As revealed in the Financial Post, only 15 campaigns of 55 conducted in 1950 reached or overshot their objectives. Five of the 19 reported that they had just reached their quota; one, in Cornwall, missed by only $168. On the other side of the ledger, Lindsay exceeded the quota by only $200, Victoria, B.C. by only $293, and Whitby by a mere $104.

Belleville was well down in the list, being recorded as raising 65.5 per cent of its quota. The objective was $83,000; and the totalled results were only $71,400. This city was fourth lowest in per capita contribution. Norfolk County, with a per capita contribution of 30c, raised two-thirds of its objective. Lachine was next low, with a contribution of 47c per each person. Yet the Lachine campaign brought in $1,392 more than the objective.

Third low in the contribution on a per capita basis was Cornwall, at 61c. That campaign, too, went over the top; Belleville came next, with a per capita record of 65c.

Despite the disappointments, the 19 campaigns could be called true successes, nearly $10.7 millions were raised across the country, thus falling only slightly short of the nearly $11 millions set as the objective.

The Community Chest idea, first formation, was meant to consolidate all the drives in each community each year. A few organizations still prefer to do their own campaigning, but many have thrown their lot in with the Community Chest. Try and keep it that. Less done a good job, and will in all likelihood continue to do so.

THE FALL OF THE MIGHTY

How time flies! Only a year ago, according to news stories Rudolph Hess shocked the world by deserting his Nazi comrades. In a dramatic flight, he parachuted into a farmer's field near Glasgow, filled with plans to oust the reigning British government and bring the world to a peaceful settlement of its problems.

Rudolph Hess was third in line in the Nazi hierarchy, and suffered the best fate of the three. Hitler is no more, and his right hand, Goering, is gone. Only Hess remains, and it appears that he is a mere shell of the man who was one of the top directors of Nazi policies. He sits alone in a Berlin prison, living on his memories. He is said to be not well mentally, and spends much of his time dreaming.

So goes the story of the mighty power, Hitler and his cohorts were in their glory while bombs rained on England. They sat on top of the world as the fight in Europe went all their way, and it appeared as if they might land on Britain's shores. Then came the greatest threat to freedom the world had ever seen, and it had to be stopped.

Then, faced with a determination and will to be free that would not be denied, the huge Nazi machine ground to a stop. Its leaders were captured or charged. Many were sentenced to death, others were given life imprisonment.

Rudolph Hess was given the latter sentence, and was stopped from high position. Now, he sits, ill of mind, suffering in a garden and sweeping corridors. Such is the ultimate fate of dictators and their satellites.

"TALLY HO"

It is hardly likely that most Canadians would like dormouse for supper tonight. Indeed, many people in this country would not know one of the furry animals if they were served with it. Possibly the only link they have with the dormouse is through the one that accompanied Alice on her travels through Wonderland.

It will come as a surprise, therefore, to learn that Britons are planning to eat dormice. They are animals are fattened, roasted, dipped in treacle (syrup to Canadians), and gulped, apparently somewhat in the manner of oysters. The only indication of the taste one might encounter comes from the Agriculture Ministry of Britain. The dormouse does not taste like mutton, which, while it might be a relief, does not define the particular qualities that roast dormouse might have.

British dormice have a penchant for apples, chestnuts, walnuts, pears, and other delicacies. For that reason, and because they are destroying valuable farm commodities, the dormice have been classed as pests. Perhaps a new delicacy will spring up in battered Britain; the fox hunt may come to be a thing of the past, and "Tally Ho" may be the signal for a dormouse hunt. The added attraction, of course, will be that the hunters can make a meal of the quarry when the hunt is over. It could only happen in England.

WEEDS

As with a child who will not eat,
With certain flowers I coax and plead,
Lest lose shall all my care defeat,
To take the food I know they need.
But oft they turn their heads away
And wish and thin and frail they stay.

But stubborn, healthy things are weeds.
They eat and drink and daily thrive;
They plant the food a rose bush

They ask no help to stay alive.
Should constant watch I fail to see,
Across the garden beds they'd sweep.

So with our habits, good and bad.
The evil ones have greater strength,
They'll crowd the space the good ones had
And run their roots to deeper length.
Like weeds they flourish, while the fair,
And worth while traits need

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

LOWLY MOLLUSK

Few days ago, reporting on a short, but delightful vacation in the Gulf Islands, I mentioned the excellent clams and oysters at the very doorstep of the citizens of those enchanted isles.

In fact, we brought home one large oyster which my wife picked up on the beach at Booth Bay on Salt Island. Very tasty indeed.

Got me to thinking about the life and times of the oysters, a strange sort of critter from any test, and I have some stuff here that I hope you may find interesting.

Well then. Oysters are headless, brainless, heartless, spineless. They make a mighty nice cocktail and this fact is known not only to gourmets but by smart operators who have developed the trick of pulling their wives apart and eating them, without any visible protest from the oyster.

The Pacific or Japanese oyster has smost completely taken the place of the Olympia oyster, which is native to the coast. The Olympias are still "a fine little chilsaucy dish," according to one oyster tycoon here describes them, but they're a good deal more expensive to raise.

One authority, Dr. Trevor Kincaid, of Seattle, reports a "mysterious race suicide" among the Olympics, but calmer heads put this down to the "stress of modern constitution. Some 10 years ago, for instance, a record storm buried acres of them in sand and in freeze-up shortly afterwards killed many of the survivors.

Commercially, because of their size, the Pacifics give a quicker return, but will stand considerably more abuse. Curiously enough, people on the west coast have never become such oyster-fanciers as easterners. So there's no great incentive to go ahead on the development of the Olympics. Too bad.

A Hard Life

Baby seed Pacific Oysters, brought in here from Japan, are not much to look upon. The seeds are tiny things, measuring about 1/2 to 1/3 wart-like growths on each shell. They are shucked overboard from a barge with pitchforks at selected beds.

These oysters become the parents of future crops and that's quite a subject in itself. For instance, these oysters grow as many as 60 million eggs in the spawning season from June to August. Have a terrific mortality rate. An oyster has one chance in 16,000 of getting past the fish to be eaten. Somebody has figured this out.

The baby oyster has no fun at all. He's about three-tenths of a millimeter across when he sets with a cement gland. One slat in the life is filled completely with him on before he's eaten or the weight of his growing shell pulls him down, and he settles in the mud. The oyster has about three weeks to get growing.

Those oysters that get a grip on something, which may be a tiny pebble or a shell, grow as they settle down to their stationary life and either die of old age at about 15 years or are eaten by somebody's stew.

The Pacific oysters you buy, usually about four and a half inches long, are around three years of age, but a full-grown oyster may measure as long as 14 inches and can provide enough soup for five persons.

Oysters apparently don't care one way or the other about it. D. F. Ireland, conchologist of the Australian Museum, claims to have made tests to prove that oysters feel no pain although I suspect that oysters, themselves, may know better.

Now's The Time

Oysters seem to hibernate during the winter and get all run down and underweight. They start feeding in the spring on a diet of minute water organisms which they suck in and retain at a rate of as much as 26 quarts an hour. Somebody has also figured this out.

Because of this, the best time to collect oysters is just about now, when they're fattened up and before they get to the spawning stage. In that stage they go gooey although safely edible in spite of the nonsense about "r" months. Most of the bigger companies do their shipping in the months from April and quick freeze the little darlings.

Adult oysters are unable to swim, burrow or creep, but the eggs often roam with the tides in search of a permanent home and thousands of "wild" Pacifics have strayed from the original beds.

Not many people have grown lyrical about oysters.

The late great John Radford is the only one who comes to mind who seems to have been able to find any moral in the oyster's life. Radford, who was a humanist in a quiet, bashful unassuming chap who sensitive that he went around in a shadow causes him to close. What a lesson the owly mollusk may give some of our fellow citizens who never know when to shut up.

On the other hand, an oyster hasn't much choice, has he?

Argument Over Trading With Reds Coming to Head

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The increasingly - caustic international argument over trading with the enemy is coming to a head.

Criticism of Britain for continuing such trade is expressed in a conciliatory gesture by Sir Lynden Macassey, president of the British Board of Trade. Yesterday he hinted that the country would now sell exports of strategic materials to communist China if the United Nations so decrees.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Acheson has announced that the United States delegation to the U. N. presented a compromise resolution to the U. N. country sanctions committee. It would provide for a world - wide embargo against the shipment of war materials or raw products which could make munitions.

The U. N. last summer asked all members not to lend aid to aggressors. The U. S. and the Philippines instituted absolute embargoes.

British inaugurated some trade controls, but opposed an embargo So did France. This has been on the ground that an embargo might hinder any red inclination to agree to a cease-fire.

Attitude Draws Fire

Even in England the British government attitude has been criticized. Thus the Daily Pictorial by the Conservative Daily Telegraph, which says in part:

"To many Americans the fact that Britain would have been prepared to recognize the Peking regime and accept it as a member of the Security council is regrettable enough. But the apparent reluctance of the British government to refrain from trading with Red China is even more serious.

Observers expect both powers to follow the U. S., and this viewpoint will seem to get support by the Shawcross statement.

As to the likelihood that red China might be willing to negotiate peace, there has been no sign of any such inclination.

Anyway, red China has been shown to show her desires for peace, if she has any. She is more likely to react to an air - tight embargo than she is to soft words.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

BUT LITTLE CHANGE ABOUT THE CHANGE

From the tenor of the queries received from women, many of them of good education as far as educations go, it is obvious that the credulous creatures still take a morbid view of the menopause or physiological cessation of the menstruation. Thanks to the quacks and nostrum mongers of yesteryear and the sophomoronic psychologists of today, the nineteenth century concept of "change of life" is accepted as genuine by a great many ignorant women—ignorant of anatomy, physiology, hygiene. Believe it or not, I feel sorry for these unfortunate and badly educated women who dread the menopause as a "crisis." I hope every woman who reads this harangue will send me a stamped self-addressed envelope and ask for the pamphlet The Menopause —that is, every one who harbors any morbid fears about it.

In combating the morbid anticipation of the menopause, I do not mean to deny the possibility of women experience some unpleasant manifestations during and following the menopause, notably the distressing hot flashes. In the pamphlet mentioned above I suggest one remedy which is harmless to try in any case and seems to have considerable relief in many such cases. As to other measures for the treatment of this and other disturbances associated with the menopause, I prefer to postpone now available (for prescription by the physician, not otherwise) seem as effective when taken in tablet form as when injected.

After all, I suppose we should remember that the credulous-has not yet entirely freed itself from the "female complaint" idea of hokum. We still cherish the tradition that menses is unclean, and so we teach elementary and high school pupils nothing about the anatomy, physiology or hygiene of sex. We prefer to let them pick up whatever knowledge they can find outside of formal education upon such filthy subjects as reproduction, childbirth and the like.

Not content with making the menopause sex miserable worrying about the "crisis" of life, which never happens—some trick psychologists now promote the concept of the "male climacteric." This is an impressive name for an imaginary "change of life" in men at 45 to 55. It gives the so-and-so's a useful alibi or excuse for bad behavior—when they are found out in it.

There is little I can do for ignorant women who have been led astray about the menopause other than to offer my sympathy for their plight. They should have listened to my advice long ago. My plea now is directed especially to the girls. In their teens—on written request accompanied with stamped self-addressed envelope, I'll send any girl the pamphlet Hygiene for Girls and Health For Women. It contains helpful suggestions in this pamphlet a girl may save herself a good deal of unnecessary discomfort and worry.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Chocolate and Cocoa

What harm does chocolate and cocoa do growing children? (Mrs. F.)

Answer — The theobromine (caffeine-like drug) in these beverages overstimulates nerves and kidneys. The beverage tends to give a false sense of satisfaction that the child has less natural appetite for essential foods. Chocolate, cocoa or chocolate milk interferes with assimilation of calcium and phosphorus from food, hence retards growth and development.

Witness, Eh?

Please give names and addresses of doctors here who permit expectant fathers to witness childbirth. (R. J. B.)

Answer — Would two on the side suit you? Your request irks me. Childbirth isn't a show. It is a miracle, and some men have enough intelligence to approach it in that manner. Still it is better to be a father. If you really want to become fit for parenthood study of the booklet Preparing for Maternity along with your wife may help make a man of you. For the booklet send 10c and stamped self-addressed envelope.

No Complications

Can a woman suffer serious complications by becoming pregnant the six weeks after spondectomy? (Mrs. W. G.)

Answer—No.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of the most curious trends of the times is the disappearance of clocks.

You can walk block after block in the new style, re-treated down, in districts of new cities and never see a clock. It was only a few years ago that there was some kind of a large public clock visible from wherever you stood, in any part of the business quarters of a city or town.

In every home, city hall, fire halls and pre-skyscraper office buildings, big clocks not only kept time, but sounded it. Stuck out on brackets over the doors of head offices and other respectable buildings, massive ornamental clocks were part of the architecture of cities.

More than that, there was a clock to be seen in windows, or on the walls clearly discernible from the street, without peering, in every jeweller, bank, branch bank telegraph office, grocery store and shoe shine parlor in the land.

Where have they all gone?

Surely they would fill a large civic dump. One thing appears to be clear, however. It was the wrist watch that killed the big clock. Even office boys wear wrist watches now.

In a beautiful new anniversary publication, the Longines people give some details of the rise of the wrist watch era.

The Empress of Josephine, about 1800, had a tiny watch made for her bracelet, but there is no other record. Not until 1880 is there another report on wrist watches, when a Swiss watchmaker furnished some to the German Navy. He tried to sell them in the United States and Chile, but never returned as impractical. In 1906, they were still not on the market. In 1910, they became the fashion in England; and in 1914, in Paris. Then the First War gave them a terrific market; and today wrist watches comprise 80% of the entire Swiss trade.

But it used to be nice to know the time without even having to look.

Strength for the Day

A SMILE HELPS

These are serious times and laughter comes hard for many. Let us never forget, however, that our forefathers came through untold hardships to secure our present liberties, but they could laugh in spite of their troubles. Evidence is ample that they sustained themselves with robust humor. Out of it has grown our distinct American contribution to the world's culture.

With the highest living standard, we should be the most humorous people in the world. Instead, we are among the most solemn. Our humor is largely confined to the comic strips and the radio. Even there it is not always wholesome.

Humorists are born not made, and they are too few. Because of us, knowing what a priceless distinction probably belongs to the Eskimos of all people, there is hardly an easy life, yet they laugh readily and heartily; and Americans are indeed a humor-loving people, but we are too busy making the highest living standard to create or see the fun around us as we go along. Perhaps it is not too easy for us to sit back and let Bobe Hope, Jack Benny or Jimmy Durante create synthetic humor for us.

Humorists are born not made, and they are too few. Because of us, knowing what a priceless

OUTLETS

A body of water that has no outlets soon becomes stagnant. There is nothing healthy about it. It is the same with human beings. They cannot stand still and hope to get anywhere. Even entitled childhood there must be outlets to stimulate imagination.

I know a businessman who took off three months from his year's work and went out into the open for recreation and new life. No wonder during those other nine months he was skillful and trusted surgeon that he was, believed by his patients, not only because they had faith in his skill but because of his habitual cheer. His life, his calling, not only he heard along the corridors of the hospital where he worked and gave hope to many who never really saw him.

Every person can easily become our greatest joy. I once knew a great American newspaper publisher who was a noted fisherman as well. Often he came to my city and we would meet for good talk. He wasn't much about books, people or newspapers. He was about fish and the way to get them; to take the line from them, to them. And all about everything concerned, with the art fishing.

I have just finished reading a book by Justice William O. Douglas, His hobby is mountain climbing and adventuring in the open. All naturalists and lovers of the wild tell us that their greatest thrills come from what they observe in the wild and recorded to them in such magic as they communicate with the forces of nature.

Every interest that one has is an outlet from another joy, health and personal happiness. The man or woman of many interests is always the most interesting of many friends! People who are forever looking outside for their pent-up energies and ideas are never murdered among the bores. They stimulate—never detract.

Many a man, burdened with problems, has been given an outlet for them through the reading of a detective story, or some humorous publication, a baseball game, an evening at the theatre, or a week or more every now and then in the country away from the city. Sometimes, it is more than a cure for the moment. There is much truth in the old saying that "a change is as good as a rest."

Southern Negro Dies in Chair After Long Fight

Laurel, Miss., May 8—(AP)—Willie McGee, who fought a long, losing fight against being put to death for rape, died in the electric chair early today.

Political issues colored the final months of the legal battles on behalf of the 37-year-old Negro truck driver, convicted of raping a white woman 5½ years ago.

The case attracted world-wide attention.

Up until the final hour, supporters sought a stay of execution from Governor Fielding Wright, a district judge, an appeal judge, Chief Justice Fred Vinson of the United States, and President Truman. All were denied.

All appeals were denied on the case which the state Supreme Court of Mississippi had ruled upon three times, and the United States Supreme Court had refused to review another three times. Governor Wright had once before declined executive clemency asked by members of the civil rights congress.

Political demonstrations at Jackson, Miss., and Washington marked the final efforts made last weekend to save McGee. In Washington yesterday, about 35 persons picketed the White House carried signs saying "Old soldiers never die—but lynch victims do" and "You fired MacArthur—now fire Jim Crow."

Authorities brought McGee to Laurel last night. Under Mississippi procedure, execution for a capital felony is carried out in the state's portable electric chair in the courtroom of the courthouse in the county where the felony occurred.

There was no disorder when McGee arrived at Laurel, but crowds packed the front of the courthouse. They appeared more curious than anything else.

About 1 a. m., the husband, brother and two brothers-in-law of McGee's victim—a Laurel housewife four years younger—rose from the front to witness the execution.

McGee made no statement as he was led to the chair at 2:03 a. m. He was pronounced dead at 2:10.

Chinese Reds Execute 285 In One Sweep

Hong Kong, May 8 — (Reuters) — Chinese communists executed 285 men and women in Shanghai April 30, according to official newspapers reaching here today.

This is the largest number the communists have yet admitted shooting in a single day.

The reports said the executions were in three Shanghai suburbs.

The accused were variously charged with being "imperialist running dogs, traitors, special agents, local tyrants, reactionary leaders of secret societies, smugglers, robbers, and gangsters responsible for the death of workers and the raping of women."

State Employees Paralyze Rome

Rome, May 8. (Reuters)—Italy's 1,600,000 State employees today began a 24-hour general strike for higher pay. It paralyzed government machinery throughout the country.

Government desks were deserted. Postmen left piles of mail in post offices. Telegraph and telephone employees stayed at home. Primary schools remained closed. State-run hospitals maintained only skeleton staffs.

Railway and station staff struck work from 8 a.m. to noon. Trains stopped for half an hour early today, and were to repeat the interruption twice more during the day.

Italy's Christian Democrat, Socialist and communist labor organizations were united in ordering the general strike in reply to the government rejection of their wage demands. The government meanwhile was preparing a bill curbing the civil servants' right to strike.

ESPIONAGE CHARGED

Tokyo, May 8. (AP)—Eighteen North Koreans and Japanese will be tried by a United States military court, Friday on what amounts to espionage charges.

The general charge is "acts inimical to the security of the occupation."

None of the charges revealed the country for which the alleged espionage was attempted. Maximum penalty is ten years imprisonment.

Death Blankets San Salvador After Quake

San Salvador, El Salvador, May 8—(AP)—Desolation, ruin and death blanketed areas of eastern El Salvador today in the wake of the little Central American country's worst earthquake disaster in history. In one city alone some 1,000 persons perished in the first shock Sunday.

As Red Cross agents and relief workers rushed to the stricken areas, new tremors were reported yesterday in Santiago de Maria—already battered by the first quake. There were no casualties reported.

Worst hit by the initial shock was Jucuapa, a city of 12,000, 90 miles east of San Salvador. The government said about 1,000 persons were killed.

Severe damage was also reported in Chinameca, population 17,000, about two miles east of Jucuapa, and the nearby towns of Nueva Guadalupe, Santiago de Maria and Asacifos. Hundreds of persons were injured.

The newspaper La Prensa Grafica said Jucuapa was a scene of "desolation, ruin and death," and that other towns in the neighborhood had been "destroyed."

New Tariff Agreements Are Likely

Ottawa, May 8 — (CP) — The fruits of six months tariff-trimming negotiations at Torquay, England, will be made public by the government tomorrow, and in all likelihood they will include important tariff agreements with the United States.

Altogether, Canada negotiated bilateral tariff-cutting contracts with 16 countries, but it is known she concentrated her attention on the United States market, with the hope of cutting the duty on at least one metal—aluminum.

By far outweighing any of the concessions she may have received or given will likely be the importance of her move to make these concessions at the expense of the long-reigning commonwealth preferential tariff system.

Financing Cost Of Institutions Very Serious

Kingston, May 8—(CP)—Financing of institutions such as hospitals and universities is going to be more and more difficult, Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal of Queen's University, warned the 100 delegates to the second Ontario Institute for Hospital Administrators here Monday. He was welcoming the delegates to Queen's where the institute is being held.

"The problem we are facing in regard to the cost of public institutions is very serious," said Dr. Wallace. "On one hand is the need for more assistance from the public purse. On the other hand there is maintenance of independence so we do not have socialized institutions, which, most people in Canada today feel would be unwise."

Need for the inauguration of a standard hospital accounting system for hospitals all across Canada, was outlined by Dr. J. Gilbert Turner, executive director of the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal.

When funds became available from private or public sources, a study on a standard system of hospital accounting already undertaken by the Canadian Hospital Council, will go forward, said Dr. L. G. Bradley, Toronto hospital executive and councillor.

Tribute was paid by R. Fraser Armstrong, general superintendent of the Kingston Genera Hospital, and general chairman of the committee, which organized the institute, to the assistance given by the Federal and Ontario governments to hospitals in recent years.

London—(CP) — Anyone who attacks the press can rely on being reported in full, Lord Woolton told the annual dinner of the Newspaper Society. The Conservative party chairman said editors are always "bending backwards to show they are not biased.

Belvedere, Kent, England — (CP)—A man that stung the driver of a streetcar here was blamed for an accident that resulted in nine persons being injured.

Rev. J. F. Everson Addresses W.M.S.A.

The May meeting of the Holloway Street W.M.S. Auxiliary was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon. The president Mrs. Cronkhite welcomed the members and guests. Mrs. Bennett led in prayer using a beautiful prayer poem.

During the business meeting the literature secretary, Mrs. Sleeth, urged that each member set aside a quiet time each day for Bible study and prayer. Mrs. R. Bell presented the worship service with the theme "Unseen Prayer". She was assisted by Mrs. Oliphant, Mrs. Vickers and Mrs. Van Orton.

Guest Speaker

Rev. J. F. Everson, who has recently attended the Ontario Temperance Federation convention in Ottawa, was guest speaker and was introduced by Mrs. Coulter. Mr. Everson said that his interest in Temperance had resulted from the teachings of his mother, a father and his Sunday School teacher. He spoke of what had been done in India in the cause of temperance, where prohibition is in effect in many parts of the country and as a result, there are happier families, greater proficiency and industry.

In Canada temperance education is being stressed. "We are not opposed to the drinker but to the drink and what it can do to homes and families. A drinker is sick and it is the duty of the church and state to help him. If we are antagonistic to the drinker we are defeating our purpose. Jesus hated sin but loved the sinner. Our attitude in temperance workers should be one of calm, kindly reasoning. The public will accept a certain amount of temperance in temperance but no censor or dictation." Mr. Everson went on to say that the liquor traffic would destroy the church if it could, but the church could destroy the liquor traffic if it would.

A Challenge

Temperance education is a challenge to anyone interested in the welfare of young people. This education must start with children. Adults are sitting where the child will be sitting tomorrow. The fate of the nations and humanity is in a child's hands and adults had better pay attention to the health and welfare of that child.

Mrs. Bell thanked Mr. Everson for his message, following which she and members of her group served tea.

City M.O.H. Outlines School Health Program to Members Of BCI School and Home Club

At the annual meeting of the Collegiate Home and School Association held in the gymnasium on Monday evening the members were introduced to the recently appointed Medical Officer of Health for the city, Dr. A. M. Breuls by a member of the Board of Health, Mr. H. R. Varcoe. As a gesture of appreciation the president, Mrs. F. R. Harback presented Mrs. E. David, convener of Health with a corsage in recognition of her unfailing zeal in promoting the health services of the community. Mr. Varcoe was given a boutonniere.

Dr. Breuls outlined the school health program, which will be undertaken when the health department is set up. The purposes include teacing children the rudiments of personal and community hygiene; protecting the school child from acquiring diseases from others; giving assurance that each pupil is physically fit for the school routine imposed upon him; and detecting actual disease or physical defects that may impede normal development and growth.

The school hygiene program should not include corrective work of a definitely medical, dental or surgical nature," said the speaker. "The aim is to encourage full utilization of the existing facilities in these fields through education.

Regular Inspection

"The health services include regular inspection of schools by the sanitary inspector to insure that everything is in order and to make recommendations to the Board of Education when necessary.

"Supervision of communicable disease will assure immunization against smallpox and diphtheria. In the daily inspection by the teacher any pupil presenting the common signs of infectious disease such as fever, sore throat or skin rash should be referred to the school nurse. The parents should be informed that the pupil has been sent home on account of suspected illness and advised that the family physician be called. Return to school after any of the minor illnesses should be approved by the school nurse following the period of isolation. Any questionable case can be referred to the M. O. H. for decision.

"The emphasis has shifted to closer supervision of the infant and pre-school child with the object of correcting early defects and of enabling a child to start school unencumbered by physical handicaps."

Mr. L. A. Kells expressed the thanks of the association to the speaker.

Glee Club Heard

A choral group of the school Glee Club presented four numbers to the piano accompaniment of Mr. Linton Read, "Steal Away", "Let Us All People Go", "Bless This House", and "The Blind Ploughman."

An announcement was made by the president concerning series of broadcasts called The Christian Family Week commencing the morning of May 14 over the local station which will be of interest to parents.

Excellent reports showing a year of progress and a better understanding and knowledge of the values of Home and School were read by the following conveners: annual secretary's report, Miss Ruth Silvester; treasurer's report, Mrs. N. F. Tonkin; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. Langman; program, Mr. L. A. Kells; publicity and radio, Mrs. S. D. Hagerman; social, Mrs. H. H. Gibson; hospitality, Mr. A. J. Hill; health, Mrs. E. David; membership, Mrs. F. V. Grandame.

Context of Recommendation

A recommendation regarding scholarships was read and will be forwarded to the Board of Education through the principal, Mr. C. R. Currie. The context of the recommendation read;

"The executive of the Home and School Association suggests that they do not strive to raise funds for the purpose of scholarships because it is not the function of the Home and School to be a money-making organization. It is a known fact that the energies of the Home and School are dissipated in the wrong direction if that is its object, and that its function is to work in the community and the school, to promote the best interests of education. The executive suggests that the Home and School recommendations concerning scholarships be submitted to the Board of Education:

1. That a permanent scholarship board be appointed to rule on the conditions and awarding of scholarships.

2. That the personnel of the scholarship board consist of members of the staff appointed by the Board of Education, a member of the Collegiate, a representative from the Chamber of Commerce and one from the Home and School Association for a period of two years.

3. That the fund be set up for student aid.

5. That awards of $25.00 and over be known as scholarships, and under $25.00 as prizes.

6. That the money for nurseries and scholarships go only to students who intend to further education.

Spoke of Achievements

Mrs. F. R. Harback spoke on the achievements of the past year which had been carried out through the enthusiasm and devotion to their work of all members of the executive.

Mr. Currie spoke briefly extending his thanks to the executive for their splendid work of the past year and the educational facilities and guidance of the president, Mrs. Harback.

Mrs. H. W. Shand, chairman of the nominating committee, brought in the slate of officers for 1951-52 and they were duly installed by Mrs. Ralph Morden who read the impressive Home and School installation ceremony. List of Officers

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

...ress ...and her "problem friendships"

It isn't only the teen-agers who sometimes have troubles with friendships. By a problem friendship I mean, of course, one in which the relationship has changed and which the girl finds herself confronted with the choice of having an affair or breaking up the friendship.

Two other groups of women who frequently come up against this situation are the widowed and the divorced, and particularly the latter.

Here is an example of what happy a divorcee experiences, as told by a young woman of 26, who was recently divorced after a marriage of seven years. She writes:

"I divorced my husband after he and I drifted apart. I am the mother of a five-year-old child. Lately I have begun to accept dates and that is where my trouble started. I am not seriously interested in any man, but I do want friendships with men, provided they are kept on the right basis.

"There is one man who, after we have been dating for two months, feels that I should be willing to have an affair with him. I have never led this man on and have never accepted any gifts from him, but he has taken me to a lot of nice places and I have had him at my apartment for dinner, to try and repay him for what he has spent on me.

"He doesn't try to get serious with me often, but when he does, I don't know how to make him understand my position. I've explained to him that I enjoy his company and want to continue being friends with him, but that I don't love him and have no intention of yielding to him. Then he seems to come to his senses and asks my forgiveness for his behavior, which I grant because I like him.

"I have honestly tried to be cautious about these things and I do believe this man realizes it and respects me for it, because he says he would like to marry me and is very much ashamed of himself after any such incident. I have had these experiences with other men, but they were definitely no good, because after they were put in their place, they stopped coming to see me. This man is 39 years old, but he has never been married."

"I had one bad marriage and now I am trying to start all over so I would like to have only nice friendships with my men friends and, especially with this particular one. Has there been anything wrong in the way I have tried to deal with the problem?"

It certainly is no mistake for this young woman to refuse to permit intimacies on the part of this man, or any other. But what I am wondering is, whether or not she has been quite as definite and firm on this point as she thinks. Surely she knows that there is more than one way of saying "No", and that it can be said in a way that leaves the door open instead of shutting it permanently. It's not at all impossible that while her intentions are as she states them to be, she has not made them quite as clear to the young man as she has in her letter to me. I suggest that she think this over.

If she is entirely sincere in her attitude, she will, of course, tell this man that the next time anything of the sort happens, she will not see him again. That's the best way for her to state her position to him. And unless and until he has shown that he intends to respect her wishes regarding their relationship, she had better issue no more invitations to her apartment.

Just because there are many men who regard widows and divorcees as fair game, there is no need to become disillusioned. There are plenty of other men who regard such women with the proper respect, and a young woman who is only 26 has plenty of time to find them.

BEAUTY

Don't pet your peeves

Don't let peeves get you down.

Considering that what goes on certain extent, upon the human face, it would help along the campaign for good looks if we were not disturbed by small irritations. All of us have pet peeves. It may be the manner in which a relative uses a knife and fork, the way a member of the male species wear his hat on the back of his head, or the shrill or whining voice of a neighbor.

At an international congress of psychology held at Yale University some years ago, no less than 907 pet peeves were listed. It would seem that the members of the human race are easily irritated. Seems senseless, considering that there are so many disturbing influences in the world, so much to get one down. The learned gentlemen who were nosing into the subject found that the time of life in which we must be most on guard against a state of irritability is between 20 and 50. Susceptibility to annoyance is least between the ages of 10 and 25, which seems to prove that youth is more tolerant than adults.

One peeve: dancing with a fat person. Twice as many men as women stated that that was something they just couldn't do. The talk of the high-pressure sales-

GOOD MANNERS

Ideals of motherhood and daughter-hood set forth at Mother-and-Daughter banquet

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At a Mother-and-Daughter banquet to be given soon, my man makes many individuals see red and want to fight. A dripping faucet drives most people dotty.

Don't let peeves get you down! Let us visualize a bridge game: two husbands and two wives. Both men start banging cards on the table, a horrid habit. One wife nags daggers, presents, gets herself into a fine emotional tizzy. The other woman says to herself, "They are a couple of ill-mannered idiots, but I'm not going to let them spoil my evening. If I let myself get bothered I'll have a headache, and tomorrow morning I'll look like a grand old ruin." So she is silent, just smiles, "says no mind."

Perhaps some member of your family hangs onto the telephone for half-hours at a time. Well, that's her privilege. Just go about your own affairs. Maybe the men never think of hanging up towels after using them. You can't do a thing about that; you can't change the habits of a lifetime. Just fold the towels and put them on the rack.

Does the Pappy take off his shoes and leave them in the living room, instead of putting them where they belong? Put them away yourself. You are spoiling him, but no home is a home unless there is peace in it. Every wife and mother must cope occasionalement now and then. It is the easiest way. It avoids arguments. It keeps premature wrinkles away. It is an insurance against jangling nerves that drive you crazy.

One cannot expect other individuals to live up to one's own code of conduct. You have to take them as they are.

mother is to give the speech to the mothers present, and I have been asked to greet the daughters. Will you please give me some suggestions for these greetings? The banquet is to be given the day before Mother's Day, and the important significance of this Day, to mothers and daughters, is the subject of the banquet. Thank you for any help.

Frances G.

Your mother might say something like this: "To me has been given the honor of welcoming all you mothers who have come here with me to meet with our beloved daughters. It is particularly fitting that we meet here tonight, just before Mother's Day, when all of us are remembering and renewing in our hearts the fine and high ideals of this day dedicated to all mothers, to Motherhood. And in the hearts of all of us, I know, has been and is and ever will be the hope that we have been 'good mothers', that we have given to these dear daughters of ours the right influences, loving understanding, the moral and spiritual strength they need for character-building, that we can pass on to them the torch of courage and loyalty, that we have inspired them as we prayed most earnestly to inspire them, and that wherever they go they will know that our abiding love goes with them.

"Today these young people are given enormous responsibilities, and are to be given enormous responsibilities. They must have new trails of thought, hopes and ideals. They must contribute their wholehearted share to the making of the pattern for this so-problematic new world. May all Good and Goodness be with them always."

And you might say to the daughters something like this: "And to me has been given the honor of welcoming all you daughters who have come here with me to meet with our beloved mothers. We want to pay tribute to Mother's Day. . . most humbly to all mothers, and most lovingly to you, our mothers, here with us tonight. To you and our fathers we owe all that we are and your love of us and your ideals for us make us always strive to be what you would have to have us be. From your beloved hands we accept the torch of courage and integrity with the promise to keep it brightly burning. And may its light so shine that it will do proper honor to you.

"You mothers have watched us tenderly, during these reaching-forth years of our lives, have gently guarded and guided us. And for your love and loving understanding and encouragement, we, in the words of the Bible, 'arise and call you blessed.'"

Important Dinner Dress

Handsome for evening wear.

By VERA WINSTON

CLEVER manipulation of fabric lends interest and distinction to this handsome dinner dress of sheer crepe in beige. It is quite unadorned save for the narrow shoulder straps of rhinestones and baguettes, and narrow belt of same. The dropped shoulder line is very flattering. The bodice buttons in front and the skirt is flared, falling in graceful folds. The seaming at the waist is released into a few gathers. It is a good choice for either the slender or more mature figure.

SHORT TENURE

Senator Wants War Declared On Red China

Washington, May 8—(AP)—Senator Harry Cain (Rep. Wash.) called yesterday for a declaration of war on communist China as the "tragic blood bath" in Korea. And Senator Robert Kerr (Dem. Okla.) said the cost of human misery would be vastly greater if the Korean war spreads.

With the clash of opinion, the Truman-MacArthur controversy broke out with renewed violence in the wake of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's testimony to senators investigating his dismissal by the president.

Cain said that, trying to limit armed action against the Chinese reds, as the administration proposes, would be "the greatest possible incentive to world war three."

Kerr, leading democratic critic of MacArthur's policies, said that war with red China would amount to "self-imposed hari-kari."

INDIA WAITS

New Delhi, May 8 — (AP) — India has decided to wait until the next Canadian wheat crop before accepting a Canadian offer of $25,000,000 worth of grain, parliament was told today.

The deputy food minister, M. T. Rao, told a questioner that the Indian government has agreed in principle to accept the Canadian offer of wheat instead of dollars under the Colombo plan But it had found present Canadian Stocks immediately exportable "of low grade."

SALES and SERVICE

A MESSAGE OF IMPORTANCE TO THE HOUSEHOLDER:—

Your home heating system represents a substantial investment in money and is one of the most important sources of comfort and health for your family. As such, it deserves good care and should get this care as soon as possible in the Spring.

An automatic oil burner should have a yearly inspection each Spring. The burner should be adjusted, oiled, cleaned and any necessary repairs or replacements made. AN EXPERT CHECK-UP WILL SAVE YOU MONEY.

If you have a coal-fired furnace or boiler, the firebox should be emptied. Every vestige of ash, clinkers and unburned fuel should be removed. This will protect the grates and firebox against the damaging effects of corrosion caused by the combination of Summer moisture and sulphuric acid in the ashes and clinkers.

The grates should be inspected and grate bars that are broken or damaged replaced.

Soot in the flues or radiator of the furnace, and in the smoke pipe should be removed in the Spring as well. If this is not done, the soot will absorb moisture from the air and set up a corrosive action that will eat away the metal.

We are pleased to submit this information to you and trust that it may save you money. If we can be of assistance in cleaning, modernizing or replacing your heating equipment, we will be most pleased to furnish estimates on request.

Yours truly,
W. J. DOYLE, General Manager

EARLY FINISH

W. Herridge (CC... West), saying he... party, he... takes the initiative in a... to open United Nations negotiations with com... China.

The suggestion was promptly echoed by Howard Green (PC—Vancouver-Quadra) who said that U.N. should have only one objective in Korea—victory.

But Green said "politicians" should not put "wraps" around U.N. military commander in Korea. The commander should be allowed to use Chinese Nationalist troops and to bomb bases on the Chinese mainland. A naval blockade of China should be instituted.

Canada, he added, should go to bat and demand that countries not supported U.N. intervention in Korea supply fighting forces to help end the war.

Critical of Policy

Grayston, (PC—Peel) said that Canada put more pressure on the United States to get action on joint development of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, also made emphasis on aid to under-developed countries as a means to combat communism.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, criticized U.N. policy in Korea. He said many people are wondering how the U.N. can achieve objectives without some clear-cut policy.

Mr. Pearson said the Canadian government is still opposed to the bombing and blockading of China and the use of Chinese Nationalist forces now on Formosa against the Chinese communists. These measures could serve to extend the Korean war.

Formosa should be "neutralized" while the fighting is going on in Korea, and certainly should not be handed over to a Chinese government fighting the United Nations. Its future could be discussed after the fighting. There would be no question of recognizing the Chinese communist government diplomatically while they defied the United Nations.

Would Not Be Included

The Chinese communist government, he said, should not be included in current discussions for a Japanese peace treaty. Discussions of who will sign for China should be left until after the Korean war.

While he made no reference to the controversy in the United States concerning Gen. MacArthur's proposals for bombing Manchuria, Mr. Pearson said that authorizing the U.N. commander in Korea to bomb China would be "one way by which the conflict could be spread."

Such action would involve grave risk of extending the fighting without, as we see it, any corresponding assurance that such extension would end the war."

Sidney Adamson (PC—York West), who recently spent several months in Germany and Europe, said he believes Russian armies will remain in central and western Europe until they are driven out by superior force. The place to stop the Russians is on their present borders, not on the Rhine and certainly not on the English Channel.

"It is defensive thinking to talk about stopping the Russians on the Rhine; it is defeatist thinking to talk about stopping them on the Channel."

BRITAIN AND

"Our foreign policy is not a political issue. It is a matter of life and death. It is a matter of the future of mankind."

For the United States to "go it alone," is Asia, he said, could wreck the whole free world security system, including the United Nations and the North Atlantic Pact.

Cannot Go Alone

MacArthur, in Senate testimony last week, called for an ultimatum to red China—either to talk peace or suffer military action within her own borders. He said the United States should be willing to "go it alone" if the other United Nations held back.

"We cannot go it alone in Asia and go it in company in Europe," Truman said.

If the United States were separated from its allies, "that would be a tremendous Soviet victory."

"We do not intend to fall into that trap."

He left open the possibility that some of MacArthur's demands for harder blows against the reds might be carried out, however.

"If the aggressor takes further action which threatens the security of the United Nations in Korea, we will counter that action."

Two Senators disclosed to reporters, meanwhile, that Marshall told the Senate Committees yesterday that if Chinese reds make a mass air attack on United Nations troops, retaliatory air strikes will be made against Manchuria.

B-45 Explodes, Three Members Of Crew Killed

Houston, Tex., May 8 (AP) — The pilot of a big jet bomber was blasted clear last night when the B-45 exploded. Three crew members were killed.

Hundreds saw the bright flash of the exploding plane. Burning wreckage falling to earth spurred reports of a two-plane collision.

Lieut. Bob Hampton was only slightly injured when blasted clear. His parachute opened.

Only charred, twisted wreckage scattered over a muddy pasture a few miles southeast of Houston was left of the bomber.

Ellington air force base refused comment on the crash. No cause was advanced.

Argylls Praised For Korea Fight

Tokyo, May 8 (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway has commended the First Battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, transferred recently from Korea to Hong Kong.

In a letter to Lt.-Col. G. I. Neilson, battalion commander, the United Nations chief praised the Highlanders for their "heroic actions and achievements in Korea."

"There are left fighting in Korea a host of comrades who view with great regret the departure of this splendid unit which has fought so magnificently since it first joined the battle in defence of the Nakiong perimeter," Ridgway wrote.

The veteran Scottish battalion was relieved by another British unit just before the Chinese reds launched their offensive two weeks ago.

Former Police Chief of Parkhill Held for Fraud

Toronto, May 8 — (CP) — Richard L. Hancock, 43, former police chief of Parkhill, will appear in court here Monday charged with violating the Ontario Securities Commission Act. He was arrested Saturday in Sutton, 50 miles north of Toronto. Commission officers said Hancock is president of the Canadian Safe-T Dial Company. The commission said the company never filed registration papers and it claims Hancock sold unqualified stock in the firm.

Russell E. MacNamara, said to be the inventor of an ignition lock for automobiles and founder of the company, was convicted on a similar charge last year and sentenced to a year in jail. Police said they have been looking for Hancock since MacNamara's arrest.

The commission said the company is still in existence, but is listed as inactive. Hancock is a native of Parkhill, 20 miles northwest of London, Ont.

Three Western Powers May Leave 'It Up to Russia'

Paris, May 8 (AP)—The three western powers are expected to tell Russia formally today "it's up to you" to decide whether there will be a big four foreign ministers' meeting to discuss peace and disarmament.

The United States, Britain and France agreed that they have gone as far as they can go in trying to meet Russian terms for arranging an agenda for such a meeting.

Deputy foreign ministers of the four powers begin their 10th week of talks on the agenda problem today. They have agreed, tentatively at least, on some eight subjects their bosses should talk about. But they still are woefully deadlocked on the wording of a vital eighth—the subject of arms reduction.

The agenda, now eight-ninths agreed to, was submitted last Wednesday by deputies Philip Jessup of the U.S., Ernest Davies of Britain and Alexander Parodi of France. It was described by Jessup then as "the maximum effort on the part of the western powers to secure agreement."

So far, Soviet delegate Andrei Gromyko has shown no inclination to accept fully the west's "maximum effort" on the agenda although he did say he was prepared to accept everything on it except the wording of the arms reduction item.

He wants the item to commit the foreign ministers to talk about reducing the arms of the big four countries only. The westerners insist that they should talk about all the world's arms and armies — including such powerful communist satellites as red China and the Balkan countries.

WINS HART TROPHY

Cliff Schmidt had to play in the National Hockey League for 15 seasons before he was able to win one of the league's prized individual awards. However, the 1950-51 season proved to be the greatest in his career and the 31-year-old captain of the Boston Bruins was selected as the winner of hockey's highest individual award, the Hart Trophy.

* * *

In winning the Hart Trophy for 1950-51, Schmidt amassed a total of 40 points out of a possible 54, and finished 12 points ahead of Maurice Richard of Canadiens, who polled 28 points. Points were awarded on a three-two-one basis, and the selections were made by a panel of 18 hockey writers and broadcasters — three from each N. H. L. city.

* * *

Schmidt was the first choice of 10 selectors, the second pick of four and the third choice of two. Richard had five first-place votes, four seconds and five thirds. Red Kelly and Gordie Howe, both of Detroit Red Wings, were next with 11 points apiece, although Kelly would get the call over Howe as he had a first-place vote. The red-headed defenceman had one first-place selection, two seconds and four thirds, while Howe had five second - place votes and one third - place pick.

* * *

Other players who received votes for this trophy which is awarded annually to "the player adjudged to be most valuable to his team," were Ted Kennedy, Toronto, 8; Bert Olmstead, Canadiens, 6. . Bill Quackenbush, Boston, 2; and Al Rollins, Toronto; and Roy Conacher, Chicago, one point each.

* * *

Besides being the 1950 - 51 winner of the Hart Trophy, Schmidt was also the unanimous choice as center on the NHL All - Star Team. He played 63 games for the Bruins during the regular season, scored 22 goals and had 23 assists for 61 scoring points. He was the top scorer on the Bruins and the third highest in the League. A terrific two-way player who gives his all every second he's on the ice, it was the great play of Schmidt that enabled the Bruins to garner a playoff position.

* * *

A great inspirational player, Milt is the key man on the Boston team. He has held that role for several years. He was centre on the NHL All-Star Team in 1939-40 and rated the best in the business in those days. Then he joined the RCAF and missed the 1942-43, '43-44 and '44-45 seasons while serving in the armed forces. He returned to the Bruins in the 1945-46 season and soon took up where he left off as one of the stalwarts of the sport. There's never been a case in history where a player made the All-Star Team and then, several 11 years afterwards, THAT exactly what Milt did when he won honors this season. He also made the All-Star Team in 1946-47.

* * *

Everyone in hockey is happy to see such a grand competitor, a player who has been an asset to the sport in every way, win the Hart Trophy and the accompanying $1,000 that goes with it, for 1950-51. News that Milt Schmidt has been named winner of the Hart Trophy will be greeted with, "It couldn't happen to a more deserving guy!"

BATTLE OF THE BULLS

Nearly 600 pounds of packydermic beef on the hoof will clash in Memorial Arena this week-end. The main bout brings together two "Bulls" of the ring, one the Arctic "Bull of Bashem", Yukon Eric and the other the Polish Bull of the black Pampas of Turnip, one Wladyslaw Talun, he of the massive surgically built and corrugated pate.

It should be a slow - motion if effective bout. Both of these bashing buckaroos are not noted for their speed, but their stalking tactics and terrific strength should make for one of the best bone-crushing melanges the Arena has seen in many a moon.

* * *

And look who's back in the semi-final. None other than your old friend Earl "Moose" McCready, and that man Lee (The Leer) Henning. That too should be a bout for the books. In the opener Nate Brown, an old familiar with Belleville fandom will tangle with a fast fleshy newcomer, Toni Landy, who has been making quite a name for himself in and around the circuit.

MORE POWER TO 'EM!

They call themselves the "West Hill Bombers" and the manager is eight-year-old Wally Hardwick. All the players with the exception of the catcher are under 13 so any squad who wants a game had better get in touch with Mr. Wally Hardwick. Members of the team are: Kenny Weeks, pitcher; Gerardo Sinibaldi, catcher; Bill Cathorpe, first; Johnny Carter, second; Billy Hardwick, third Larry Zebedee, shortstop; fielders: Wally Hardwick, Bobby Ackerman and Jackie Sellden.

Capitol Rooters Cannot Believe Their Beloved Senators Only Slightly Behind N. Y. Yankees

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Even the most ardent Washington rooters are convinced that manager Bucky Harris is doing it with mirrors.

Any moment they expect to wake up and find that the Senators' place among the American League's elite is a mirage.

Capitol rooters, who have had little to cheer about for nearly 20 years, see their much - maligned cast-off crew yapping at the heels of the pace-setting New York Yankees.

Three weeks into the campaign the Nats lead such highly - regarded contenders as Boston, Cleveland and Detroit. The Yankees have a mere 1 ½-game edge.

The amazing part of the Senators' upsurge is that they've been doing it without any two-time 20 Sid Hudson, their ace pitcher. The tall, lean righthander, burdened by a hip injury, hasn't pitched a inning yet.

In Hudson's stead, Cuban righthander Conrado Marrero and Sandello Consuegra are the mainstays. Each has a perfect record, no defeats. Mickey Vernon, Irv Noren, Sam Mele and Gil Coan have spearheaded the Washington attack.

Consuegra, for the first time this season, wasn't up to the mark last night. However, his mates made up for that by belting out 15 hits. Cleveland pitchers for 17 hits to outscore the Indians 10-7.

The Nats' fifth straight starter Johnny Vandermeer and rookie Gerald Staley, had the Indians' only singles in the fourth inning to tally five times. They added five more runs in the fifth. Consuegra yielded four runs in the fourth when Washington had its fifth. Mickey Harris finished and got credit for the victory despite the finishing homers by Luke Easter and Allie Clark.

Every starter had a hand in Washington hit parade. Gil Coan, Cass Michaels and rookie catcher Frank Sacket each had three hits. Irv Noren drove in two runs.

Gene Bearden, recently sold by Washington to Detroit, was the star of the Tigers' 10-6 victory which snapped the Yankees' 9-game winning streak.

Working in a relief role, the lefthander set the Yanks back with five hits in seven innings for his first victory. He also got a home run in the eighth off Tom Ferrick. Other four-baggers went to Dick Kryhoski and Hoot Evers. The loss was charged to Fred Sandford who replaced starter Tommy Byrne in the sixth.

Gene Woodling and Yogi Berra paced the Yankees with two-run homers. Woodling also collected two singles and drove in two runs. Berra got a pair of hits and two counted for two tallies.

Willard Nixon was the whole works as Detroit Red Sox blanked the Browns in a St. Louis night game. On his mound duty he struck out and got half of Boston's four safeties off loser Ned Garver. One of Nixon's hits was his first major-league home run.

Brooklyn moved into third place, edging out St. Louis Cardinals 4-3, in the only game in the National League. Carl Erskine checked the game into overtime on a ninth-inning homer by catcher Del Rice, took a tenpenny nail in the 3-2 lead. The Dodgers bounced back with two runs in their half of the 10th.

The Redbirds retained their fourth place berth when Preacher Roe, an ex-Redbird, went all the way to earn his fourth win last week as Gerry Staley was the loser.

Pinch-hit sawdust at third base was first the hero, then the goat for the Cards. It was his single that drove in the tying run in the 9th. And it was his double error on Carl Furillo's grounder that opened the gates for Brooklyn's tying and winning runs.

Memorial Cup Game Postponed Until Tonight

Winnipeg, May 8—(CP)—The dominion junior hockey final between Barrie Flyers and Winnipeg Monarchs will resume here tonight after a postponement due to leaking ammonia at the amphitheatre here.

Barrie Flyers, holding a 3-0 lead in games in the best-of-seven series, will be out to make it four straight.

The two clubs were ready for action last night when Jimmy Ward, Washington star, announced the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, called off the game.

A broken valve in the ammonia pipe in the freezing unit sent the fumes throughout the building, even driving the hockey fans from ring rooms.

Gordon Menard, in charge of the rink, first discovered the break as he made his rounds to check the ice. He said: "It was a sizzling sound" in the engine room, and was startled by the fumes as he opened the door to investigate.

The game suffered minor burns to the thigh but was" released from hospital after treatment.

Dunn made the announcement of the postponement after a huddle with Fire Chief Harold Closson, Jack Roxburgh of Simcoe, Ont., president of the Ontario Hockey Association and Jack Heggie Emms of Barrie and manager Pat Lee of Monarchs.

Chief Clawson said the rink was not fit for human occupancy.

Barrie, who has been hitting at the rink conditions here since his arrival last week said:

"If they must play games in rinks like these, they can expect things like this to happen."

Flyers have been impressive in their three victories to date, outscoring Monarchs 14-5. Their first-string line of centre Jackie White and wings Real Chevrefils and Leo Labine has collected 15 scoring points.

57 Thoroughbreds Still Eligible For King's Plate

(By The Canadian Press)

Fifty - seven Canadian - bred thoroughbreds are still eligible to compete in this year's King's Plate race at Toronto Woodbine Track May 26, the Ontario Jockey club announced today. The list was cut by 23 from the number eligible last Dec. 1, but one of the largest fields on record is expected to enter the Canadian turf classic—oldest continuously-run race in North America.

The 57 three-year-olds are the property of 43 different owners who are shooting for the king's 50 guineas and a total prize estimated at $21,000.

Largest entries are from the Toronto stables of E. P. Taylor and Bill Beasley. Each has four listed.

The Taylor colorbearers include Brilliance, a filly and the winter book favorite, and Mighty Battle, also high on the lists.

Jackie Robinson had to step up the pace to 1:40 4-5 to beat Darkhill in the National League batting race last week. With that time Brooklyn's second baseman boosted his average four points to hold the lead. All averages include Sunday's games.

In the American League, two Chicago White Sox rookies and shortstop Chico Carrasquel held the first three spots. Newcomer Clarence Minoso, recalled last week from the Cleveland Indians, was in the lead with 14 hits in 36 trips for a .389 mark. Jim Busby, up from Sacramento, Calif., was second with .368 on 25 hits in 67 times at bat. Carrasquel had 27 hits for 79 trips for .342.

Owner of Derby Winner Prefers Cups to Cash

New York, May 8—(AP)—Jack Amiel, prosperous New York restaurateur and sportsman who collected $80,000 plus some healthy bets when Count Turf won the Kentucky Derby, is an unusual guy.

He'd rather let the horse go around gathering additional shiny hardware in the form of loving cups than more money. Of course the money will come in handy for the feed bill, but Amiel also wants trophies to display alongside his Derby gold watch.

Amiel once hawked soda pop at Yankee Stadium and then played his pennies into restaurants, real estate and race horses.

Now he's considering sending Count Turf to Baltimore for a showdown race May 26 between the top four horses of any kind in the National League batting race last week. With .400 or better Brooklyn second baseman boosted his average four points to hold the lead. All averages include Sunday's games.

In the American League, two Chicago White Sox rookies and shortstop Chico Carrasquel held the first three spots. Newcomer Clarence Minoso, recalled last week from the Cleveland Indians, was in the lead with 14 hits in 36 trips for a .389 mark. TELEVISION, whatever you think of it, has at least rendered a service to the International Baseball League. Almost singlehanded, it has chased the Little Giants from Jersey City and over into Canada. Now it has driven them from Canada to the border and right into Ottawa's Landowne Park. The new commandant of medium cannot claim the entire credit for the move, however, for the stalwart, aggressive, Tommy Gorman has had designs on the Canadian end of the tow rope. Now that the Ottawa baseball club boasts an International League club, it's expected that the telecasting rivalry of Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto will be sustained during the summer season, to be continued in the fall on the football gridiron.

Capital Sporting Centre:

There seems to be little concern whether Ottawa can support a Triple A baseball entry, and there was one fan who soundly based on the Capital's historical record as a rabid sport town.

Long a bat-bed of hockey and football, Ottawa will undoubtedly honour the Giants with the same enthusiasm which characterized their support of the great Senators in the days of Frank Nighbor and the die-hard backing accorded their Rough-Riders in the inter-provincial Football League each season. No team could ask for more.

Tommy Gorman has renewed his lease on Lansdowne Park for another eight years and the club is considering a plan to renovate the present grandstand (capacity 12,000), while the addition of permanent bleachers to seat 2,000 is also being discussed should the baseball experiment exceed expectations.

All in all, the advent of the Ottawa Giants into the International League should do more than any other single factor to increase Canadian interest in baseball.

The Gregt Gorman:

This week we dropped in on Tommy Gorman to ask him about Ottawa's Pint. prospects. Gorman had not the slightest reservation. "Ottawa has always been a great sport centre. During our years in the border league we have built up a strong baseball following in the Ottawa Valley. The Giants just can't miss here. They're a natural."

Asked about the park itself, Gorman described his newly erected home run fence. "For a home run

Schmitt Wins Third Straight Victory of Year

(By The Associated Press)

Jake Schmitt, promising left-hander for Baltimore, is improving that the jump from class-B ball to the triple-A International League is not too difficult.

Schmitt, who won 21 games for Terre Haute of the Three-I League in 1950, posted his third victory of the season last night with the Orioles shutting Rochester out 5-0.

Schmitt was wild, walking nine Red Wings, but he fanned seven and his mates came up with four double plays.

The Orioles jumped Johnny Lakos for three runs in the first inning. Marv Rickert supplied the punch with a two-run homer in his 28th. The Orioles picked up single runs in the second and third innings and were never headed.

Walt Dubiel pitched Springfield Cubs to 7-5 victory over the league-leading Syracuse Chiefs on his International debut. The Cubs piled up a 7-0 lead in four innings and breezed home. The Cubs counted 12 hits, while Walters got two doubles and a single.

The other clubs were idle.

Reasons Given For Owen Sound Dropping Out

Owen Sound, Ont., May 8 (CP) —A shortage of top flight and a resulting lack of financial backing were the reasons given Monday for the withdrawal of the Owen Sound Crescents from the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior series.

Doug Gillespie, coach of Crescents, who last year won the Mann Cup, said a recent disagreement between the Mercury Hockey Club and the arena commission in this city had nothing to do with the decision to drop out.

The chairman and two members of the arena commission resigned after a dispute over disposal of proceeds from the Allan Cup final here.

Even with a championship team last year, Gillespie said, Crescents went into the red. Seven members of his former team would not return and players of a similar calibre were not available to replace them.

Armand Savoie Wins in Second Round by T. K. O.

Montreal, May 8 (CP)—Armand Savoie of Montreal Monday night won a second-round technical knockout over Pierre Montane when the European lightweight champion failed to come out for the bell at the second round.

The bout was stopped seconds before the bell ending the first round after Savoie opened a gash over Montane's right eye. Referee Tommy Sullivan halted the fight but the lefty wasn't officially awarded Savoie until the Montreal Athletic Commission doctor said Montane couldn't answer the bell for the second round.

Savoie weighed in at 136 and Montane at 133½.

The Montrealer launched a torrid attack mid-way through the first round, catching Montane with a right hand to the eye. He peppered away at the injured eye for the rest of the round and Montane staggered around the ring blinded.

The Frenchman was putting up no resistance and his face was spattered with blood when Sullivan stopped Savoie's attack.

A crowd estimated at 2,500 was on hand to see the French champion make his short-lived North American debut.

The victory marked the first time that the Montrealer had scored a knockout in the first round of a fight.

OIL MAKES A COUNTRY STRONG

WHEN DID THEY OPEN UP THE WEST?

The "opening up of the west" didn't end when the railroads and the settlers and the wheat had come. Nor is it ended today. It is a continuing story of our country's growth and each generation adds its chapter.

Today it is prairie oil that holds out new opportunity, bringing with it new benefits and new security.

In four years discoveries in the west have increased Canada's proven oil reserves more than fifteen fold and the production of crude is six times what it was. These advances, and the half-billion dollars the oil industry has spent on them, have not benefited the west alone. All of Canada is stronger and more prosperous.

Our people and our factories have been made busier by the needs of the growing oil industry. There are new jobs and new businesses. Many millions of dollars once spent for foreign oil now stay at home—or are available for other purposes. And of special importance, our supply of oil is being made more certain, less dependent on sources beyond our borders.

Opening up of the west goes on, bringing closer Canada's self-sufficiency in oil, giving new strength to the nation.

About Canada's Oil

Imperial has drilled more than 1,000 wells in western Canada searching for and developing oil fields.

The oil industry is expected to spend about $4 millions a week on exploration and development in western Canada this year.

By reaching important production from Canada's new oil fields is expected to save 150 million U.S. dollars in 1951.

Look at defensive bids like this: If you have a defensive bid of any kind, follow this order of choice: Overcall in opponent's suit, jump overcall, double for takeout, simple overcall.

Thus, if you simply overcall you admit having five tricks, two high cards, one sure, and a biddable suit of five or more cards; and deny what it takes for a double or better.

If you double for takeout you admit having five tricks, four of which are high cards, two of which are sure; same as an opening bid at three; deny what it takes for a jump overcall or better.

If you jump overcall you admit having eight tricks with a suit that is biddable; deny what it takes for a double or better in opponent suit. The latter needs nine tricks and no opponent suit losers.

Therefore, if you are going to make an overcall (defensive bid) look first for the strongest; then the second strongest; then the next strongest; then the weakest (simple overcall).

South, dealer, with a diamond when you have this west hand:

♠A Q 8 6
♥A K 7 5
♣Q 9 6

Have you enough for an overcall in opponent suit? No. Not with less than nine tricks. Have you enough for a jump overcall? No. Not with less than eight tricks.

Have you enough for a double for takeout? Yes. Four spades, one king, two queens are five high cards. Your suit is diamonds, is a sixth trick. Your two heart tips and spade ace are three sures.

This tells you there is more than enough for a double and not enough for a higher bid. So, you double for takeout with confidence. You know it to be right for a simple overcall of one spade or heart.

This is how defenders tell each other the range of their hands. It announces the limit of values of each direction; top and bottom.

It is better than a shot in the dark.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 8—(AP)—The agreement sent by Warner Brothers of their movie interests marks the end of the pioneer era of the movie industry.

This is the first time that any of the great builders and developers of the movie business has retired voluntarily from the Hollywood scene.

The great part of the film dynasty has remained in the hands of the men who got in early. These men include Louis B. Mayer, a native of Saint John, N.B., Richard Zanuck and Joseph Schenck, Adolph Zukor, Sam Goldwyn, Spyros Skouras, Jack and Harry Cohn.

Now Warner Brothers have announced their intention to leave that pioneering group after a saga that led them from a bicycle shop to a multi-million dollar enterprise.

Ups and Downs

Benjamin Warner left strife-torn Poland in 1883 and brought his family to the United States. They landed at Baltimore and at first did clothing repairing and mending. The oldest of the boys, helped out by selling papers.

The family kept moving, seeking success in Virginia and in London, Ont., in 1896, young Harry set out for himself. He opened a shoe repair shop in Youngstown, Ohio, and sent for his brother Sam. He sent for his father. Harry was 15 at the time.

The Warners branched out with a bicycle shop. They also went into other ventures—from selling vinegar and soap to working on the railroad. They began to shape up, by 1903, Harry, the captain, Sam the mechanic, and Albert and Jack the salesmen.

Sam, the mechanical mind, became interested in the new Edison kinetoscope. He was able at 23 a week as assistant projectionist, then, rented some equipment and a print of "The Great Train Robbery" for $150. Soon the whole family joined him in the enterprise. They opened a theatre in New Castle, Pa., with a capacity of 99 persons.

Steady Climb

By 1912 the company had grown until it started making its own pictures. The first was a lumberjack called "Peril of the Plains". In 1916 they opened a small studio in Hollywood.

During the 1920s, Sam was thinking with the idea of sound movies. He sold his brothers on the idea and they went to work with Western Electric on a method.

Finally on Oct. 6, 1927, Al Jolson appeared on the screen on the Warner Theatre in New York with the words, "You ain't heard nothing yet, folks; listen to this". It was the first time an actor had been dialogue on the screen and it revolutionized the industry. The thing died before could see the impact of his work on the business.

The Warner enterprise continued to prosper in the following years.

CENTENARY

Mrs. Blythe Lehman, Speaks to W.M.S

Centenary—A special meeting of Centenary W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Sills on Tuesday with the Aikens' society as guests. Mrs. G. Sills led a brief devotional period. The scripture was read by Mrs. R. Edmondson.

Mrs. Blythe Lehman was the guest speaker. Her topic was, "A Day in the Life of a Missionary". She stated that a missionary's day has many interruptions. One can hardly plan a day ahead. The people of Africa seem to be as the people in Canada and elsewhere in the world. Greed is the most common fault, causing much heartache and worry for a missionary. She asked, how it would feel on the Judgment Day if one were asked, "How many souls have you saved for Jesus?"

Mrs. R. Thrasher sincerely thanked Mrs. Lehman for her many acts of kindness at Centenary while on this furlough. Mrs. Lehman said that she would pray for the society and asked its prayers, as well.

Mrs. Sills and her helpers served dainty refreshments.

Mrs. J. Sargent Sr., and Mrs. F. French have returned to their homes after spending the past five months at St. Petersburg, Fla.

The fellow pupils at Centenary school, of Marlene Douglas are sorry to learn she has rheumatic fever and will be confined to her bed for some time. They all wish her a speedy and complete recovery.

The pupils are glad to know that their teacher, Mrs. Warren Spafford will be with them again next year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Dyck have returned to their home in Laird, Sask., after spending the winter months with their daughter, Mrs. Bernard May, and family.

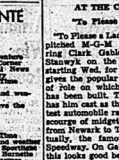
AT THE CAPITOL

"To Please a Lady"



"To Please a Lady," excitement-pitched M-G-M drama co-starring Clark Gable and Barbara Stanwyk on the Capitol screen starting Wed. for a four-day run gives the popular Gable the type of role on which his reputation has been built. The new picture has him cast as the country's hottest automobile racing driver; the source of midget and dirt tracks from Newark to Texas and, eventually, the famous Indianapolis Speedway. On Gable a script like this looks good because he would rather drive a fast car than talk—or maybe even hunt!

Gable recently took delivery on a Jaguar X-K type English sports car capable of rolling up 132.6 miles per hour. He has had it up to 112 so far on the dry lake test course. That's not as fast as he drives in the picture, but it's enough, he grins.

Gable didn't start cruising fast cars off the top. He's had one or another type of hot buggies since his lumberjack days, and in those days, most of which he pasted together himself from wrecked jalopy yards. He can and does talk the mysterious lingo of grease monkeys and boys who speak it in terms of thrust, bore, stroke, piston displacement and the rest of it have a mechanic's respect for his savvy.

Because Producer - Director Clarence Brown was determined to make "To Please a Lady" as authentic as possible (it is, for instance, the first racing picture to be shot at racing speed), he had a number of race drivers themselves in the picture. This gave Gable a chance to mingle and talk with men he holds in great esteem than most movie fans hold him. When he was photographed with such racing greats as Sammy Parsons, Cal Niday, Duane Carter, Joe Garson, Henry Banks, Peewee Pearson and Johnny Tolan, it was a toss-up as to who sought the autographed pictures, Gable or the drivers.

Although M-G-M officials could not see the wisdom of placing their favorite son in actual competition with the various tracks where "To Please a Lady" was shot, Gable was permitted to do most fast turns for the cameras behind the wheel of the Meyer-Drake-Offenhauser-powered Don Boundy "Boom Town," "Hell Divers," "Gone With the Wind" —these showed Mr. Gable at his two-fisted best. Then, it may be added "To Please a Lady" which had the same elements and opportunities that best showcase the Gable brand of charm. In it he is a rough, tough guy with a way with the ladies.

"But it's the first time I've been paid to do what I like best," he says, "to drive cars—and drive 'em fast."

"To Please a Lady" at the Capitol Theatre, will positively be the only Belleville showing.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Wednesday, May 9

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Excellent indications for matters requiring intelligent analysis, sound judgment; for teaching and study. Be nourishing and family affairs. Other interests request your care.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Encouraging influences for your personal and business interests. You could advance at your occupation or in activities for which you have especial talent or liking. Labor day.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Should be invigoration, helpful aid for plans, personal interests. Don't waste time on non-essentials things that could divert you from accomplishing as you so well can. Use rays.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—Be happy, interesting and productive. Wednesday for you bright hours. Of course, you do your best in whatever your schedule requires. You can enter new activities to benefit, too.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—The Sun's aspect now advises caution in hazardous work, strenuous activities, handling machinery, driving, etc. But day is generally favorable for all matters intelligently managed.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Can be a peak day for gain in business, work, study, planning, wise investments; all social, sound matters. Research, journalism, playwriting among favored.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Religious, artistic, scientific interests; those dealing in foods, garden produce, flowers, trees, etc., highly sponsored. Could find things moving along (Scorpio—Should find day gently inspiring, productive, gainful, particularly if you don't rush or be too demanding. Few matters of worth, rate equally with routine. Carry on!

November 22 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Although today favors most business and work interests, be warned against foolish, investments, extravagance and recklessness. You can reap benefit from intelligent effort.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)— Not all favorable for all things but if particular about details, careful in management and planning, you can profit more than usual.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius) — Unusual position cautions against quick decisions, changes that could impede progress or cause losses. If conscientious and accurate you can have satisfying results.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces) — Indifferent for shopping, other matters pertaining to travel, handling oil, chemicals, all liquids, but for familiar routine and general activities rays definitely are benefic.

TODAY BORN TODAY: Your power of memory, intuition, and desire for knowledge are deep set. You inspire confidence; the young old and the troubled instinctively turn to you for comfort, and if you are living true to your God-given fine instincts, you will not fail them. Literary attainment should not be difficult. Innately generous, you enjoy personal comfort and like others to have equal benefits. Never stop studying and trying to improve your fine talents. Greater success is always possible.

Birthdate: John Brown, American abolitionist; Sir Jas. Barrie, Brit. novelist; Richard Barthelmess, actor.

Warner Baxter, Movie's Original Cisco Kid, Dies

Beverly Hills, Calif., May 8—(AP) — Death has stopped the horrible pain which handsome Warner Baxter, the movie's original "Cisco Kid," suffered for years.

The suave, virile matinee idol died last night at his home. He was 62.

For years he had suffered so much from arthritis that he was unable to eat. That brought on slow starvation.

Three weeks ago, a brain operation was performed to lessen the pain. Bronchial pneumonia set in to hasten the end.

Baxter was the second actor ever to win the top academy award Oscar.

DOGS DISCOVERED LOCKED IN BARN STARVED, CRAZED

These dogs were two of 60 found in a barn near Pickering, Ont., in maddened condition because of lack of food and cramped quarters. Some of the dogs were locked in crates so small they could not turn around, all were suffering from malnutrition, some were blind. Among them were prize show dogs valued at $10,000. They are believed to be owned by Mrs. M. H. Page of Toronto who rented the barn. — Central Press Canadian.

Although Baxter was one of Hollywood's top stars before and after the award, he always considered the Cisco Kid his favourite role.

Baxter's first movie role was in 1916 with Ethel Clayton in "Her Own Money." Before that he had been an office boy, an insurance salesman, a dancer and a juvenile lead in stock companies.

Among his better-known pictures were "Daddy Long Legs," "42nd Street," "Broadway Bill," "The Great Gatsby," Kidnapped," and "Under The Pampas Moon." His $264,000 income in 1936 was the industry's highest.

In January this year he and his second wife, former actress Winifred Bryson, observed their 33rd wedding anniversary.

Graydon Wants More Heat Put On United States

Ottawa, May 8 (CP) —Gordon Graydon, external affairs spokesman for the Progressive Conservative party, proposed in the Commons Monday that Canada put more heat on the United States to get action on joint development of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Speaking for his party in an external affairs debate Mr. Graydon said the U.S. should be told clearly:

1. Canada wants the waterway started at once, and as a joint undertaking.

2. Failing joint action, the project will have to be undertaken by Canada alone, or alternative means found to get power to meet Ontario's requirements.

If Canada decides to go ahead with the seaway alone, Mr. Graydon suggested, it should investigate whether U.S. shipping would be entitled to the free passage through the deepened St. Lawrence, it now enjoys.

Mr. Graydon said that, on the basis of defence needs alone, the seaway is regarded as an urgent "must." The Canadian point of view should be advanced in unmistakeable terms in the hope it might influence decisions at Washington.

HAD NO SEARCH WARRANT

Kansas City, May 8 (AP) — Tony Gizzo, who recently testified before the Senate Crime Investigating Committee, was freed yesterday of book-making charges. Gizzo and two others were charged with making bets on five college basketball games. A directed verdict of innocent was returned for all three because police had no search warrant when they gathered evidence.

Commons Quickly Approves Motion On Pensions

Ottawa, May 8 (CP) — The Commons Monday quickly approved a constitutional resolution designed to open the way for a national system of contributory old-age pensions to Canadians of 70 and over regardless of means.

The resolution asks the British parliament to amend the British North America Act Canada's constitution, to give the federal government power to set up the plan. A similar resolution is expected to pass the Senate today.

As the Commons resolution was adopted, Prime Minister St. Laurent announced that provincial representatives will meet with the federal government here May 21 to consider what legislation would be appropriate for pensions to the needy of 65 to 69.

MUST GET RID OF PETS

Canadian Policy With U.S. Not Changed—Pearson

Ottawa, May 8 (CP) —Canadian policy in its relations with the United States has not changed, External Affairs Minister Pearson told the Commons Monday.

He made this statement in reply to an observation by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, that a recent speech of Mr. Pearson's had indicated a "profound change" in Canada's relationship with hthe U.S. (Mr. Pearson had said in a Toronto speech that Canadian foreign policy could not be an 'echo' of U.S. policy.)

"What I said in Toronto doesn't in any way shape or form initiate any new policy in regard to our relations with our great neighbor to the south," Mr. Pearson replied during an external affairs debate.

He said new problems had arisen, by reason of the U.S. growth to pre-eminent world leadership and because the Canada-U.S. relationship now was changed from that of neighbors to allies. The new problems must be understood and solved.

DEVOTE TIME TO EDUCATION

New York, May 8 (AP)—The first television network devoted exclusively to education is planned in New York state to consist of 10 stations and cost $3,000,000. The state board of regents last night said the network is intended to give rural areas cultural and other benefits available now only in cities.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

...was pacing the ...smoking. He turned his face, a pale blur in the darkness as Leeana approached.

"Does the fine friend forgive me?"

"He isn't my boy friend and I wouldn't blame him if he'd shoot you on sight," Leeana retorted. "Why did you set on a tangent like that, Peter?"

He shook his head. "I don't know. All at once I had to get out of that room."

"By punching a deputy sheriff?"

"You don't believe me, do you? When she shook her head, he said "I don't blame you. But I did not kill Aunt Margie, Leeana. You must believe that. Do you?"

"I don't know."

Peter smoothed the tiny Hollywoodish moustache. "But you are forming an opinion, aren't you?"

Don't let on! common sense shouted in Leeana's mind. Don't say yes!

"Am I?"

Peter nodded. "I think you are, dearie dear. And I don't think you like the way it's pointing. You favored me, didn't you?"

"Why, Peter Thorne!"

"Hitting below the belt gets results, Leeana," he said soberly. "Lawyers learn that. You're an extrovert, Leeana. Your every feeling is reflected in your face, your actions. You wouldn't have come out here if you hadn't trusted me. Would you?"

"No, I suppose not."

"Then why are you afraid of me?"

Lying would not save her now. Peter was too close, he was too cunning.

She said, "I was looking at your hands, Peter. But if Sondra was with you—"

She left the accusation hanging there, gnawing at his alibi.

"I didn't say that, Leeana. Remember?" Peter was smiling pleasantly, not at all as a killer should smile. He cited the case. "Have you ever looked at Sondra's hands, Leeana?"

Dawn was a widening band of gray in the east when, Leeana tumbled into her bed for a few hours' sleep from which she awoke as unrefreshed and tired as she had been throughout the night of terror.

The terror was still there, only seen in the grim light of morning it was worse. The tiny fear-lines that had been obliterated by the kind light of shaded lamps were visible now, and the mannerisms of fear were more pronounced. Or perhaps, Leeana thought as she seated herself across the breakfast table from Peter Thorne and his wife, her senses, her suspicions, were more acute this morning.

There was little conversation. None of it about murder, or would-be murder, but Leeana was sure she had interrupted something of the sort. She felt unwanted, as though either Jasper or Sondra, or both of them, resented her.

She looked up from the plate of bacon and eggs Mrs. Carstairs had just placed in front of her. "I'm not hungry." She made herself smile.

"Eat anyhow," Sondra suggested. "You'll need all the support you can get today—physical and moral. So will we all. Food won't hurt you any."

Ominous as her words were, they were no match for the flint that struck sparks in her cold gray eyes—eyes that, Leeana knew, could sparkle with warmth for a man. For Mart Preston.

Biting the jealous twinge in two, she said, "Is Deputy Preston around this morning?"

"Mart to you darling," Sondra said cattily, and chuckled. "Don't think I haven't caught the way the wind blows between you two!"

Leeana flushed, much to her disgust. It gave Sondra another pin to stick into her poise at the present time.

"Why not?" said Jasper unexpectedly. "Why shouldn't Cousin Leeana get herself a man. Thorne Hill must have been pretty dull with no one but us Thornes around."

"Never dull, Jasper. Not exactly pleasant, but—" Leeana stopped.

Dull red had spread upward from Jasper's open shirt collar. He lurched to his feet, swaying, unsteadily.

"Don't touch me!" he snarled as Sondra put out a remonstrating hand.

"But Jasper—"

She started forward again as Jasper drew back.

"Don't, I say!" He slapped her hand much as he might have swatted a mosquito, and Sondra pulled herself together with a sneer learn, Sondra? I don't be taken in again! I hate you. I never want to see you again after this thing is over and the police will have you, you—I'm sorry I ever gave you the name of Thorne."

"You're sorry?"

Throwback her head until the pulse in her lovely throat beat tantalizingly near his long lean fingers, Sondra laughed. Shrilly. And kept laughing, edging nearer and hysteria bred of murder and fed on continued fear, suspicion—terror.

"You're going mad," Leeana shrieked again. "When I think of marrying you and burying myself here to save your measly family pride I get sick, Jasper Thorne! I could kill you!"

She whirled away from him, buried her face in shaking hands, and stood there, sobbing.

"I didn't mean that! I just—Oh Jasper, don't hate me!"

Leeana watched hate struggle with pity and win. Jasper Thorne turned his back on his wife's pleas and walked stiffly out of the room. When he had gone Sondra resumed her seat and regarded Leeana with tearful eyes.

"Never let a man do that to you, kid," she said huskily. "Kill him if you have to but never let him make you crawl."

"You weren't crawling. You were just—upset. If Jasper had a grain of sense—"

"A Thorne with brains?" Sondra snorted. "Don't make me laugh! Even by marrying into the clan you lose what sense you have. If I hadn't lost mine, I'd have been away from here long before now."

After that they ate in silence. The bacon and eggs, cold now, were like ashes on her tongue but Leeana ate them stubbornly. Sondra was right. Food would help—but would it help enough? Certainly it couldn't keep one of them from being accused of murder—and hanging. Or was it the electric chair in Indiana?

Shuddering in spite of her determination not to be squeamish, Leeana closed her eyes. She opened them to see Mart Preston standing in the doorway. He grinned.

"Is this a private seance?"

"Seance?"

"You looked out-of-this-world-ish, sitting there with your hands out in front of you on the table and your eyes shut," Mart chided her. "I thought maybe you were telling Sondra's fortune."

Leeana shook her head. So it's Sondra' now. She said, "fortune is the future, Mart. None of us wants to look into the future right now. We're afarid of it. I know I am. Scared stiff of that inquest." Martin Preston sobered instantly. "Yeah," he said.

"Will it be—bad?"

Mart looked at Sondra as though he were trying to analyze her tone, to separate the caressing warm undertones from the fear.

"It will be bad," he said shortly. "When is murder—or its aftermath—a pretty thing? That's another thing about you people, the way you accept your own existence as a thing of beauty. You can't imagine the sordidness of living, of dying—violently."

"Ah!" interrupted Sondra, "another lecture." She turned on the infuriating slow smile that Leeana despised. "Got an extra soapbox, Martie?"

Docility—or grief— had dropped from her like a forgotten cloak the instant Mart had appeared. Watching her now, Leeana thought her more of an actress than they had given her credit for being. She was flippant, aggressive— everything she should not be in the face of murder, but she was getting away with it. Mart Preston grinned.

"I can't win, can I?"

"Obviously," replied Sondra. She rose and, with studied nonchalance, went into the kitchen. A moment later they heard the back door slam.

"There," observed deputy Preston, "goes quite a gal."

"Obviously," Leeana snapped, borrowing Sondra's sarcasm.

Oblivious to her budding anger, Mart poured himself a cup of coffee and seated himself across from her. His lean face, with a trace of reddish beard, was not handsome, but—Leeana dropped her eyes on confusion.

"Leeana," he said softly, "will you ask to be murdered— and trust me?"

The cut-and-dried questions and answers and the dingy old court room matched, somehow, the dour faces of the coroner's jury. The inquest was not as bad in itself as the unspoken accusation, the pointed suspicion bristling from the spectator's section.

It was not that the Thorne sisters had been popular with their neighbors. They had not; in fact they had made no bones whatever about their desire to be left alone with the Thorne family prestige (list Leeana's father referred to as stiff-necked pride.

No, Leeana mused, thinking about it now in the face of their combined antagonism, it was just that the sleepy little community resented anything—even murder —that interrupted its complacent way of life. These people's presence in the court room was a conglomeration of many things—hatred for the family that had rebuffed so many of them, their own unadmitted desire for a nodding acquaintance with excitement, morbid curiosity.

Canada Signs Trade Pact With 16 Nations

US Reduces Tariff Rates on 400 Items to Canada

Effects Are Not Expected To be Felt Immediately

Ottawa, May 9 — (CP)—Canada has passed another milestone on the road to free world trade with the conclusion of long-term tariff-trimming agreements with 16 countries.

The new concessions, third round of post-war tariff cuts by countries representing 85 per cent of world trade, were announced last night. Most significant were reductions by the United States on about 400 items of interest to Canada. However, the effects are not expected to be felt immediately by the man on the street.

Finance Minister Abbott, explaining the concessions to the Commons, said they may work, in these times of inflation and high prices, to help ease the burden for the Canadian consumer.

Trade Minister Howe said the agreements "will add strength to Canada's commercial position."

The agreements represent the fruits of seven months of negotiations at Torquay, England, by 34 countries, members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

In Effect June 6

The concessions go into effect June 6 for Canada, Britain, France and a number of other countries. All of the concessions are expected to be in force by Nov. 20.

Total reductions granted and obtained by Canada represent commodities on which she does about $600,000,000 or more worth of world business each year. Most of this is with the U.S. Canada's total trade each year runs to more than $6,000,000,000.

The American concessions range from aluminum to Douglas fir plywood and canned salmon. Wheat is the way most of the others may help Canada:

1. Fifty per - cent reductions on chemicals, first since the U. S. rates were increased in 1930, are expected to open new markets in the U. S. for petroleum by-products from Canada's oil fields and oil industry.

2. Concessions on aluminum, lead, zinc and a host of other metals will lead to tariff savings by Canadian manufacturers. Some of these savings may dribble down to the consumer by way of an expanded consumer market.

SHIPS, PLANES LACKING SAYS MILITARY CRITIC

Pearkes Rates Strength During Defence Debate

Ottawa, May 9—(CP)— Canada's navy hasn't a single effective team of warships and planes to tackle its primary wartime job of fighting submarines, the official opposition's military critic charged yesterday in the Commons.

That accusation was made by Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C. (PC—Nanaimo) who coupled it with statements that Russia now has 750 subs and that it was the submarine, more than any other weapon, which nearly licked the allies in two world wars.

To it, Lt.-Col Douglas Harkness (PC — Calgary East) added the charge that, in the switch to American arms, Canada has been stripped of half her army weapons without replacing them and that the army may be swapping some good arms for U.S. weapons which aren't nearly as good.

The statements were some of the many made in the first day of a free-ranging defence debate touched off by Defence Minister Claxton's introduction of two estimates of $1,600,000,000 for his department this fiscal year.

The government, Mr. Claxton and Gen. Pearkes agree that the threat over $1,000,000,000 defence program will require even more than 115,000 servicemen to fulfill the obligations Canada has undertaken.

Two Employees Of Mine Struck By Rock, Killed

Sudbury, May 9 —(CP)— Two employees of the Frood-Stobie mine of the International Nickel Company, 12 miles west of here, were killed Tuesday night when struck by a fall of loose rock in a stope 1,000 feet underground.

The two were Norman C. Clifton, 33, of Sudbury and Arley L. Dwyer, 30, of suburban Minnow Lake.

A company statement said the two men were preparing to install timber in the stope when the fall of ground occurred.

They were rescued almost immediately but both had died instantly.

Clifton, a stope boss, had been employed by the company since 1943. Dwyer, a driller, joined the company in 1946. Clifton leaves a wife and three children.

Psychiatrists Could Take Lesson From 'Porks' in Treating Disease

Cincinnati, May 9—(AP)—In treating the mental disease Schizophrenia, psychiatrists might well take a tip from the a parable about porcupines, a Kansas psychiatrist says.

Schizophrenia is the so-called "split-personality" disease.

"Love is all its myriad forms" now is the principal prescription for schizophrenia, said Dr. Milton Wexler of Topeka.

He suggested also that there first be a "blunt, direct, demanding approach" to invade the patient's private world with a great fear and a deep longing."

This forcible invasion of the patient's inner world appeared to generate a confidence on the woman's part toward the scientist.

Finally, he made an abrupt reversal of procedure, in which treatment was based largely on affection and understanding. The patient then became easier to treat.

"So they moved backwards and forwards until they found a mean distance at which they could most tolerably exist."

Wexler told of a woman patient whom he had first tried to treat with understanding and sympathy alone.

"The more kindly she was treated the more frightened and angry she became," he said.

Later he adopted a new approach in which he "threatened in a rude and determined fashion over the hostile barriers . . . and found within a great fear and a deep longing."

Marshall testified yesterday that he expects eventual victory will be won by inflicting "terrific casualties" on the Chinese communists, destroying their trained armies and breaking their morale.

The defence secretary indicated he thought this would make the Chinese ready to negotiate a satisfactory settlement.

Members of Princess Pats, Riding Atop Patton Tanks, Move Into Action Again

Since the start of the abortive Chinese spring offensive, in Korea late in April, no mention of Canadian troops, the Princess Patricias or of any individual names was permitted to pass through the tight censorship. Other United Nations units had been identified, but only now can it be disclosed that the "United Nations Mountain troops" who stopped the Chinese cold on one sector of the front were the Princess Patricias.

By BILL ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

West Central Sector, Korea, May 9. (CP)—The Patricias are in action again.

Riding atop great American Patton tanks, a patrol moved deep into enemy territory yesterday in an action that earned the commendation of Maj. Pat Tighe of Victoria, commanding the Patricias during the absence of battalion commander, Lt.-Col. J. M. Stone who was at rear headquarters.

It was the first time that the Patricias had worked so closely with tanks. From the success of yesterday's operation, it clearly will not be the last.

The foray produced four Chinese prisoners, dug out from a well-fortified, two-room bunker at the point of the bayonet. They came out without a fight, making no use of the pistolshaped grenades with which they were plentifully supplied.

"They seemed scared," said Pte. Pat Cullen of Weyburn, Sask.

The patrol was led by Capt. Wally Mills of Winnipeg who, last April 24 at the start of the Chinese offensive, played a key role in stopping the enemy drive on the Kapyong River.

That night, the enemy hordes flung themselves upon the Canadians' position without regard for loss of losses, literally within inches of the defenders. The ammunition of some forward units ran out but the line held, though the defenders were outflanked and outnumbered.

Fought First Action

That night, too, Capt. Mills fought his first action as a company commander. When his men's ammunition ran out, he ordered them into all trenches and called artillery and mortar fire directly upon his position.

For three hours, while the massed fire of three regiments of artillery and a battalion of mortars rained upon his front, Mills directed the fire. The enemy broke and gave way.

Of the 700 shells at the time, was permitted only to say that United Nations Mountain troops had held up the enemy at that point. The action, though on a short level, was important in slowing and finally stopping the Chinese advance.

Cannot Give Name

(Nor was he permitted to identify a sergeant, who flung his grenades into the bunker in the face of the enemy. The name of the sergeant has not yet come through censorship.)

Following the late-April battle Capt. Mills went into position north of the Han river on a series of rocky hills east of Seoul. There spent the intervening time laboring on formidable defences in preparation for possible renewal of the Chinese attack.

Yesterday, Mills' patrol moved out from these strong positions, probing north. After capturing the prisoners, they moved up a hill position until late in the day they reached the top of it.

Maj. Tighe summed up the operation:

"One of our most successful patrols."

SHOOTING, MOB ATTACKS BREAK OUT IN PANAMA

General Strike Called Against President

Panama, Panama, May 9 (AP) — Shooting and mob attacks broke out in this capital today during a general strike against the president which paralyzed the whole tense city.

The radio station which has been supporting President Arnulfo Arias was attacked by a mob. Eyewitnesses said equipment was destroyed.

The attack, the witnesses said, was made under fire from the radio station in which some persons were wounded.

Police went into action to round up persons carrying firearms, and at the same time truckloads of supporters of Arias began arriving in the city from outlying areas. They rode government trucks.

The general strike followed the president's switching of constitutions in a move to give himself broad powers against what he called the threat of communist subversion in this country, a vital link in the western world's defence system because of the location here of the Panama Canal.

Arias and his supporters charged put him in power appeared on the verge of an open break, although both platforms expressed hope of averting bloodshed.

The general strike was 100 per cent effective.

Before daybreak the show windows of seven business establishments were smashed. Buses which attempted to make their runs were overturned.

Marshall Says Using Japanese Troops Against Chinese Reds Might Bring Russia Into War

Washington, May 9 (AP) —Defence Secretary George Marshall told today an Japanese army serving with the United Nations troops in Korea largely because of a Chinese-Russian defence unit might start a Japan.

He implied the fear was that using Japanese against the Chinese communists might bring the Russians into the Korean war.

Marshall was in the witness chair for the third day before the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations committees. They are inquiring into the ouster of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as Far Eastern commander and the policy differences back of his removal.

Senator Harry Byrd (Dem Va.) brought up the question of the Japanese. Some lawmakers have been contending that Japanese volunteers ought to be permitted to serve with the U.N. forces. Noting that the Sino-Russian pact is directed at any resumption of Japanese aggression, Marshall testified:

"The fact that the pact directly referred to the Japanese — possible intervention in the mainland of Asia—I know controlled the action of this government in not using any Japanese whatsoever in Korea."

As Marshall resumed the witness stand, Senator William F. Knowland (Rep., Calif.) said the publican will demand a "clear-cut answer" on how the U.S. government intends to end the Korean war.

Marshall testified yesterday that he expects eventual victory will be won by inflicting "terrific casualties" on the Chinese communists, destroying their trained armies and breaking their morale.

The defence secretary indicated he thought this would make the Chinese ready to negotiate a satisfactory settlement.

MacArthur, who testified for three days last week, contended that administration plan gave promise of nothing but a "bloody stalemate."

He has urged an economic and naval blockade of China, bombing of Chinese bases and supply lines which support the communists in Korea, and use of Chinese Nationalist troops.

Against that, Marshall argued the risks were too great and Russia might come in on the Chinese side and the world be precipitated into the atomic war.

Marshall also supported President Truman's firing of MacArthur. He said MacArthur had disregarded administration not to speak out on policy and was so out of sympathy with administration plans that he had to be removed.

On the dismissal point, Sen. Alexander Wiley (Rep. Wis.) told Marshall he has received about a message dispatched March 24 by the joint chiefs of staff to General MacArthur. The message called the general's attention to a Dec. 6 directive for clearance of statements relating to the government's foreign and military policies.

The message also advised MacArthur that if communists leaders requested an armistice in the field, Wiley noted, the message was dated March 24. He said that was the same date on which MacArthur made his own plan that he stood ready at any time to confer with the enemy commander in the field to prevent further bloodshed.

Marshall previously has testified that MacArthur's action came at a time when the United Nations allies were working on an armistice proposal. He said it cut the ground from under there was then for negotiations for a settlement of the conflict.

Sinuiju Airfield Struck With Fire Bombs, Explosives

Planes Were Being Gathered For Big Red Air Strike

Tokyo, May 9. (AP)—More than 300 Allied planes today ripped into part of the Chinese communist air force in the biggest air raid of the Korean war.

They blasted and burned Sinuiju airfield in northwest Korea, where the Chinese were reported gathering their Russian-made planes for the first big red air strike.

Seventy to 100 planes had been spotted on the ground there. That added was made by 312 Fighter planes.

Eighty Russian-type Jet fighters were parked on an airfield at Antung, Manchuria, across the Yalu River from Sinuiju. Fifty rose.

But Lt.-Gen. Earle E. Partridge, U.S. Fifth Air Force commander, said only 13 crossed the Yalu. A few shots flared.

Out in Strength

However, Pilot Robert Dixon said the red Jets were out in strength.

"It's a massacre," he said, "and they are being massacred, not us."

Field dispatches said one Russian-type MIG-15 was probably shot down and another damaged. But no U.S. plane was damaged.

The big blow at Sinuiju followed by transport-borne Chinese were angered at Russian failure to supply tanks or planes for their spring offensive. The air show completely overshadowed ground operations. Red troops continued to pull back from armored Allied jabs.

South Koreans advanced the western end of the U.N. line two more miles Wednesday. They were helped by tanks that literally overran 14 red guns. Other South Koreans moving up on the east seized control of the supply highway between Hongchon and the red base at Inje.

Hidden in Revetments

Allied intelligence reports said about 70 to 100 camouflaged planes had been massed at Sinuiju revetments. The long-expected red air strike was believed underway.

Then the Allies struck. American, British and South Korean jet planes hit in two waves.

The first wave swept through heavy flak, rocketing, bombing and strafing anti-aircraft guns.

The second wave hit revetments and airfield with high-explosive, fragmentation and fire bombs.

"I don't think the reds will fly any more planes out that field," said Capt. R. L. Williams. "The napalm (jellied-gasoline fire bombs) covering the whole place."

Returning pilots reported they hit the revetments accurately. But they couldn't see whether they sheltered planes. "They were so well camouflaged," one officer said.

Had Watched Build-up

"We watched the build-up of enemy planes in this area," said Maj. Carl G. Carolson, intelligence officer, "and when it got so far we knew it was time to think a good job was done."

Britain's Reservists Called Up For Course Like Life in Modern Army

London, May 9 (CP)— Britain's so-called Z-men, reservists called up for 15 days' refresher training, are liking life in the modern army.

Many regard it as an extra holiday, a long-dragging 21 days's pay is not what it used to be.

Gone is the spit-and-polish parade-ground technique, bellowed orders and terse commands. The men are greeted by a warm handshake and friendly smiles and at some camps are invited to a cup of tea, served by the regular-force N. C. O's.

Newcomers are assigned to comfortable quarters, with spring beds, mattresses, sheets, pillowslips and wool blankets. Everything has been spruced up.

There is no guard duty, no fire picket. Potato-bashing and other fatigues will be forgotten — and there'll be no short haircuts. After the welcoming ceremony as the reservists arrive at camp, the trainees were taken around the encampment on a sight-seeing tour.

When the boys got back to their billet, they received another surprise when the sergeant-major brought tea.

"We are glad to have you and intend to do our best to make all of you happy," he said. Then he remarked: "You could do with a bit of fire in this room, lads. I'll see it gets lit straight away."

Hap Emms Says He Will Retire From Coaching

Winnipeg, May 9—(CP)— Hap Emms, coach of Barrie Flyers six years and on the Winnipeg side last night in the Memorial Cup play and on the winning side by will retire.

"Yes, I think I'll make this the last, there'll be no more coaching for me," he told a reporter.

Emms came up with three Ontario Hockey Association titles, a few all - star selections and the Memorial Cup.

He said he would return to his Barrie business, with his brother and that there was no other coaching job he would consider.

"It would be Barrie or nothing."

Cavalrymen Mistake Donkeys for Mules

General is Embarrassed

Somewhere in Korea, May 9 — (AP) — Stories of captured Chinese mules kept coming back to headquarters. When the latest batch of about 20 was reported, the general who owned to the line to see for himself.

He came back blushing.

"What has our enemy come to?" he lamented.

"I saw those critters and there wasn't a mule in the lot. They were just little donkeys — our men didn't know the difference."

The general is Maj.-Gen. Charles D. Palmer.

His outfit: The 1st Cavalry Division, which has—save for its horses and insignia — now is a mechanized infantry force.

William Barnard reported the U.N. planes or aircraft were lost. The damaged red jet was hit by long-range fire.

The power of the U.N. strike compared to the opposition it met underscored reports of Chinese dissatisfaction over inadequate Russian aid.

Another dispatch from AP correspondent Jim Becker said Americans in Korea were growing bogged down the recent red offensive after it had broken through U.N. lines. Becker quoted a high-ranking allied officer as saying:

"We have learned from many sources that the Chinese did not follow up their break-through because they had planned on using planes and tanks and the Russians did not deliver them.

"We hear that many top Chinese generals are disgusted by the Russian failure to deliver."

Since the drive fizzled, the reds have made tedious attempts to re-equip their front-line forces.

Hasty Pees Have Highest Enrolment From Reserve Of Any Unit in Ontario

Recruiting signs inside and outside Bridge St. armories have the lettering, "Join the Hasty Pees—The Proudest Regiment in Canada."

The adjective "proudest" held a more significant meaning this morning, for with the first of the day's quota of recruits, 18 all told leaving for Kingston, it brought the regiments' applicants for enlistment up to 85, the highest of any reserve unit in Ontario to date.

But concern was mingled with pride on the face of Lieut. Angus Duffy, regimental training officer, this morning.

"While we are proud to have this high number of men sent to Kingston for potential enlistment," he said, "the greater number of the 85 will be reduced in the ranks of the reserve battalion of the regiment."

"In fact," Mr. Duffy added, "we have scarcely a non-commissioned officer into the battalion. Other ranks have been depleted too."

Additional Job for Officers

This means an additional job for officers in the training unit of the reserve battalion must be maintained and vacancies caused by active service enlistments filled.

Lieut. Duffy pointed out that young men who feel they cannot "go active" will be doing a splendid job by joining the reserve battalion, no matter where they reside. "These men," he said, "will be trained and become the instructors of the future."

Enlistment applications for enlistment in the active army have been coming steadily, and these are issuing a special appeal to these young civilians. The pay is good, and so is the life.

Turning a bit philosophical, Mr. Duffy said that since the politicians and permanent force authorities found they could not get enlistments, the onus was placed on the shoulders of the reserve army units.

Started by One Side

"War," he said, "have always been started by one side being prepared, and the other not ready World War I and II proved that with the Kaiser's hordes ready to strike in 1914 and Hitler's Nazi war machine set at the gates in full preparedness in 1939."

"Our strongest defence against war breaking out is to maintain a strong force in Europe, and that is what this Canadian force will be part of."

Military vehicles placed in line were apparent on the armories' driveway this morning placarded with the Kaiser's hordes ready to Drive These Vehicles."

Recruiting offices at all companies in the district are now in operation, and men "signing up" will be cleared through the Belleville headquarters of the regiment for transfer to Kingston and ultimately Barriefield where the company will undergo elementary training.

Builders' Exchange Turns Down Bricklayers' Request for Higher Rate

An hourly rate of $1.90 per hour for bricklayers in the Belleville area as requested by the Belleville and Trenton District Building and Construction Trades' Council was turned down at the regular meeting of the Belleville and District Builders' Exchange, Tuesday evening.

Members of the Exchange countered with a recommendation that the union accept the $1.80 per hour offered by the exchange. The present rate for bricklayers in the area is $1.65 per hour.

The offer by the building exchange to the trade council was $1.80 per hour, with $1.90 on overtime pay. The present agreement with the bricklayers expired May 1.

Mr. W. A. Campbell, sales development manager for the Bakelite Co. (Canada) Ltd., was guest speaker for the evening and dealt with the use of plastics in the construction industry.

He explained that little change in building methods had developed over the centuries. Recently, however, new chemical processes had produced a number of new and improved building materials. These included tasteless plastics which burned durable surfaces and were finished in attractive colors. Insulated wall panels, wall boards and table and counter tops.

Newer phenolic resins had improved the binding properties of the plastics, and produced a more considered waterproof as well as stronger than natural wooden products. Newer process were also developed to improve the durability of plywood boards by armoring the surface with a phenol-impregnated paper to increase the strength and wear resistance.

Wooden veneers had been developed with increased density and tensile strength, these being bonded in layers under heat and pressure to great wear. A new development in the use of plastics included handles for doors. Other new uses were being found for plastics but shortage of materials would keep these products off the market for some tim.

Mr. Wm. Norton of the Norton Construction Co., of Picton, was granted membership in the Exchange. President Harry Rollins presided over the meeting, the minutes being thanked by Fred Eagle.

The guest speaker, Very Rev. Father Cruso, S.J., Peter and Regopolis College, Kingston, was introduced by Rev. J. Buckley, Splitrock, a silver medal recipient. He referred to the necessity of close co-operation between the parent, teacher and child. Mr. H. Brown thanked the speaker.

Mrs. E. Logan presented the retiring president, Mrs. F. Culling, with a silver rose bowl. The presentation address was read by Mrs. F. Cunningham.

Arabic and French Newspapers 'Greek' to Newsroom Staff

Any Algerians or Arabs in the district can have a field day if they wish to come into the offices of the Ontario Intelligencer. Two newspapers, one printed in French and published in Algiers, and the other printed in Arabic have arrived from Lavonia Stockelbach, at present writing a series of articles for this newspaper.

Newsroom workers in this office made little headway with the French articles, and none at all with the Arabic. The latter resembles chicken tracks more than anything else. Through the four pages of the publication, only three small advertisements are apparent. Name of the newspaper appears to be "Zers." At any rate it's sitting here, free, for anyone who can read it.

The other publication is "La Depeche Quotidienne," and high school French days bring so far to the fore that they are no editorial worker was too sure of what that meant. Even at that, however, it makes somewhat better reading than the Arabic sheet, and has a few pictures and advertisements to brighten it up.

Recognizable in the French publication are O.N.U. for United Nations, "nord-coreen" for North Koreans, entries for Sunday's races at the local track "Hippisme," and a few ads for milk, a dog show, a comic strip entitled "La Fantome," and the stock markets.

Beyond that, it's a dead end. Any takers?

Name Special Force for Korean Brigade Goes into Discard

Ottawa, May 9. (CP)—As a term, the 'army's special force is dead.

Now it is simply the 25th Brigade group plus the replacement group for that formation.

It was recruited last August and September, with special terms of enlistment, to back Canada's obligations to the United Nations or Atlantic Pact. The bulk of its men now are in Korea.

Efforts have been made in recent months to get the men to transfer to the regular army. No report has been made public on the success of this campaign, but headquarters say the situation has reached the stage where it has been decided to eliminate any difference and to treat the 25th Brigade as simply another branch of the army.

So the term special force—originally designed to indicate that it was a force specially recruited to serve Canada abroad—is being dropped.

In the Commons yesterday, Defence Minister Claxton reported that it recruited 10,587 men. A few days ago it was reported officially that another 1,300 men were posted to it from the regular army.

Mr. Claxton said there now are 6,100 men with the 25th Brigade in Korea plus 1,100 in a reinforcement pool. Of these, 5,770 were men who joined the special force. In addition there were replacements in Canada. Headquarters later reported these total about 2,750, including more than 1,000 now moving to Wainwright, Alta., from Fort Lewis, Wash. plus another 1,650 who will go there from other bases in Canada.

These figures indicate the force which used to be the special force took in a total of 11,687 men, specials and regulars, or roughly 2,000 more than it now has.

Search Continues For Missing Sub

London, May 9—(Reuters)—An inch-by-inch search of the seabed still is being made on a 16-mile front along the route of the ill-fated submarine Affray, which disappeared April 16 with 75 men aboard, Viscount Hall, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Lords today.

He said indications are that the Affray suffered some damage which resulted in sudden, major flooding, preventing any attempt at escape. There has been no trace of her since she left Portsmouth on a training cruise.

MORE PRISONERS

Vancouver — (CP) — Bishop A. H. Sovereign, founder of the John Howard Society in Vancouver, told a meeting here that "every time a man goes to jail society admits a failure." He noted that more people are going to jail now than ever before with the prison population 4,740 in 1939.

ONTARIO'S CRIME RECORD

Ontario set a doubtful record last year. Nearly one in every hundred was charged and committed for trial for breaking criminal, driving and liquor laws. The total was 43,622 persons appearing in court. Of that number 37,607 were sentenced to reformatories, industrial farms or to the penitentiary at Kingston, or were fined or given suspended sentence.

No honor will come to the province from a year that sent 8,005 to those industrial farms. No honor will come from the sending of 941 lawbreakers to Kingston penitentiary. The year will stand as a black mark on the pages of Ontario's history until it is either wiped out by a cleaner sheet, or a dirtier one. Which will it be?

The appreciable gain in the world in general, the fast life of the times, the decreasing influence of the home over the lives of children might indicate that 1950's high will yet be wiped out by a blacker record. True, the juvenile delinquency problem is limited as after World War II is not as prevalent today. Every citizen of the province will remember the trouble that Toronto in particular had immediately following the cessation of hostilities as gangs of young people among themselves, or in opposition of this or that confession. The fights and brawls eventually spread from the metropolitan area to summer resorts.

Part of the solution to that problem was found in the establishment of young men's clubs to give the delinquents something to do. Those clubs have had much of their success. The authorities laid the problem on the doorsteps of adults, and said that if there were any delinquents on the streets, in the police stations and in corrective institutions, their positions were directly due to the lack of proper supervision in the home. The situation appears to have changed, on the surface, anyway. No longer do the gangs operate in full force and in defiance of legal and moral standards. They may operate but they seem to have lost much of their power.

Then one sees the record for 1950, and wonders if many of the boys who engaged in the shenanigans of 1945, 1946 and 1947 in particular are numbered among those charged last year. If they are, it would seem that our society has not given them a proper chance. It is a recognised fact that environment has a great effect on young people: if their mode of living is not good, there is more incentive for young people to turn to a life of vandalism and crime.

Deputy Minister of Reform Institutions C. F. Neelands has said, "It must be a matter of deep concern to all thoughtful citizens that the recent very considerable increases have been so disturbing." It must indeed, and it will raise the question of whether or not the delinquents of the immediate post-war period had much to do with it.

FEDERAL PENSIONS AT 70

Establishment of a program to provide pensions for all Canadians without a means test early in 1952 will probably meet with approval on all sides. What must be remembered, however, is that the Canadian taxpayer will pay for the pensions. The program does not give anything away free, and when taxpayers realize that fact, they may look at the situation in a more sober light.

The program will provide the payment of $40 each month to everyone over 70 years, regardless of financial status. The transfer of the pensions from provincial to federal field will be accomplished by constitutional amendment. This means that the federal government will assume responsibility for collecting the money needed to run the scheme. No definite information is available on how the government is expected to finance the scheme, but it is known that a parliamentary committee on old-age security suggested last year that the pensions might be paid for by a two per cent levy on incomes.

At present, pensions are paid by the provinces to those 70 and over, who can prove their need. The provincial government pays 25 per cent of the cost, and the federal government takes up the slack. Consideration for people between 65 and 69 will be included in the new program, with costs insofar as that branch is concerned to be split evenly between provincial and federal treasuries.

The new $350,000,000 program is expected to embrace nearly 300,000 Canadians, as against the present figure of approximately 190,000. Thus, money paid out directly in pensions will be almost quadrupled. There will be considerable administration, but whether or not that will effect economies will only be seen when the system goes into full swing.

All this hinges on the question of amending the British North American Act, since the program involved both fields of government. If it only affected either one, the amendment to the constitution could be done in Canada, without taking the issue to the United Kingdom.

If the government does adopt the method of financing suggested by the committee in 1950, it will mean that two cents out of every dollar the taxpayer earns will be earmarked to provide pensions for himself and his fellow Canadians. It stands to reason that that is a fair way everyone pays for something that everyone benefits from.

EYE ON KOREA

Some weeks ago one of my best friends, one of Canada's ablest journalists, left to "look in" on the Korean war. In addition to his war correspondents' equipment he carried a list of questions from this department.

Pierre Berton, articles editor of Maclean's Magazine, has been two months in Korea and has undertaken to answer some of those questions. They represent the kind of informed opinion that you rarely encounter in the day-to-day coverage of this strangest and most tragic of wars.

In today's column and again tomorrow, Berton, whose first dispatch appears in the May 15 issue of Maclean's, will give a closeup, considered look at the issues that affect us all.

Q. Do the UN troops know what they're fighting for?

A. Most of the officers I talked to had a fairly clear idea of what enlisted men I talked to did. The general feeling among the Canadians, British and Americans I saw in Korea was that this is futile campaign which is solving very little, fought on impossible ground by arms and objects unfit for the ordinary soldier, appear funny. Certainly the issues involved do not appear to the black-and-white contrast that was apparent in the conflict between ourselves and the Nazis five years ago.

The fact that Korea is, tactically, an impossible place to fight in, coupled with the all-too-obvious evidence that South Korean never were a democracy in the western sense, contributes to this attitude. Nor does the American military system rest on a ready-made structure of political patronage. The National Assembly, with its country's evils elected by people, is a long way from the Washington Hotel. He appoints everybody — mayors of cities, provincial governors, ambassadors. Some soldiers ask: How can we liberate people who've never had much liberty?

Q. What is the attitude of the UN troops to the Korean people?

A. It swings from the attitude of a Santa Claus to that of a slave driver. A lot of Koreans "gook" and they are liberal in the distribution of chocolate bars and candy to children. But it is painful to report that many soldiers treat the Korean people as so many cattle to be beaten if necessary, prodded with bayonets, run over by jeeps and generally mistreated. Generally speaking, we seem to have made very little effort to understand this proud but miserable race and our general approach to them is that of false tolerance and impatience and occasionally outright hatred.

At Pusan I watched an American private soldier lord it over a group of Korean civilians at an aircraft. One of them, an old man, stumbled under the heavy weight of a crate he was handling. The GI grabbed him by the lapels and shook him like a rag doll. "You son of a b..." he shouted. "You do that again and I'll punch you in the nose!"

Our trucks and jeeps run pell-mell down the narrow, crowded streets that have only ox-carts. In Pusan, when they kill or injure 150 people in a month, the Koreans won't move they get even at us and sometimes threaten us with guns.

Washington Loses No Time Rejecting Soviet Proposals

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Washington has wasted no time in rejecting Russia's proposal that the drafting of a Japanese peace treaty—already well on its way to completion—be turned over to the Pacific powers, including communist China.

The manoeuvre is, of course, an undisguised effort to seize control of the treaty machinery with the idea of establishing Bolshevist domination over Nippon.

Success would make Moscow virtual master of the far east.

The Soviet proposal is that the treaty-drafting be handed over to the United States, British, Russian and communist China.

Obviously, with the communists two votes out of four. It would mean disruption of the progress already made toward a treaty expected to be ready for signing shortly.

American Peace

The Russians charge that the U.S. draft treaty represents an attempt to impose an American peace on Japan by the exclusion of Russia, China and other countries.

Truman's special representative, has made it clear that he has tried to keep the door open. Some time ago it was announced that he had consulted with Dr. Malik, the Russian delegate to the United Nations. Malik denied it.

Moscow insists that the treaty should be worked out by the Big Four—U.S., U.K., France and China—and all other Asiatic countries in the war against Japan should be consulted.

The U.S. has a right to a big say in the matter. It was the U.S. which fought her way across the Pacific to victory. Russia didn't enter the Japanese war until six days before it ended.

There is no indication that Washington is going to impose an American peace on Japan, as the Soviet charges. The other interested countries. None outside the red bloc has protested against the U.S. professing and developing her interests.

YOUR TEASPOONFUL OF IRON

The hemoglobin—colouring matter of the red blood cells—is dependent upon iron for its formation. Iron for carrying oxygen to tissues and carbon dioxide back to the lungs.

From five to eight milligrams (a milligram is 1/65th of a grain) of iron per day will maintain a sufficient reserve of iron in the adult body to prevent deficiency effects. Approximately seventy-five milligrams of iron are lost from the blood daily, as the result of normal breakdown of red blood cells. The iron thus lost from the blood is re-developed and added to the reserve supply. Only 90% of all the iron taken into the body is re-claimed in periods of time in the various tissues acting as reservoirs.

The body of a normal, newborn infant contains about 350 milligrams of iron. Most of this iron is deposited during the latter part of pregnancy to meet the premature infant is thus lacking in iron reserve.

In health, normal human of average weight has about 4000 milligrams (4 grams) of iron in his body. Of this amount 65% is found in the hemoglobin where it functions as the blood's oxygen carrier. The iron is stored—mainly in the liver, spleen and bone marrow—and to a lesser degree in the muscles and other tissues.

Iron is found in the body very slowly. On an ordinary diet the adult excretes about 15 milligrams of iron per day in the stool. Only 2/10 of a milligram per day is excreted in the urine. Iron is lost from the skin and epithelia takes in about 15 milligrams of iron per day.

It has recently been discovered that an appreciable quantity of iron is lost through the perspiration. This does not imply an increase in the need of the skin. It merely indicates that some iron happens to be in solution in the perspiration which comes out on the skin with the perspiration.

Despite the long retention of iron in the body, iron-deficiency anemia is very common. It this can be blamed on poor nutrition, blood loss—perhaps the most common cause—deficiency of iron in the diet or poor assimilation. Women require from two to four times the amount of iron men do because of periodic blood loss at the time of the menopause. A pregnant woman requires 3½ times more iron than the non-pregnant woman. Young children require more iron than adults.

The chief dietary sources of iron are meats, vegetables, potatoes, egg yolks and fruits. However, the iron content of these foods varies with the soil from which they are derived. Milk, a valuable food, is highly deficient in iron content. The iron content of milk is not appreciably increased by "feeding" iron to the mother. Breast milk contains no more iron than cow's milk.

A person who has an adequate reserve store of iron gains nothing from taking iron. Iron is effective in treatment only when an iron deficiency exists. The notion that taking any of the advertised iron preparations is "good for the health" is one for the birds—unless it can be shown that an actual iron deficiency exists. This can be determined by a relatively simple test—based upon the color of the blood—as compared to certain standards. The very term "iron" is not a reliable guide as to the question of iron deficiency. Many persons with iron deficiency feel fine for a while—and then others who feel many have no such deficiency.

A person suspected by who of anemic do not know what ails them. Many more who think they are anemic have hemoglobin and red corpuscle counts within the normal limits. But the usual reason why self treatment for "anemia" is unavailing is that the cause of the trouble is overlooked, as you will find explained in detail in the booklet Blood and Anemia. If you want a copy, send stamped self-addressed envelope. Fig any more in the broad common sense to have a hemoglobin estimate (measurement of amount of coloring matter) and a red cell count of the blood before undertaking any treatment for anemia, whether dietetic, vitamin or medicinal.

There is no truth in this little lead absorbed into the system it will cause the future generation to have nervous and mental troubles. Just how dangerous is white lead in lipstick? Lipstick.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Some people are terribly hurt by having to queue up and wait in line. Compared to most countries of the world, now, Canada has mighty little queueing up in it. Even so, there is a type of citizen who either likes it or little better-dressed than the average who is willing to pay extra to beat the game whoever lineups are required, at theatres, restaurants, weight of baggage.

They try to catch somebody's eye, like the waiter in a restaurant, anybody's in authority who can recognize someone of importance. They look bored, indifferent and then, when the line starts to move, they move with it, keeping their turn anywhere. They are the sort of people who get on in the world, who are taking their turn anywhere. They are the sort of people who get on in the world, who are taking their turn anywhere. Children Not Poisoned Says Medical Officer

Newmarket, Ont., May 9 (CP) —Two small children in the Lake Simcoe district believed earlier to be suffering from the effects of poisoned dog biscuits had nothing more than a common bilious attack, a medical examiner said last night.

Dr. J. P. Wilson, summoned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Cox, said there was no indication that the two children had come in contact with poisoned dog biscuits.

Thirty-eight dogs and an unknown number of cats died since Saturday in the area.

Fishermen Using Ancient Methods

Port Rowan, Ont. — (CP) — Fishing methods of Biblical times are repeated on the shores of Lake Erie's Long Point Bay, where by fishermen who cast their seines into the shallow water and draw them into shore.

One end of their long nets is anchored close to shore, and the other pulled through a long semicircle by men wading or in boats.

The three-seasons catch carp, dogfish, pikerel, perch, suckers, catfish, rock bass and sheepshead. Although only the pickerel and perch are generally considered good eating, the carp are shipped alive as a delicacy for special markets in both Canada and United States cities.

The carp are kept in sunken scows, and transferred in tanks. They keep in good condition even on trips as far as Louisville, Kentucky, but the largest markets are Montreal, New York, Toronto and Buffalo.

The fishermen begin their season when the ice leaves the bay, and end only when it freezes over.

Witness Moves, Dog Trial Laid Over Again

Trenton (Special)—Scrap dealer Jack Zigman pleaded not guilty to a charge of owning vicious dogs when he appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Police Court here yesterday.

Crown Attorney Bryson Donnan asked the Magistrate for a two week remand for time to locate an essential witness who had moved since the date the charge was laid. The wanted witness, explained the Crown, had departed without leaving a forwarding address.

Mr. Zigman's counsel, H. R. Park, raised no objection to the Crown's request for the remand.

Mr. Donnan asked the magistrate to instruct Mr. Zigman to keep his dogs under control during the period before trial. The magistrate assured the Crown that the accused was looking after his dogs properly.

The case will come before the court again on May 22.

The charge was laid by police following an attack by a pair of dogs on Mrs. Cecile Gilmour who was knocked off her bicycle and suffered bites on her left leg while riding along Front Street two weeks ago.

Rests on Restitution

Magistrate Wills told Arthur Sharpe that the weight of his sentence rested on restitution of $1,001.79, the amount he was convicted of obtaining by fraud through the sale of a car not free of all encumbrance.

The magistrate decided that Sharpe was guilty although counsel pleaded that his client was suffering under severe mental strain and did not appreciate the consequence of his act. Sharpe's mother testified that her son had been committed to the Ontario Hospital in Kingston with a nervous breakdown in 1942 and was released on probation; the same year. She recalled that her son was highly nervous and his mind was roaming before he sold his car last November.

At an earlier court session, Dr. D. McMullen of Frankford testified that he treated Sharpe since 1942 for a nervous disorder.

In passing sentence Magistrate Wills said there was no doubt in his mind that the accused was capable of forming the intent. He gave Sharpe seven days to make an endeavor to return the money.

John Beckwith, on default of paying $53.00 as the penalty for a second offence under the Liquor Act, was committed to Belleville Jail for one month.

Rex DeLong paid $15, for being intoxicated in a public place.

Fraser Park Improved

Most outstanding improvement to the Trenton waterfront in many years, the Senator Fraser memorial park at the foot of Albert Street has taken on a beautified new cloak of green. The entrance to the beauty spot is the archway cenotaph erected after the first war as a monument to fallen heroes.

A gravel walkway divides the park and enters into a huge circular flower bed where the spring varieties are in full flower. Trenton's improved docking facilities form the backdrop to the park.

Street Being Repaired

Workmen were busy yesterday laying strips of pavement over the old roadway which makes up Dundas Street in the centre of the town. The new strips started from the curb on both sides and extended several feet out toward the middle of the thoroughfare. The H. J. McFarland Construction Company are doing the job between Front and Albert Streets.

LADY GETS WASHING

Kirkland Lake, May 9 (CP) — Lady, a three-year-old Labrador retriever, is recovering today from a watery underground journey. The dog disappeared into a storm sewer and spent 24 hours crawling to safety in a catch basin. Police rescued her to the young mistresses, Judy and Georgina Rudolat, and a washing scrubbing brush.

Made With Glass His Boats Bounce

Georgetown, Ont. — (CP) — Leonard J. Bell, who manufactures a line of small boats in this town near Toronto, has a novel way of testing the durability of his product.

Occasionally he tossed a 15-ft. boat out of a second - storey window. But instead of going 'crunch' the boat bounces. They're plastic boats made of fibreglass bonded with synthetic resins.

The boats are strong, light in weight and low in cost. Bell has government orders for several of the craft to be used in the Arctic, because they don't even get britles at 80 degrees below zero.

An important feature of these boats is that they're resistant to animals. Porcupines, for instance, delight in gnawing chunks out of ordi - nary bonded plywood but they find no nourishment in resin - bonded fibreglass.

Another shorebore pest that doesn't like these boats is the teredo, a worm-like mollusk that sets out to recover - his losses became a Florida law yesterday.

Siamese Beauties Are Being Sold To French Soldiers

Laichau, Indo - China, May 9 — (Reuters) — That (Siamese) beauties are being sold to French soldiers for 500 piastres (about $30) on two-year "contracts" in the Shangri-La valleys of Indo-China.

Among the 250,000 Thais who inhabit the rich Tonkin rice valleys the girls may be sold on "life contracts" by their families in exchange for a water buffalo, a dozen pigs, a few cows, or perhaps a bolt of cloth.

But the two-year agreement suits the soldier whose time of service has about expired by the time the "marriage" ends.

Urges Greater Care Of Children's Eyes

London — (CP) — Short-sightedness in children is often the responsibility of the mother and the school teacher.

So says Otto Rasmussen after a two-year investigation into short-sightedness among school children in Kent.

Writing in a trade journal, Rasmussen blames "overworked teachers who appear to have no time to clean chalk dust off the blackboard, and even less time, with large classes, to write large, legible words and numbers."

Rasmussen says that thousands of normal - sighted children have to strain their eyes in badly - lit classrooms to see blackboards. They are then rushed to clinics unnecessarily "because they could not read illegible characters in semi - darkness."

Of 16,000 children sent to clinics, specialists were unnecessary for 7,453 of the remainder, only 2,231 were short-sighted. The trouble can often be righted by advising a teacher to seat a child closer to the board, Rasmussen said.

Mothers encourage short-sightedness by attaching dolls and rattles to prams and cot, close to babies' eyes. A child then becomes accustomed to seeing things at close quarters.

Good Fortune Favors Fashion Models in Career Life

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

New York. (AP) — Fashion modelling appears a springboard for almost any kind of career these days. Among today's most popular models are apt to be many of tomorrow's feminine standouts in the arts and business, judging by the record of their predecessors.

A large number, of course, moved on to the movies and the stage, including Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Tierney, Paulette Goddard, Jennifer Jones, Joan Caulfield, Kay Francis, Lucille Ball, Meg Mundy and Nancy Kelly.

Amy More however leaped from modelling to matrimony and motherhood. Jean Murray married Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt. Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller was model Barbara (Bo-Bo) Sears. Edith Backus is the wife of Jack Chrysler of the automobile family.

Frances Wescott married Edgar Bergen, and Oona O'Neill, daughter of the author, Eugene O'Neill, was a fashion model before she married Charlie Chaplin.

Others have managed to combine marriage and a career. Jinx Falkenburg is one of the most versatile and busiest of the modelling alumni. After a fling on the stage and screen Jinx retired to become the Wife of newspaper and magazine executive Tex McCrary. Shortly after the couple blossomed out as a radio husband-and-wife team, picked up a daily television show and launched a joint daily newspaper column. They have two boys.

Clio Benefits

Another radio husband-and-wife team is former high-fashion model Betsy Drake and film actor Cary Grant. Ex-model Robin Chandler is married to actor Jeffrey Lynn, mother of two children and hostess on TV show of her own.

Many more would be listed. The question is, what does modelling give a girl that helps in a big career?

"It gives an awful lot," answers Betty Downey, now fashion editor for a slick paper magazine after a successful career as a model.

"You gain confidence," she explains. "You understand about styles and fashion, and of course you learn diplomacy, how to get along with all kinds of people and how to handle yourself in many situations."

Babs Lee, now an advertising executive and author, said "I learned many helpful things from modelling. I learned how to get along with people. I made contacts which have been very useful to me. I learned how to handle clothes and myself in them."

Jinx Falkenburg summed up the help it gives those who want a career in the entertainment world. "You learn the important lessons and what are awkward ones. You get over being self-conscious and nervous; you can feel at ease before many eyes."

AIKENS' W.M.S.

Aikens—The May meeting of Aikens' W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. George Denike. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Cyril McMullen, Mrs. Kenneth Jones, presided. Nineteen members, three baby band members and one visitor were present.

The scripture lesson in three parts, was taken from the gospel of John, read by Mrs. W. Jeffery, Mrs. F. Moon and Mrs. W. Denike.

The business portion of the meeting followed. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Carmen Griffis with Mrs. F. Moon as convenor. Mrs. C. Keary, treasurer, reported $48 had been sent to the presbyterial for the first quarter. The articles of clothing for the layette, which is to be sent overseas were handed in.

Mrs. E. Hubble had charge of the remaining part of the meeting, whose theme was: "How we can work for peace through helping to feed the hungry," taking the form of a "skit" and given by Mrs. E. Hubble, Mrs. D. McCombe, Mrs. W. Denike, and Mrs. W. Jones.

It is known that hungry people are unhappy people, and consequently unhappy people are likely to resort to violence if no help is in sight. They are potential lawbreakers and may become warmakers. It is hard for the best fed people in the world to believe that two-thirds of the world's population are always hungry. One cannot visualize half a million hungry people, but if one little child was seen to be slowly starving, one would move heaven and earth to get food. Famine is one of the greatest enemies of peace.

A story which brings out the keenness of this tells of some little children who were called for their midday meal in a certain centre in Germany. A wonderful surprise, apple pie, was being served. It was the children's favorite dessert.

True, it was made with dried apples with hardly any sugar, but the children did not mind. Apple pie was apple pie. One little boy ate his very slowly. He would take a little bite and then close his eyes. The worker watched him wondering if he did not like apple pie. At last she said, "Hans, don't you like your pie?"

The boy looked up and a happy smile spread over his face. "Oh, yes, I love it." "Then why do you eat it so slowly?" "I'm eating it slowly so as to be able to feel what it is like to be eating and not to be hungry any more."

Poor little Hans had never had enough to eat in his life, for he had been born in Europe and the war had robbed him of everything a child needs most.

ROSLIN W. A.

The May meeting of the Roslin Women's Auxiliary was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. N. Alexander with 14 ladies present.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Slingerland, past president, presided.

As this was Ascension Day the opening hymn was, O Christ Thou Hast Ascended".

Mrs. E. Geen gave the Bible reading Mark 16-14, the gospel for the day.

Mrs. Gillespie read the Diocesan Board letter. The treasurer reported half of the pledge money has been paid in. It was decided to have the quilting and pot luck dinner on May 24th. Several more articles for the bale were handed in. Members were asked to have the vest in by the 24th when it will be displayed. The annual thank offering was handed in at this meeting.

The leader, Mrs. C. Sills, was in charge of the program and gave a paper on "The Value of Friendship". Mrs. Geen gave two readings, "Little Baptists", and "Two Prayers".

Mrs. Slingerland closed the meeting.

The leader conducted a can contest. The hostess served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

BAYSIDE W.M.S.

White's District—Mrs. A. Calnan and Mrs. A. Fox were co-hostesses to the members of the Bayside Woman's Missionary Society on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance.

The president, Mrs. C. Ruth presided over an interesting meeting, the theme being "How We Can Work For Peace-through helping to feed the hungry." Mrs. Floyd Dodley read the scripture John 15.

"Jungle of the Amazon" a story of a Canadian orphanage in that district, was read by Mrs. H. Butler and Mrs. Frank Leach.

A dedication service followed to discover the causes of international bitterness and hatred, out of which war is bred and to remove such threats to intelligent co-operation among the nations. To work to relieve the misery of those whom war has victimized, and to assist devastated nations toward recovery spiritually and materially.

It was decided to have a joint meeting of the Mission Bands and Baby Bands in July at White's Church and the Bayside Mission Band will be host to the Northern Mission Band in August with appropriate programs. At the latter meeting, Miss Elsie Hurst, Reg'N., will be guest speaker.

Rev. Duncan McTavish Gives Interesting Talk

Rev. Duncan McTavish captured the hearts of the members of the Good Companions' Club who heard him speak in Tabernacle United Church parlors last Friday evening.

Mr. McTavish spoke on the place of the Young Married Couples or Young Adult Group in the church. He stated this group is young and as yet unproven movement in the church. He said he had known some groups which were an active, vital part of the church life, and he had known other groups which were of no value whatsoever to the church or to themselves.

Mr. McTavish's talk was freely interspersed with humor and yet at the same time awakened anew in the minds of those present, a consciousness of the responsibility facing adults in these days of tension. "In Caesar's time", said Mr. McTavish, "it cost 75 cents to kill a man. In this last war it cost $30,000 to kill one Japanese." Adults! Beware!

Not only did Mr. McTavish speak of war, but he also stressed the responsibility of the adult in cultural and educational fields and in social and home life. He mentioned several specific projects which a Young Adult group could undertake.

To sum up, Mr. McTavish believes that a group must be vital and active to be of value, and that it must not only be a social gathering but must be a place where adults learn to face their responsibilities.

Rev. F. R. Harback, who introduced Rev. McTavish, first led in a short devotional. Following Mr. McTavish's address, vice president Bud McCreaky expressed the pleasure of the Club at having the opportunity to hear such a splendid thought-inducing talk.

Business was then conducted. A short quiz, testing the mental capacity, and bountiful refreshments testing the gastronomical capacity of these present, brought the evening to a close.

Women of The Moose

On Monday evening, a number of the Women of the Moose, with friends, gathered together at the home of co-worker Nellie Scrymgeour and enjoyed a social evening.

Euchre was played with the prize winners being, Nellie Scrymgeour, Leella Downes and Clara Seames; consolation Nellie Burke and Margaret Craig, lone hands.

The box of candy donated by Michalene Calbury was drawn by Patsy Scrymgeour and won by Sarah Plane.

At the close of the evening, delightful refreshments were served by the hostess and L. Downes. ?

The girls donating prizes were: L. Downes, L. Counel, N. Kalser, and E. Little.

A vote of thanks was tendered to all co-workers who made this such a lovely evening.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECH

scarcity of ushers . . they are in the service!

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

(1) Why have a formal church wedding. Two hundred guests, who have a number of honor and four bridesmaids. It necessary to have the same number of ushers as bridesmaids? My fiance has asked two of his friends to be ushers, but he's having difficulty about getting the other two ushers. All of his friends are either in the service, or are being married at about the same time. Is there any way out of all that we can cut down on the number of ushers?

(2) Does the matron of honor have to have the best man as her partner, or is there some arrangement by which we could have the matron of honor walk alone, and the eldest maid of honor and have her walk with the best man?

Carol G.

(1) It is not necessary to have the same number of ushers as bridesmaids . . the point is that the number of ushers is determined by the number of guests to be seated. And for the average of 200 guests, you should have at least four ushers; that is, at least one for every 50 guests. Haven't you a brother or two, or a cousin or two, or one or two young men who are friends of your family, whom your fiance could invite to be ushers? There usually are one or two "bride's ushers", the bride's brothers or cousins.

(2) According to the very best traditions, the best man is the escort of your recessional: first, bride and groom; next, matron of honor and maid (best man to go to vestry, after the ceremony, to give fee to clergyman); next the four bridesmaids, in pairs; last, the four ushers, in pairs. Or, if you prefer, the matron of honor may walk alone, (best man not taking part in recessional); then the four bridesmaids and the four ushers may be "paired off".

Bride's mother wants corsages worn only by "the ushers"

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I have been invited to the wedding of my cousin in a few weeks. I had been planning to wear a corsage, but was informed by the bride's mother that only the bride's mother and the groom's mother should wear flowers. I had never heard of such a rule, and I was certainly surprised. The bride's aunt had also planned to wear a corsage. Will you please tell us what is correct about this? Also . . . and this is most important to us . . please tell us if it would be wrong for us to wear corsages if the bride's mother continues to be against it.

M. H.

There is no rule against any man guest's wearing a corsage to a wedding if she wishes to. But of course a woman guest would keep her corsage on the side of simplicity, in contrast to "the mothers" corsages which are often on the elaborate side. However, I have heard several times before that a bride's mother has inferred not to have any woman guest wear a corsage to the wedding . . only she, the hostess, and the groom's mother, guest of honor or be this flower-decked.

Indeed it is most important for you and any other guest not to wear a corsage if it is known that the bride's mother is "agin'" this. Social co-operation on such an important occasion is of immeasurably greater importance than any corsage!

Correct: "M.D." after his name in signature . . never "Dr."

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

If a doctor thinks that, in certain circumstances, it is necessary to sign his title, Dr. or Doctor, before his name in his signature to a letter, is this correct?

B. H.

No. There should not be a title before a name in the signature to a letter . . never "Dr. John Graham", as never "Mr. John Brown". When a doctor feels that it is necessary to indicate in his signature that he is a doctor, he may write "M.D." after his name.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Nothing like this "just has to happen"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a friend who went out with her girl friend's husband and she thinks there was no harm in it, that it was just a thing that had to happen. She is a married woman with children. I told her it was not a nice thing to do to a friend she has known all her life.

Would you please give me your opinion. Was it a nice thing to do, or was it a thing that just had to happen?—T. F.

Dear T.F.:

I agree with you that to go out with a friend's husband, unless the circumstances are very special and the wife knows about it, is not at all the thing to do. I don't see any more at all in your friend saying that it was "just a thing that had to happen". Nothing of the sort ever has to happen. It only happens when two people decide they'd like to have a little adventure and don't care whether they are doing a strictly honorable thing or not.

So there is my opinion for which you asked.

Her parents ..ating to old-world ideas

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I come from overseas where the girls . . under 17 don't go around with boys. I'm 14 1-3 and my parents won't let me go on dates because they say it is not decent. All my friends are allowed to go. Do you think it's not decent to go on a date once in a while and what do you suggest I should do?—E. W.

Dear E.W.:

It's perfectly true that the girls in this country are probably allowed more freedom to go around with boys than in many other countries. Here, of course, most mothers consider it all right for a girl over 15 to have a reasonable number of dates with boys, although it does sometimes happen that girls of 14 or even older are refused this permission by their parents.

Don't you think perhaps some of the American friends your parents have made could explain to them that no one would think it improper for you to go out on a date now and then? I suggest that you talk to some one of the older women friends your mother has made and ask her frankly if she won't make an opportunity sometime to explain things to your mother.

Wide and Handsome

By ALICE ALDEN

THE big hat addict can have herself a fine time this season, which is not always the case. Some years the only large hats extant were the simple Milans dressed up with a plain crown band or a bit of piping. But this year we have, in almost every collection, the big hat beautiful, bright with striking trimming. Sally Victor does a widespread bonnet of white-wine ballbustai and trees its generous dimensions with an arc of brilliant red camellas and lobster red velvet piping.

MARIO ...in his distinctive feature about FOOD... What's Cooking?

The vogue is vanilla.

Last year the United States imported over 2 million pounds of vanilla beans, double the imports of previous years.

We haven't reached the vanilla craze of the Nicaraguans who put it in their orange juice. But vanilla is the most easily blended of all flavoring extracts.

Vanilla flavor and lemon rind are blended for flavoring in today's sponge cake recipe.

Sponge cake batter frequently fails if not properly handled. To make the batter more stable, beat the eggs and sugar slightly while they are beaten. Self-rising cake flour is a time saver in this sponge type strawberry shortcake. Use fresh berries now arriving in abundance from southern states.

Strawberry Sponge Shortcake

Granulated sugar
4 eggs
1 cup sifted self-rising cake flour
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 pint fresh strawberries
1-2 cup heavy cream

Preheat oven at 350 degrees.

Beat whole eggs in the top part of a double boiler with a rotary egg beater. Gradually add 1 cup of sugar, beating well. Put the pan over simmering water in bottom part of double boiler.

Continue to beat until mixture is warm, not hot. Remove from heat, and turn into a cold bowl or into mixing machine bowl.

Beat 5 to 8 minutes more or until batter has turned thick and yellow. Measure the sifted flour. Gradually fold in the flour, using a down, over, up method of mixing spoon. Fold in the lemon rind, vanilla and melted butter.

Turn into an 8x8x2 inch square pan greased and lined with waxed paper. Bake 40 to 50 minutes or until cake feels firm when lightly touched.

Invert pan and let cake cool in pan 1 hour, before removing from pan.

Remove stems from strawberries. Wash. Chop in a mixing bowl. Add sugar to taste.

Beat cream until thick. Sweeten with 1 tablespoon sugar.

Cut cake into squares. Split each square in half crosswise to make layers. Spoon strawberries between and over layers. Top with whipped cream.

BEAUTY

Saving your face

Is your complexion on its own? Are you trusting to luck that it will retain the youthful bloom, the fine texture, the velvet-smooth surface? Not a chance! Time is against you. Middle-aged women who are free of wrinkles are reaping their reward for giving their faces the most fastidious care. The skin has many enemies—atmospheric dust, strong sunlight, harsh winds, digestive upsets. It stands to reason that it requires a certain amount of attention.

Neglected, the facial coating deteriorates. An epidermal surface that is protected by cloth- ing gets along very well. The texture does not become coarse, wrinkles do not appear. It is unfortunate that changes and defects must come where all can see them. Just one of nature's mistakes, a woman is likely to believe.

Because cosmetics are used freely, women stay young-looking longer than did their foremothers who did not enjoy the privilege of playing with creams and lotions. Creams serve a useful purpose, forming the skin from drying out, scales from forming. There is no doubt that they are a force against the arrival of premature wrinkles. Oils have been used for centuries for the purpose of keeping the skin soft, smooth and healthy.

Faces must be kept scrupulously clean, even if nothing else is done for them. The right kind of soap must be used, one that lathers freely, and it is a good idea to frictish it in with the fingertips. The use of a cream beforehand, for the removal of make-up, will make the job more thorough. As a rule, an emollient should be used afterward, too, especially if the skin is inclined to be dry. Put your cleaning cream at the top of your cleansing list; it is more important than rouge or lipstick. They are just the frosting on the beauty cake.

Often one preparation will do double duty for you, and that's easy on the good-looks budget. If a cream acts as a protective agent and a foundation before powdering, so much the better. A good powder not only removes the shine, but also protects against dust and wind. Powder should be fluffed on lightly, never ground in with the pad to clog the pores. If you get on a bit too much, are fearful lest you look as if your countenance were calcimined, remove it with a powder brush.

Rouge should be applied by addition rather than subtraction. If you put on too much it is difficult to create an even film. There is no sense in putting too heavy a coating on the lips. If you try to blot it away, your lips may be spotty.

Danes Give Trade Leading Position in Natural Plan

Copenhagen. (Reuters)— The Danish government is giving top priority to maintenance of the people's standard of living. This means trade and commerce is rated ahead even of defence plans.

The main threat to Denmark's standards of living comes not from defence expenditures, which at $42,000,000 are the lowest of any Atlantic Pact Nation, but from the big drop in her foreign trade since the outbreak of the war in Korea.

Foreign Minister Ole Bjorn Kraft said recently "the defence effort should not be brought into variance with the maintenance of a standard of living for our population which is in conformity with our democratic ideals. If we were to forget that, we would lose the battle on the home front."

Rationing came to an end last year, except for sugar and coffee, so there is but little black market activity. As is the case in most countries of Europe, anyone with enough money can buy almost anything.

Import controls have been strengthened to try to keep the unfavorable trade balance as low as possible.

The government has its best brains at work seeking ways to combat inflation. Latest proposals, however, amount to little more than the usual method of increasing taxes.

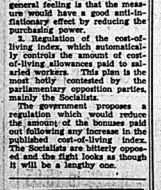
Compulsory Savings

But two of the proposals are new in this country:

1. The introduction of compulsory savings from lower income groups. This is probably the least unpopular action, since under it the government would return all the compulsory savings after a number of years. Sceptics ask how much these savings would be worth in buying power when they are returned, but the general feeling is that the measure would have a good anti-inflationary effect by reducing the purchasing power.

2. Regulation of the cost-of-living index, which automatically controls the amount of cost-of-living allowances paid to salaried workers. This plan is the most hotly contested by the parliamentary opposition parties, mainly the Socialists.

The government proposes a regulation which would reduce the amount of the bonuses paid out following any increase in the published cost-of-living index. The Socialists are bitterly opposed and the fight is as though it will be a lengthy one.



Recalls N.S. Town, Back After 30 Years

Stellarton, N.S., (CP)—Three men who used to play Belgian rose to harass the Nazis in the last war are in this coal-mining town looking for a job.

Lucien Lefevre and Jules Delaux are here because Arthur Tollbeck had a hankering to see his "second home" again. They are former members of the Belgian Resistance movement.

Tollbeck, who lived here from 1905 to 1920, figures Stellarton looks good. He is a machinist and the smoke stacks and industrial hum remind him of home.

They are sure they will get jobs. Eventually they hope to save enough to bring their wives and families to Canada.

The Belgians arrived at New York recently on a small immigrant ship. They had originally planned to find employment in Montreal or in Quebec's gold fields.

But Tollbeck figured Stellarton, as he remembered it, was a fine place to go. So Lefevre the barber and Delaux the welder tagged along.

During the war, they played a large part in deluding and sabotaging German troop movements. After liberation by Allied forces, Tollbeck served as an interpreter with the U.S. army and later the Canadians.

"I think I will be happy here," says Tollbeck. "I speak good enough English to get around and my eight-year-old boy would pick it up easily.

"But my wife, I don't know. She doesn't speak English at all," he added.

BILL TO UNMASK KLAN

Tallahassee, Ala., May 9. (AP)—Governor Fuller Warren signed into Florida law yesterday a bill to unmask the Ku Klux Klan, which he once said was made up of "covered cowards, hooded hoodlums and sheeted jerks". The new law prohibits the wearing of masks by any person over 16 years old in public places. It doesn't mention the Klan by name

'Ankle Etiquette' Needs Brushing Up

Atlantic City, N.J. (CP)—Been neglecting your "ankle etiquette", girls?

One man thinks you have, and that you are in danger of losing your 'inborn traditional coquetry' in moving and posturing your ankles and legs.

Roy E. Tilles, hosiery company executive attending a meeting of the industry here, said "a generation of sloppy shoes and bobby socks" is to blame for the loss of a sense of ankle etiquette.

Wonderful as nylon stockings are, they can't do everything," said Mr. Tilles.

Here's his advice to the ladies: Re-learn how to walk alluringly, how to cross your knees gracefully, sit attractively, and make seam-straightening as much a reflex as using a lipstick.

ervices Forge Friendship Link With Doukhobors

B.C. (CP)—Strange, wistful Russian music has been drifting through the valleys in the west Kootenays of interior British Columbia.

It is part of a link of friendship and understanding various groups are trying to forge between the Doukhobors and other Canadians.

Some months ago, the young disciples of the spiritual communist of Christ (YSCC) (orthodox Doukhobors) and the ministerial associations and service organizations decided to try to put Christians in closer touch in this mountain-ringed land.

The result was a series of services in cities and towns throughout the west Kootenays. The services have drew more than 1,500 persons to the Civic Theatre where scores had to stand.

As a lesson in Christianity, the services were simple and moving. But the service at nearby Brilliant, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and attended by one of the 10,000 orthodox Doukhobors, told something of the history of the sect that has introduced two choirs, explaining the meaning of the hymns they were going to sing.

Without accompaniment or conductor, the choirs sang their native Russian hymns and folk songs. Later, they sang English hymns. The women wore their traditional white costumes.

Early history of the Doukhobors, meaning "spirit wrestlers," They refused to bow to the authority of any man but only to "the spirit, dwelling within each man."

Prosecution followed. Finally, in 1899, the sect emigrated to Canada.

No Disrespect Meant

Mr. Verigin said the Doukhobors had been misunderstood when they had refused to swear allegiance to King. This had not been intended as a mark of disrespect. The Doukhobors admired the King and thought it good for. But they could swear allegiance only to God.

Friendship increased and some Doukhobors had turned to violence, the orthodox Doukhobors had suffered as much as, or more, than anyone because of their violence. They had also suffered the accusations of their fellow Canadians, who attributed the riots and burnings to all Doukhobors instead of to the few radicals, the Sons of Freedom.

John Stoochnoff of Brilliant said: "We have come here to show you we want to be friends."

At the Nelson service, Emmett Gulley of the American Friends' Service Committee (Quakers) said that when he had arrived in the west Kootenays several months before, he had found a "wall of misunderstanding" between the Doukhobors and other Canadians.

The two meetings had done a great deal to break down this wall.

"We think of problems to be solved on the other side of the world, when actually the right at home that friendship is most needed," he said.

Very Rev. T. L. Leadbetter, dean of Kootenay, said Doukhobors and other Canadians had been drawn apart by negative attitudes. The pride and arrogance of Canadians of Anglo-Saxon origin had resulted in peoples of other racial extraction looking at the west and the attitude "we will stay out of the community."

Golden Age' Golden for Just a Few

(By Harrison Smith in the Saturday Review of Literature)

It is temptation to regard the time in which we are now living as unique in history. Few can see any escape from the intensified state of fearful suspense which can only be ended by war or by agreements in permanence that can have little faith.

Nevertheless a philosopher or an historian might maintain the thesis that man has always lived in the midst of anxiety and doubt, even in years that now seem to us serene and even romantic. Our major writers contribute to this sense of hopelessness and sometimes what appears to be the vivid contrast between our present condition and let me say, life in the middle of the 19th century.

Yet no one can read two giants of that period, Zola and Balzac, without a profound sense of the grimness and misery endured by a greater part of the population of France.

England had its Dickens, whose books now seem to us so quaint and melodramatic. We now read into the dismal and smoky streets of old London cheerful qualities they did not possess; actually they were crowded with poor and half-starved human beings, whose lives were more miserable than those of any large body of people living in the western world today.

The English countryside was not much better, for the picturesque thatched cottages in villages and on landlords' estates were poisonously insanitary, damp at all seasons, and deathtraps for the old men and women who crouched in foul weather over small and dirty fires.

The rows of bleak and grim dwellings for workers and miners in the manufacturing and mining towns still stand as symbols of a day when men and children worked themselves to exhaustion for an appalling number of hours a day. It was almost impossible to escape from the class into which you were born or to receive any but the most elementary education. The country was ruled by a rigid and often merciless mercantile and land owning aristocracy, and the people had little influence over parliament.

In their efforts to escape from present ills imaginative people often contemplate other eras and old cities, which they think they would trade without hesitation for the decadence of this century. The medieval 12th and 13th centuries, the years of the crusaders, the Italian renascence, and Elizabethan England are favorites—or for the more scholarly, imperial Rome or Athens in its golden years.

It is a pleasant way of daydreaming, but the dreamer must at the same time inevitably escape from the ranks of the common people to discover himself a man of wealth and position—a nobleman or a famous warrior. Who would care to be a slave in Athens or Rome, a peasant in Elizabethan England, a serf, a laborer, or a common soldier in 15th century Italy?

* * *

There were other difficulties in living in earlier days which the romantic must evade in his dream. There were plagues which swept away whole populations; there were filth and the common diseases for which there was no cure.

Chaucer spoke of himself as an old man at 35, toothless and troubled with smallpox. Children died like flies. The early hospitals were pestholes in which women in child-birth were virtually murdered.

Human families were wrecked and the soul of man was not at rest. Superstition and sadism were rampant and healthy women, old and young, accused of witchcraft, were tortured, hanged or burned at the stake.

It is true that the catastrophe we face today is as black a menace as any that man has known. But it is not as inevitable as were early death and lifelong misery. We measure our condition by the heights to which we have risen.

Airliners Outgrow Montreal Hangars

Montreal — (CP) — Airliners have outgrown hangars at Montreal airport, and that posed a problem.

When the big 70-ton stratocruisers began to arrive from trans-Atlantic hops they couldn't be rolled into hangars built to accommodate 40-ton North Stars and Constellations.

The stratocruisers have a wing spread of 141 feet and the tail is 38 feet high. The hangars are 136 feet wide and 29 feet high.

Chief engineer Fred Hold of British Overseas Airways Corporation figured out a solution.

A rail line was built out into the field. Trolleys to carry the planes were placed on the rails and a mammoth tractor was used as motive power to tow the planes in and out of the hangars. The trick is the planes moved in and out sidewise.

City Schoolboys Taught Woodlore

Huntsville, Ont. (CP)—A course in woodlore may become part of Ontario's public school curriculum as a result of an experiment in which 44 city-bred boys participated near here.

The boys, between 12 and 16 years old, came from Forest Hill Junior High School, Toronto, and Pickering College at Newmarket, Ont., to learn something about wild life.

From their headquarters at a nearby lodge they spent week journeying into the woodlots, visiting lumber mills and hacking their way through the bush.

The students who came this year paid their own way, but it is the hope of C. R. Blackstock, director of Health and Physical education at Pickering College, that such courses eventually may become part of the curricula of public schools, subsidized by the province.

At Helmsley, an instructor with the Ontario Lands and Forests Department, attended the "classes" and showed films on conservation, wild life, thinning and planting of trees.

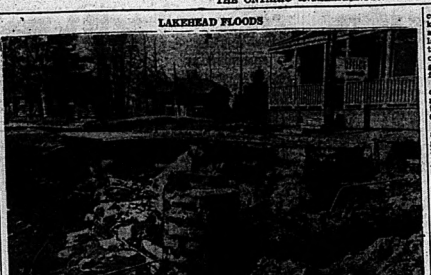
Tobacco, tea and rice are the chief products of the Nyasaland Protectorate in Africa.

LAKEHEAD FLOODS



Flood waters in and around Port Arthur, Ont., caused considerable damage to park property, railway lines and waterfront industries. Boulevard Lake reservoir was forced through sanding revetments and gouged this 30-foot canyon in Current River Park. Sewer and water pipes were bared and ripped from their location. — (CP Photo.)

SHIPS, PLANES

Gen. Pearkes maintained that Canada's obs aircraft carrier, the Magnificent 18,000-ton kingpin of the navy, is out of date and will have to be remodelled or replaced "in a very short time," said the Fleet Air Arm is "totally inadequate for the protection of our two oceans" and wondered when some of the navy's vaunted anti-sub escort vessels are going to start coming off the production line.

There was no immediate reply from Mr. Claxton, but he will likely comment either today or Thursday.

Mr. Claxton, launching the debate, did in effect supply a reply to another charge by Gen. Pearkes. He said that if recruiting rates hold up at anything like their present level the target of 118,000 servicemen and 25,000 civilians for defence jobs by March 31, 1954, will be reached 18 months ahead of schedule or in half the time originally planned.

Claims Estimate Too Little

Gen. Pearkes had other ideas. He said the 118,000 estimate is too little, won't provide enough men to match Canada's commitments and "may throw out of gear the whole concept of our plan" to build up the forces.

Mr. Claxton interjected that the target now is "more than" 115,000.

Gen. Pearkes went on from there to charge that Canada still is adhering to haphazard methods of raising manpower. Individuals were allowed to make up their own minds where they could best serve. There had been little if any consideration of the manpower needs in the various services.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, coincided that members don't know what's going on in defence and called for a committee since last year. The U. S. is a big cheese producer.

Besides these concessions, Canada obtained others with 18 countries, including France, Italy, Sweden, Denmark, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Indonesia and India as well as the six new countries entering into the general agreement. These are Western Korea, West Germany, the Philippines, Turkey, Austria and Peru.

Statements by Claxton

In a typical wide-ranging defence debate, Mr. Claxton made these statements:

1. More than 1,300 men sought enlistment in the new 27th Brigade for Europe on the first day of recruiting Monday and the target should be reached without difficulty. It wants 8,500 to 8,600 for the brigade itself plus replacements.

2. Manpower in the regular forces jumped to 70,861 in April with a net increase that month of 1,924—down some 300 from the average in the past three months.

3. It is intended, during three to four years, to tap all reserve army units for additional reinforcements to the 27th Brigade so they, in turn, can build up groups of seasoned officers and men. This would hasten mobilization if war came.

4. Enlistments for Korea by French-speaking Canadians were in the same ratio as English-speaking Canadians hold to the entire population.

Frankford — The Frankford Bowling League climaxed the 1950-51 season with their annual dance and banquet in the Frankford Community Hall. Over 100 bowlers and guests sat down to a bountiful turkey banquet, ably prepared and served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Frankford Branch of the Legion.

President Jack Farley, spoke briefly, welcoming the guests, and outlining a few plans for next year. He then introduced Adrian Babcock, chairman for the evening, who took over for the balance of that portion of the evening.

Adrian kept the program rolling at a fast pace, with his bit of wit and humor. First presentation was made to the Lucky Strikes winners of the League playoffs. Ross Huffman, captain of the Lucky Strikes accepted the trophies on behalf of the team, thanking the league for the presentation.

High Average Trophy

The Men's high average trophy was presented to Bob Morgan, by Ed Loucks. Bob thanked the League, and assured all that he hoped he would have as good a time next year as he had had this past year.

The Hornets, who won the league pennant, were the next recipients. Captain Herb Rankin thanked everyone for the presentation. Mary Morrow, winner of the Ladies High Average Trophy was then presented with her award.

Low Single

The annual highlight was the presentation of the prize for low single in the league. Hazel Rowe, recipient of this award proved herself a grand sport all around in accepting this presentation, as she was throughout the entire season.

The captains of the various teams were presented with gifts from their teams for their efforts of leadership throughout the year.

The bowlers and guests applauded heartily as the ladies of the Auxiliary were called into the room, and thanked for their fine meal.

Dancing carried on until 1.00 a.m. in the auditorium, bringing to a close a successful season for the Frankford Bowling League.

Iran Denies British Charge Recent Nationalization Of Oil Communist Act

Tehran, May 9 (CP)—Iran disclosed today and denied—a British charge that the recent nationalization of British-controlled Iranian oil resources was a communist act.

The denial was made in a diplomatic note to Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison of Briton, in which Prime Minister F. Mohammad Mossadegh said that the take-over of the Giant Anglo-Iranian Oil Company will stop discontent in Iran and lead to better relations with Britain.

Meanwhile, the Senate gave Mossadegh a vote of confidence, with 48 of the 51 members present backing the new national nationalization, despite British protests.

It was the first disclosure of details of the Iranian-British diplomatic exchanges and revealed for the first time that Morrison viewed the nationalization of Iranian oil as a communist act.

The charge angered Iranian officials who said Britain's Labor government has nationalized many of its home industries.

Mossadegh's note said nationalization of industry is "the sovereign right of every state."

"Though agreements or concessions may have been made or granted to individuals or private companies . . (they) cannot impede the exercise of national sovereign rights, nor is any international authority competent to investigate this matter," said Mossadegh.

His letter said the "activities and behavior" of British-controlled company had led to discontent among the people.

But it professed Iran's desire to strengthen her bonds of friendship. It said that the law permits the government "to examine the claims of the former oil company."

The government was also "prepared to sell oil to former customers at reasonable international rates," the letter added.

1,200 Persons Killed in Quake In El Salvador

San Salvador, El Salvador, May 9 (AP) —The death toll in El Salvador's weekend earthquake today rose to 1,200 persons, as new reports filtered into the capital from isolated regions in the Central South American Republic.

The injured were reckoned at 4,000 or more.

With many villages in the quake area still cut off, casualty figures were incomplete. The government earlier estimated that 1,000 persons died in the eastern part of the country.

President Oscar Osorio last night proclaimed martial law in the devastated region. Aid was being rushed to the injured and homeless.

The army continued to evacuate survivors from the region—a 60-square-mile zone in the rich coffee plantation belt close to the Pacific coast.

Newspapers reported a move to make a vast funeral pyre of the quake area, to prevent the spread of disease. Local authorities hotly opposed this, hoping to rescue their records and complete their accounts of the dead.

Renewed but slight local earth shocks were reported again yesterday but there was no immediate reports of new casualties or damage.

Govt. Probe Ordered After Claims Swindle Ring Milked Elderly Persons of $250,000

Victoria, B. C., May 9—(CP)—A government investigation was authorized yesterday following claims that a swindle ring had milked elderly persons of $250,000 during the last 10 years.

Two men, one a disbarred Victoria lawyer, both now in jail, were named as the ringleaders by a man who said he was one of 47 persons who had been victimized.

W.A. Scott, who said he delibertately ran up bills totalling $5,500 in an attempt to be brought into court so he could testify as to swindlers' operations here, told a police commission meeting:

"I knew I had unearthed one of the major legal scandals and series of swindles that perhaps ever hit British Columbia."

The meeting was held Monday night. Yesterday, Police Chief John Black was authorized by the commissioners to seek the assistance of Attorney - General Gordon Wismer in a full-scale investigation.

Mr. Scott named as ringleaders Clyde Gillies, now serving seven years in the penitentiary for theft and fraud, and Percival J. Walls, former barrister, serving a three-year term.

Four other alleged swindle victims were present at the hearing. Also present were John Stanton, Vancouver lawyer, representing the quarter, and Conrad Watling of the National Investigation Agency.

Mr. Stanton said Gillies' swindles went back to 1938, involved at least $250,000 and 47 persons in Victoria and Vancouver "that we know of."

Mr. Scott, who lost $9,000, said in a brief to the police commission that he realized in May, 1948, that Gillies had swindled him, and that he resolved to crush the "swindle ring."

Details on how the alleged ring carried out the swindles were not revealed.

NO CHANCE FOR TITO

Syracuse, N. Y., May 9 — (AP) — There is no chance of a Tito defying the communist China, Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, said last night. He told a dinner meeting that collaboration between Beijing and Moscow is so close that "Titoism in China is out of the question."

New Trade Deal With Cuba Will Give Canada Sugar

Ottawa, May 9—(CP)—Trade Minister Howe Tuesday night announced a new trade deal with Cuba under which Canada agrees to purchase 75,000 tons of raw sugar yearly for a three-year period.

The announcement formed part of a statement made by Mr. Howe in the commons, commenting on the tariff concessions obtained at Torquay, Eng.

The sugar agreement was made outside the terms of the Torquay agreements, but it will have the effect of trimming some of the tariff preference traditionally allowed to commonwealth sugar suppliers.

Trade officials said the preference was great enough to allow commonwealth suppliers to cut their sugar prices by about 85 cents or $1 a hundredweight. Instead, they tended to lower their price by about 15 cents a pound, sufficient to undersell the non-commonwealth supplier.

Another Actress In Hospital After Taking Pills

Beverly Hills, Calif., May 8—(AP)—An actress who was with Mary Astor's husband Monday night, when Miss Astor took sleeping pills, was herself in a hospital today. Police said she had taken an overdose of a sleeping potion.

The actress was identified as Joan Blair Casparis, 23. Police said Miss Casparis was taken to hospital in Los Angeles after broker Thomas Wheelock, Miss Astor's husband, had tried to rouse her by telephone.

Detective Joe Gebhardt said Wheelock told him Miss Casparis was a friend of 20 years' standing. He quoted Wheelock: "This situation has nothing to do with Miss Astor's action."

Police said Miss Casparis' action was attempted suicide.

Several hours after she was found in her hotel room, hospital attendants said she was still unconscious.

Wheelock told police that he, Miss Casparis and another man had made a round of bars Monday night.

In Culver City Hospital, the 45-year-old Miss Astor was recovering from her third overdose of sleeping pills in 11 months.

BUY LAST STEAM ENGINE

London, Ont., May 9. (CP)—Eastern Canada will be the last area in the country to be dieselized by the Canadian Pacific Railway, C. B. Crump, vice-president in charge of operations, said in an interview Tuesday.

Mr. Crump was one of seven top C.P.R. executives who arrived in London from Montreal and Toronto to join a London Goodwill Cavalcade to Ottawa today.

"We bought our last steam engine three years ago," Mr. Crump said, "and the aim of the C.P.R. is for complete dieselization in Canada."

Ontario Borrows Money From States

Toronto, May 9. (CP)—Ontario is borrowing in the United States, departing from a policy of more than 20 years. The action follows anti-inflation measures in Canada which has made borrowing here more difficult and raised its cost.

The borrowing will be through an issue of $50,000,000 3 1-4 per cent debentures, dated May 15, 1951 and payable May 15, 1971, in United States funds, which is being offered in New York. The offer to the public is at 98 and interest, U.S. funds. Announcement of the issue was made Tuesday by Premier Frost.

Proceeds will be advanced to the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario for its power-development program.

Telegraph Wire Cut by Company

Hamilton, May 9 — (CP) — A telegraph wire between Toronto and the Sporting News, a racing scratch sheet here, was cut off by the Canadian National Telegraph Company, Arthur G. Taylor testified in court Tuesday.

Taylor and William H. Shaver, operators of the scratch sheet, are being tried on charges of keeping a betting house, and supplying betting information.

He testified that the wire which brought the race results from Toronto was cut off by C. N. T. about the same time a police search was made of Sporting News offices March 30.

Taylor said the action was taken because C. N. T. felt the Sporting News wasn't a legitimate newspaper.

Film Capital Honors Actors Of Another Era

Hollywood, May 9 (AP) — The film capital dipped into the past tonight with a movie premiere to salute the stars of the silent era.

Hollywood, noted for its bad memory, did an about-face by honoring the faded film personalities "for the pleasure you have brought to millions the world over." The event had all the trappings of a glamour premiere.

Some of today's stars were there, too.

But the guests causing the most commotion were the magic personalities of another era, Francis X. Bushman, heartbeat of the silent era and a radio actor now, looked dashing as he escorted starlet Piper Laurie, Betty Blythe also on radio now, looked younger than her years.

Elmo Lincoln, present-day bit player, was as strapping as when he played the screen's first Tarzan. Clara Faye, long-time Cecil B. DeMille star and still a player in films, ran down the aisle for her citation.

Comics Hank Mann and Chesterfield Heine Conklin, with their former boss, Mack Sennett, also were honored guests.

Each was presented with a citation from the Chamber of Commerce for their help "in making Hollywood the film capital of the world." They were handed out by Mack Sennett.

The old-timers, wearing their best finery, were profusely photographed and interviewed. Heine Conklin cracked:

"If only we could get a reception like this from the county office."

Woman Swept Over High Falls, Escapes Injury

Port Arthur, May 9—(CP)—A slight cut on the head was the only apparent injury suffered by a 22-year-old woman who was swept over the 125-foot-high Kakabeka Falls.

Dorothy McGregor, who swam safely ashore after being whipped through the swirling currents of the Kam River Monday night, was taken to police custody and charged with attempted suicide.

Police said her escape from death was miraculous. If the river had been at normal level she would have landed on rocks at the bottom of the falls. High water due to the spring run-off rushed her fall.

Miss McGregor was at the falls, 18 miles west of Port Arthur, with friends.

She was carried over the falls and through the rapids and was swept another 400 yards downstream to the vicinity of a power-house where she swam ashore.

Her clothes literally were torn from her body by the ordeal in the water.

It was learned that Miss McGregor subsequently told police she suffered so acutely from the grease she could bear the pain no longer.

Leading Chefs Reveal Secret of Top Dishes

By CENTHIA [illegible] BAY

New York, [illegible] The "Gourmet Year" in honor of the 2,000th birthday of Paris, spiritual home of the epicure, which has just ended here provided top-secret recipes of world-famous chefs.

Chefs of famous eating places each presided for a week at a time in the kitchens of the expensive Chambord restaurant, and each disclosed his favorite recipe. Grape Salmon was the choice of the only Canadian chef, Ernesto Schmid of the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec. Here's his recipe for "La Darse de Saumon de Gaspe, Frontenac":

Chop fine a pound of mushrooms and half-pound of white onions and a sprig of parsley, and saute them in butter until golden brown. Blend into them a half-pint of hollandaise sauce; whipping gently until well mixed. Chill the sauce slowly with a wooden spoon. Then fold in the white of six eggs, beaten until stiff.

Grease a shallow baking dish with butter and sprinkle the bottom and sides with powdered sugar up to a quarter-inch from the top of the bowl. Pour the mixture into the dish, and put it in a hot oven for 15 to 18 minutes. When the souffle starts to rise, remove it from the oven and scrape around with a thin knife on the inside of the dish. Complete the cooking until it has risen. Serve immediately.

Pre-heat the oven and place in a baking dish, covering each piece with a generous spread of the fluted sauce. Bake for five minutes under a moderate flame until the sauce becomes golden brown. Serve in a hot dish with the poaching wine poured over.

Fine Soup

"Germiny, Froid et Chaud" of Louis Berthe of Maxim's, Paris: Chop fine a quarter-pound of sorrel and saute gently in an ounce of butter. Add to this two quarts of rich chicken broth and bring the mixture to a boil. Add four egg yolks and remove from fire. Add one-half pint of heavy cream, stirring in slowly. If serving the soup cold, add a small amount of chopped chives.

"Le Souffle d'Orange" of Marcel Grange of Cafe Chambord, New York:

Boil three cups of milk, adding two ounces of butter folded into a teaspoonful of flour, and mix them boiling for half a minute. Remove from the fire and fold in 12 egg yolks and the grated skin of two California oranges. Add three ounces of cointreau and mix slowly with a wooden spoon. Then fold in the white of six eggs, beaten until stiff.

RELEASED ON CHARGE

St. Thomas, May 9. (CP)—Held since Sunday as police investigated circumstances surrounding the death of Tyrell Banks, 37-year-old local vagrant, William Ford, was released Tuesday as a vagrancy charge was withdrawn at the request of Crown Attorney E. F. S. Sanders.

Banks was found dead at the entrance to a kiln at the plant of Canada Vitrified Products Ltd, Sunday morning.

An inquest into Banks' death is expected to be held early next week.

INCREASED ASSISTANCE

Toronto, May 9. (CP)—Increased Ontario government assistance to beef breeders was announced Tuesday by Agriculture Minister Kennedy.

Individual breeders now will be able to buy bulls at special prices with the livestock branch of the Department of Agriculture paying 20 per cent to a maximum of $75.

Bulls covered by the premium will be all animals of top quality approved by the Agriculture department.

CHILEAN SOLDIERS TRAIN TO BE MECHANICAL EXPERTS

In a plan to mechanize her agriculture and increase crop yields, Chile is training soldiers in the operation, maintenance and use of modern North American farm machinery. More than 300 farmers-in-uniform are now being schooled in nine army tractor courses in different parts of Chile. Here the Chilean soldier-farmers manning farm machines move along on a field operation which will yield a harvest of rye in record time. Heirs Refuse Title, Too Costly They Say

London. (Reuters) — A 600-year-old English title is going a-begging.

The title of Baron Cobham of England was left vacant in February when the 13th holder died in Australia.

There are four co-heirs. Two of them are women because this title, unlike most British peerages, can be inherited by a woman.

The two male heirs already have titles. They say they don't want any more.

One of them, Lord Strabolgi (a former Labor member of parliament) turned it down without any further reason.

The other Lord Burgh, said he couldn't afford it. Lord Burgh's father had to claim his own title from the House of Lords because it had lapsed for 300 years.

"Judging by what it cost my father to dig the Burgh title out of abeyance, I could not afford to take on the Cobham title also, Lord Burgh said.

The two sisters of the late Baron Cobham must now decide whether they want the title and, if so, which one will take it.

They are Hon. Mrs. Mary Isabel Bazley-White and Hon. Mrs Muriel Helen Thornely. They have not yet made up their mind:

If they too decide that they do not want to become Lady Cobham, a "commoner" (a man without a title) may decide to enter the lists and claim it.

He is 26-year-old London television engineer Patrick Alexander, son of the late Lord Cobham and his first wife. He was born in Australia in 1923 when Lord and Lady Cobham were living there as Mr. and Mrs. Algxander —the Cobham's family name.

The Cobham peerage was created in 1312.

RED ROSE COFFEE GOOD TASTE!

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, saying to pop, I'd really like to go downstairs tomorrow, William.

Well, you've got 36 hours to get started, pop said, and ma said, the point is, the weather man says it's going to be windy tomorrow with occasional drizzles, and if there's anything I hate more than occasional drizzles, it's a steady wind. What do you think William? she said.

I think the weather man may know something, pop said. He may have special sources of information, he said, and ma said, if I really thought he was rite, the sensible thing would be to go downstrown today instead, but he's so often wrong.

That's a fact, pop said, There's nothing less sure than the weather, so naturally the weather man must be a rather unreliable chap himself. Being rite is like a line of bizness, he said, and ma said, But then of course it's also true that when he does happen to know what he's talking about, it's almost sure to be at the very most inconvenient time.

I've noticed that, pop said. One times the paper said rain, by golliss it pored that nite, and I had left my oldest felt hat out on the front porch, the only hat I was really fond of. It couldn't of been more inconvenient, he said, and ma said, It does seem beautiful out today, and I suppose a herd in the hand ought to be taken advantage of and yet tomorrow really would suit me mutch better. So what do you think, William? she said.

If you've made up your mind to stay home today, I think I'd stay home, my dear, pop said, and ma said, I think that's very wise. Why should we be slaves to the weather man?

Premier Frost Says Ontario Ready to Join

Toronto, May 9. (CP)—Premier Frost said Tuesday night that, if the Canadian government decides to proceed on its own with the St. Lawrence Seaway, Ontario is prepared to enter into a joint scheme with New York State to develop the river's power.

In an address prepared for delivery Tuesday night to the Young Progressive Conservative Association, he said:

"Nothing would appear to be gained by further delay. A division of the costs as between the canal portion of the scheme and the power portion can be arrived at and this would then be subject to adjustment between the Canadian government and the governments of Ontario and New York.

"The Ontario Hydro Commission has all the basic plans for the power end of this scheme already prepared and there need be no delay from an engineering viewpoint."
